

Kim, Parents Have Personal Stake in Viet Nam Revolt

Appleton Teacher Knows Leaders; Sister, Brother Still in Country

BY JEAN OTTO Post-Crescent Women's Editor "We are very happy about the coup, of course," Kim Hoang Miller and her parents stated this week. Reading at the Miller home, 1200 W. Brewster St., is understandably concentrated on news coming out of Viet Nam, where Mr. and Mrs. Hoang Van Ngoc lived until about five years ago, and which was home to Mrs. Miller until 1955. Small, gentle and genteel, Mr. and Mrs. Ngoc are deeply concerned about their son, daughter and son-in-law in Viet Nam, and search for their names in the news. Both men are in the army.

Kim's brother is a pharmacist, and not involved with troops. Her brother-in-law, Tran Van Minh, is a major general, often called "little Minh" on television. He and the leader of the coup, Major Gen. Doug Van Minh, known as "Big Minh" have worked closely for many years, and the family is certain their son-in-law and brother was involved in the change of government.

Loyalty Questioned Mrs. Miller told something of the role the two men have played in Viet Nam in recent years. When two religious group, the Cao-Dai and the Hoa-Hao, and warlords called Binh-Xuyen, rose against the Diem regime in its early years, the two Minhs led the successful attack against them. In spite of their victory for Diem, he already suspected their loyalty, and in the tradition of the French Bourbon kings, removed them from command of their troops, took them from the field and gave them jobs in the palace where they

Democrats Rap State Bar's Poll On Rabinovitz

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Wisconsin Democratic Party Administrative Committee condemned Saturday the State Bar of Wisconsin's poll on David Rabinovitz, Sheboygan attorney, as a "kangaroo court method."

The committee approved a resolution by Assemblyman Frank Nikolay (D-Abbotsford), which called on the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee to disregard the bar's poll and confirm Rabinovitz as U.S. District Judge for Western Wisconsin.

The poll showed that 2,040 attorneys said Rabinovitz, Democratic National Committeeman, was not qualified for the post and 799 said he should get it.

The committee said that the margin in the poll represented about the same margin of Republicans and Democrats who are members of the bar.

Texas Democrat Has Slim Lead

DALLAS (AP) — A political friend of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson took a narrow and inconclusive lead Saturday night over a Republican in a 10th Congressional District special election.

J. J. Pickle, active in Johnson's campaigns, had 5,231 votes to 5,090 for Republican Jim Dobbs in early returns. Jack Ritter, another Democrat, trailed with 4,720.

The big surprise to Texas leaders was a strong trend against repeal of the poll tax.

Still inconclusive returns showed the poll tax repeal measure lagging 2-1 although supported by most of the state's political leaders.

Gronouski and 900 at Dinner For Reynolds

Postmaster General Lauds Governor for Political Risks

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Postmaster General John A. Gronouski and an overflow crowd of about 900 paid tribute Saturday night to Gov. John W. Reynolds at a $50 a plate testimonial dinner.

Gronouski, a former Wisconsin Tax Commissioner and long a friend of the governor, praised Reynolds for taking "calculated political risks over and over again to do what was right for Wisconsin — regardless of what it means to his political future."

"Governor Reynolds," he said, "has put his career on the line time after time when he knew a job had to be done for the people of Wisconsin and nobody else was going to do it. . . he never hesitated a moment in choosing the welfare of all the people and the record is replete with examples."

The postmaster general said President Kennedy had made Wisconsin "his adopted home," which was amply demonstrated by his continuing choices of Wisconsin Democrats for federal jobs and his frequent efforts for

Gold Coin Hoard Found in Hungary

In the news from around the world:

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — An old Hungarian peasant woman has uncovered 1,300 gold coins believed to have been ransom money paid 1,400 years ago to Attila the Hun by Roman emperors to keep his hordes from devastating the part of the Roman empire that is now Hungary. The Budapest newspaper Esi Hirlap says.

It said the coins were produced in the mint of Constantinople and were called "solidus."

The paper said they still bear clear impressions of Emperors Theodosius III and Valentinian III and the symbols of ancient Rome.

And, when the Internal Revenue

Service at first did not issue the ruling asked of it, Saturday he interceded with the Treasury Department to get a bill "to jog them a little."

The ruling finally was issued. The stock owned by Brnes is now worth about $27,000.

Robert G. Baker, who resigned as secretary to the Senate's Democrats under fire, is reported to have used stock in the company — the Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corp. (MGIC) of Milwaukee — as a stepping stone to his million-dollar fortune.

The Senate Rules Committee is now investigating to determine if Baker used his official position to advance his personal business ventures.

The ruling MGIC sought and eventually obtained permitted the firm to defer corporation income tax payments so it could place enough funds in reserve to meet the requirements of Wisconsin law.

Sharp Words Exchanged Debate Growing Over Church's Government

125 Safe as Plane Loses Jet Engine

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A jet engine ripped off an Eastern Airlines jetliner on a flight with 125 persons aboard Saturday and the DC8 plane made an emergency landing at an Air Force base here.

About 20 persons were taken to the Barksdale Air Force Base hospital for examination.

Mrs. Dorothy Griffith of Springfield, Pa., received a back injury. She was walking in the plane about the time the engine fell.

Most of the others were treated for bruises and shock.

The jet was en route from New York to Mexico City. It had taken off from a fueling stop at Houston, Tex., when it lost one of its four jet engines.

Capt. Mel H. French of Huntington Station, Long Island, N.Y., the flight captain, said the big jet ran into severe turbulence 45 miles south of Houston.

Reports were that a downdraft had torn off the number three engine, or the inside starboard engine.

French said he decided to turn back and head for Barksdale, about 200 miles northeast of Houston, because of crash equipment available here.

3 Nations Agree To Summit Talks

CAIRO (AP) — The newspaper Al-Ahram said Saturday that Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie, Yugoslav President Tito and U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser have agreed upon a summit meeting for non-aligned countries.

The paper said the meeting, for which no date was given, would be preceded by a foreign ministers' session to prepare an agenda and decide on countries to be invited.

African Nations Will Try to End Dispute

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — African N. Y. delegates said Saturday they have been notified the foreign ministers of 32 African nations will meet in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Nov. 15. They will try to solve the border dispute between Morocco and Algeria.

Delegates said the ministers plan to create a commission of arbitration, conciliation and mediation.

Man Quizzed In Slaying of Montana Girl

HARDIN, Mont. (AP) — Big Horn County authorities said Saturday night they are questioning a young man in the sex-slaying of an 8-year-old blonde, blue-eyed girl.

Authorities said Robert H. Wilson, county attorney, took the man to Billings for questioning. Apparently, Wilson decided to conduct the questioning in Billings because of high local feeling. Billings is 50 miles west of Hardin, a small southeastern Montana ranching and farming center.

The slain girl, Signe Stormy Timberman, was abducted from her home late Friday.

Her body, stabbed seven times in the chest and head, was found face down in a roadside ditch Friday after she had been missing for four hours from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Timberman.

She was the second girl abducted in Hardin in four days. Julie Ann Hagadone, 3, was missing from her home 17 hours until she was found crying in a grain field six miles from Hardin Tuesday.

The body of the Timberman girl was found about three miles from town.

Neither child was raped.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The example of the Roman Catholic Cumenical Council is "putting very uncomfortable pressure" on Protestant churches "to risk similar experiments in self-examination and reform," says an American Protestant theologian.

Dr. Albert C. Outler, a professor of theology at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., and an official observer at the Roman Catholic conclave, said Friday night it was significant that the drive for ecclesiastical reform was coming from a church Protestants had once thought of as "unreformed and irreformable."

Non-Catholic observers have been especially impressed by "your willingness to be observed, to expose yourselves to the inquiring eyes of friendly Protestants," he told Catholic prelates at a reception of the U.S. bishops and English-speaking Protestants.

Maneuverable Rocket Nears Testing Stage

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — includes U.S. hopes of military A rocket engine only four feet tall, but assigned a payload that first flight test in less than a year.

It's part of a rocket named Transtage, so called because it will transfer from orbit to orbit new spacecraft designed to:

1. Inspect and if necessary destroy strange and possibly hostile satellites.
2. Rescue stranded U. S. spacemen, or repair and refuel their vehicles.
3. Carry cameras—possibly even bombs—over enemy territory.
4. Rendezvous with manned orbital stations, shuttling men and supplies between earth and space.

On the success of its new concepts hangs the Apollo moon project. The same engine, only larger, will power the Saturn-boosted service module that carries U.S. astronauts into lunar orbit, dispatches and collects their moon-exploring bug, then shoves them toward home.

Plans call for a 2-million-pound thrust Titan 3 to blast the first Transtage into space from Cape Canaveral, Fla., in August 1964.

16 Tests

Sixteen more Titan 3-Transtage tests will follow, and 10 of them the Transtage is to be topped by an X20. The first X20 flight is set for July 1965. After two tests, the X20s will start carrying a pilot to orbital heights and back to land at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., rocket plane.

Unlike most rocket engines, Transtage engine has but one—the valve which controls the flow of propellants into the burning chamber.

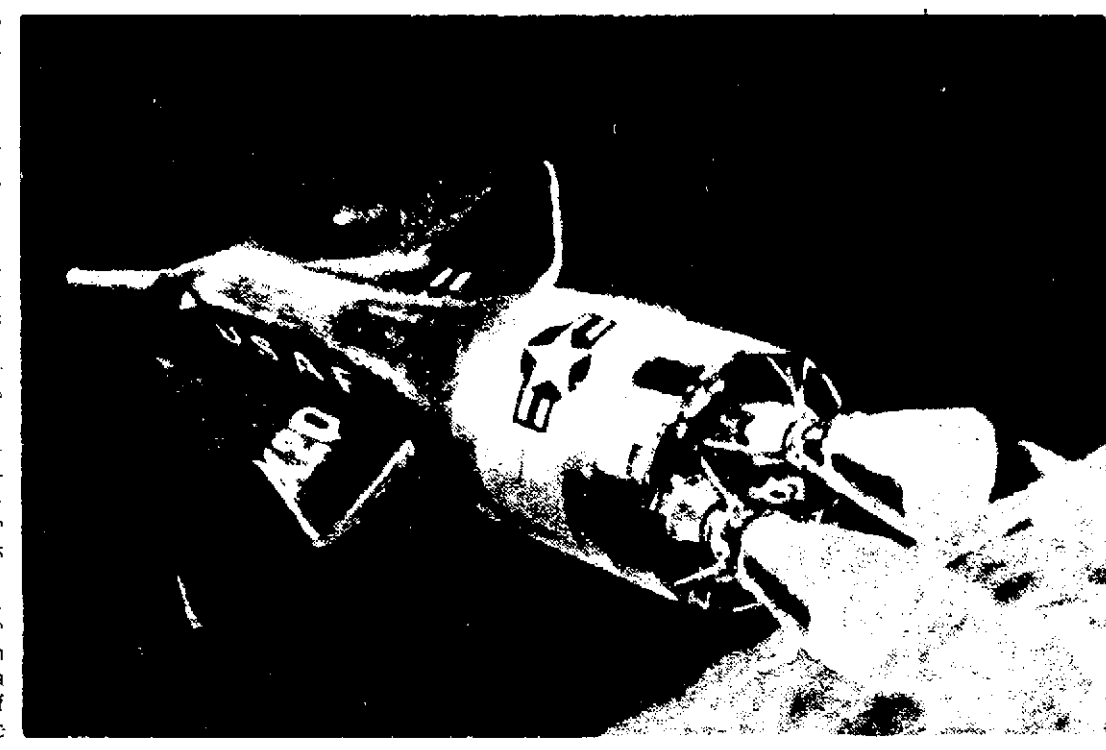

It needs no ignition system, no spark plug or starting cart- ridge, because the propellants are hypergolic—they catch fire when sprayed together into the burning chamber.

Burning stops when the flow of propellants is cut off by the radio-controlled valve, resumes when the valve is opened.

Simplest Engine

D.N. Lonon, Transtage program manager at Aerojet General Corp., where the engine is made, says: "This is probably the simplest rocket engine ever built. In mass production, we expect to retail it for about $35,000. It can be clustered in almost any combination for increased thrust and longer-duration missions, and it can be adapted to different fuels as they are developed."

Lonon says Transtage's 11 tons of fuel makes it possible for a satellite weighing as much as 5,000 pounds to achieve a stationary orbit at a height of 22,000 miles. This is the altitude desired for future communications satellites. At that height they would seem to hover over a selected spot, such as mid-Atlantic, where they could relay messages back and forth between America and Europe.

Powered by a Small Transtage rocket engine, an Air Force X20 Dyna Soar moves through space, in this artist's drawing of future flights. The Transtage, which has been described as "probably the simplest rocket engine ever built," is expected to give a maneuverability not now possible to military and non-military spacecraft. Gray Ladies Colored With Satisfaction

Red Cross Volunteers Bring Renewal Of Hope to Aged, Ill and Retarded

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

How does one count accomplishments? Measure a smile? Place a value on intangibles?

How is it that a woman in gray can radiate the color of friendship? Bring warmth to a cold hospital room? Make the old and forgotten feel loved and wanted? And how could so vital a task as this be accomplished by women drolly called "Gray Ladies"?

Actually, the women wear their gray with pride, like a mantle that hides the vibrancy and warmth of the hope they renew in those they help.

The only dull aspect of the Red Cross Gray Ladies is the color of their uniforms. The 44 women who work regularly in Outagamie County could wear black and still be the brightest objects in the lives of the aged, the ill, crippled and retarded children, the lonely and the unwanted. Their smiles and personalities outdo sunshine in lighting the lives of patients at Riverview Sanatorium, the Outagamie County Golden Age home, and youngsters at Morgan School.

Wonder at Small Number

The smiles that light the faces of the Gray Ladies are only reflections of the faces of those they serve. Obviously, their look is one of satisfaction, not with self, but with being useful. With so much to be done, the women find it hard to understand why more have not volunteered for the rewards of the program.

Considering it quite coldly, it would seem that the Gray Ladies are givers only. They serve without pay, buy their own uniforms and provide their own transportation. They give 80 hours a year to receive the bar pin for their first year's service.

Not one of them will admit they give more than they get.

Ask the Gray Lady who visits the Outagamie County Hospital Golden Age Home. For weeks she's been listening to the bitterness expressed by a white-haired man confined to a wheel chair. He's unhappy, complaining, surly, and she serves as an outlet for all his frustration and anger at life. She listens with concern, letting him know she cares. One day the gentleman smiles. And she is the one rewarded.

At Riverview Sanatorium an old lady has lost interest in herself and in living. She doesn't care how she looks; won't speak. She waits only to die. A Gray Lady comes along, armed with a hair brush, a permanent and conversation that refuses to be ignored. Now, when the weather is mild, the stylishly coiffed old lady puts on a fresh dress and takes to the porch, reminiscing about her family and days gone by.

At Morgan School learning to read presents a different problem than in the ordinary classroom. Children labor long and hard over a single word, sometimes deciding that the result is not worth the effort. Gray Ladies serving as Staff Aide Librarians often provide the stimulus that keeps these youngsters at their task, by reading stories and exposing them to a world they can expect to find for themselves in books.

Whatever the task, the Gray Ladies are always on the receiving end of the relationship.

Golden Agers at the Outagamie County Hospital often welcome the kibitzing of Gray Ladies who supply a 'bearing tip'. Other times, the oldsters tell them to be on their merry way, insisting on 'do it yourself' privileges. The banter of easy friendship affords the two groups an informal relationship, with help easily requested when needed, or dispensed with if so desired. Above, E. F. Hoffman and Waldemar Preiser get some help from Mrs. Donald Graygaard and Mrs. R. W. Getschow, as Albert Spler waits to challenge the winner.

The Staff Aide program was started at Morgan School in 1958 and Mrs. Lester Chudacoff, Mrs. B. L. Browning and Mrs. Wesley Weinkauff have been with it since its inception. They and 11 other women contribute 145 hours a month, given Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons helping children learn to read by letting them practice over and over the words that give them trouble. They also serve as part of the instructional team, relieving teachers of routine duties and releasing them to spend their time actually teaching. Mrs. Don Strutz is chairman of the volunteers at Morgan.

The Gray Ladies program was started at the Outagamie County Hospital in 1957. Staying with the work since it began have been Mrs. Melvern Hemmen, Mrs. M. J. Fose, Mrs. E. A. Dettman, Mrs. Leigh Wolfe; Mrs. Raymond LeVee, present chairman, Mrs. Horace Chaney and Mrs. Clyde Covert. Twenty Gray Ladies are active in the program, spending three afternoons at the hospital each week. Their contribution totals 165 hours a month, hardly an adequate measure of the work accomplished. One night a week the Gray Ladies' efforts are augmented by 10 to 14 Lawrence College Students, many studying sociology or psychology, who sponsor dances and spend their time chatting with patients.

Stay With Program

Three afternoons a week are spent by Gray Ladies who devote their attention to the patients of Riverview Sanatorium and General Hospital. Mrs. H. I. Heule is chairman of this group, organized in 1958. She and Mrs. Wenzel Conrad, Mrs. Hilery Feldkamp, Mrs. R. O. Johns, Mrs. M. J. Verkuilen and Mrs. Louis Lesselyoung have been with it since it started.

Ten Gray Ladies active at Riverview are helped during the summer by 17 Junior Red Cross Girls, known as Candy Strippers, who give 100 hours of their vacation time each month.

At the City Home four Gray Ladies, Mrs. Ralph Landis, Mrs. Henry Haen, Mrs. Layton Meisle and Mrs. H. L. Playman carry on a program that is about to be reactivated. One day a week they visit, write letters for hands grown stiff with arthritis and provide music therapy. More women are needed to help with plans for a broader scope of service.

Hoping that others with sympathy and understanding will join their cause, the Gray Ladies' feelings is summed up by Mrs. LeVee.

"We know we are needed."

The women who don gray uniforms each week to work for the aged find themselves doing a variety of services.

Those who work at Riverview Sanatorium and General Hospital report 3 mornings a week, keeping the golden agers looking youthful by providing personal grooming care, helping with speech therapy and sewing and patching for the handicapped. Above, Mrs. L. N. Schommer, Little Chute, writes a letter for Mrs. E. H. Rossmessl, Appleton, while Mrs. Matt Verkuilen, Kimberly, combs the hair of Mrs. Thomas Long, Appleton. At left, Mrs. Wesley Weinkauff operates a reader for youngsters at Morgan School. The Morgan Staff Aides help with speech therapy, read to the children, help maintain the school library and assist teachers with routine tasks. At right, Mrs. Raymond LeVee helps Mrs. Sarah Gommens and Mrs. M. A. Gloudemans ready the Outagamie County Hospital for the recent Halloween party.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith is reflecting on the possibility of entering some primaries next year. The Maine Republican wishes to give Republicans a 'third choice' in the selection of a presidential candidate. In case of a deadlock between New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Sen. Barry Goldwater, she says she might be available for the nomination. (AP Wirephoto)

"When somebody needs me I don't look at the clock."

Because of this dedication to students, faculty, community and the University of Wisconsin Center system, Miss Lila Locksmith, 232 N. State St., has received this week's orchid citation as an outstanding Fox Cities woman.

Miss Locksmith feels one of the most vital functions in her role as advisor to students at the University of Wisconsin Fox Valley Center, Menasha, is to earn the trust of the student, but more important, to deserve that trust. A warm smile and an open door always greet students needing her assistance in obtaining scholarships and loans to help continue their education. During an average day three to four students will come to her for help. They are certain she will always be available to aid them in any problems they wish to discuss — whether personal, financial or academic. Miss Locksmith feels it her responsibility to draw out students and help develop other facets of their personalities. She asserts extra curricular activities are extremely valuable in this respect.

learned something from every one of them. Because of that privilege, I feel indebted to give the very best I have."

When she began her career scholarships were scarce. She remembers especially one young man who came to her with $87 in his pocket. His father had recently passed away, but he was determined to continue his education. His tuition amounted to $80 at that time and the rest he spent on books and transportation. After nine years he returned to Miss Locksmith with a law degree and a teaching position in an Ivy League University. Often he would stay out a semester to work, but always went back. Miss Locksmith's encouragement and support in the beginning possibly made the difference for him.

One of Miss Locksmith's greatest joys has been the ability to introduce people to foreign languages. She was a triple language major at Lawrence College (Spanish, French and German) and the first Spanish teacher in the Appleton High School. She previously was secretary to the treasurer of the Institute of Paper Chemistry and Spanish teacher at Lawrence College.

She also taught French and Spanish at the Appleton, Neenah

When Miss Locksmith began her work with the Center in 1946, a great number of students were World War II veterans. The Center, set up in the Menasha Vocational School, was established to accommodate the overflow from the Madison campus. Because the group was so small at that time, it was easy to give each student the personal attention she believes they desperately need.

Through her position as assistant professor of Spanish and advisor, she reaches her students from "both sides of the desk." As a teacher she watches over their academic difficulties, but as an advisor she works in terms of individual needs, rights and responsibilities. Miss Locksmith speaks warmly, "I am eternally grateful to the parents of our students for giving me the privilege to teach their sons and daughters. I have

Girl's First Big Buy Is Fall Coat

BY JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP)—During high school and college girls begin to learn about big fashion investments, for the choice of a winter coat is entirely theirs, without parental influence.

It's either their own hard-earned money they're spending, or an allowance with frustrating limitations, and they have to play it close to the line.

They learn to take stock of their wardrobes, and then search for outerwear investment with the largest fashion dividends.

Desire Good Lines

One thing they learn to avoid is common stock. Who wants to look like the girl next door? Whatever its price, a good coat ought to have chic, good lines, and fine construction. In other words it should be strictly blue chip.

Preferred stock among the wise investors this fall are coats that fake out the skins of wildcats, as well as imitation leathers and suedes with not-really-snakeskin trim.

Also seeing plenty of action on the trading board are turn-coats. They have quiet, well behaved color that gets along with everything on one side, and on the other a lively blaid guaranteed to cheer up a drab day.

Water Repellent Coats Favorites

Among the glamor stocks are shaggy, deep-pile coats, in white, bright hues, and pastels, too.

But the very shrewd investors are not overlooking the utilities — coats that are water repellent, easily cleaned, and warm without being tiringly heavy.

Girls research carefully before they buy. Is the hood a permanent fixture? Or does it zip off? Is the collar tall enough to ward off chill winds?

If it is a slim line, is it nevertheless ample enough to top bulky woollens likely to be worn beneath it without being uncomfortable? If it is a cape-style, are the arm slots right, are there extra buttons?

More Than One Coat

These days a girl finds that one big coat investment is not enough. She needs casual or sportive styles for school and daytime wear, but she requires elegant simplicity for dressy occasions.

Still, usually when she discusses the matter with her banker, he (Dad) is so impressed with his daughter's fashion business acumen he is not the least bearish about floating a loan for the second investment.

All in all, the market experience is invaluable training, excellent background for a girl who is working her way up to mink.

The New Circular Towers rising across the nation will present a change in ideas of arrangement and room design. Wide window areas and balconies will provide entry to the outdoors even in the midst of a busy city. In the room above, a conversation grouping faces the balcony and view of Lake Michigan. The apartment is on the 57th floor of the new 60-story Marina City twin towers in Chicago.

Designing Woman Sky High Rooms Have New Shapes

Now that buildings in the round are about to spring up all over the country, some may tackle wedge-type room arrangements sooner than we think. But plotting for off-kilter walls isn't difficult, according to Chicagoans now moving into the spectacular new 60-story Marina City twin towers. And the living room photographed reports how easy it is to enshrine a new electronic organ, exactly where it's most enjoyed by a comfortable audience.

The living room with its balcony is petal shaped. Each circular tower has a center core for elevators and corridors, and apartments radiate from it. This one, with two bedrooms, has two bathrooms and two dressing rooms as well as the living room, adjoining dining area and kitchen. It has two and one-half balconies, which are as important to living high in the sky as the rooms on the inner side of the glass walls. For this companionable arrangement, a sofa faces the balcony and the near view of skyscrapers and Lake Michigan, which can also be seen from chairs which align with the non-parallel walls.

The handsomely ebony-finished organ is self-contained and leaves plenty of wall beyond it for a long, low cabinet. Opposite, out of view, are a tall, intricately inlaid Chinese cabinet in black lacquer, tables and additional chairs set to face the organ. Pale gold carpet leads into a medley of yellow-orange, orange and orange-red for the furniture grouped around the large marble-topped coffee table. These colors are as striking against skyline seen from the 57th floor as they are against the white walls.

Green Plants Make Pretty Centerpieces

A charming Thanksgiving centerpiece can be arranged with a combination of variegated foliage plants in a large clay pot, with matching saucer. Flowering maple and Boston "yellow daisy" chrysanthemus blend nicely in the same container. The Maranta, or prayer plant, and ferns, which like the same soil, make another attractive clay-potted combination.

Coup Seen as Opportunity to Renew Vietnamese Freedom

Kim Hoang Miller, a petite and pretty French teacher and homemaker, has been in the United States since 1955. During that time she has acquired some objectivity about both her native land Viet Nam and her adopted United States. She can see problems and viewpoints of each with a perspective not possible to one who knows only one side.

The reaction to the military coup in Viet Nam has been heightened by the presence of Mrs. Miller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hoang Van Ngoc, who have been visiting since early June. The couple, in their 60s, now reside in France. Mr. Van Ngoc, a small and quiet man who speaks Vietnamese and French is an electrical engineer who had retired before Diem came to power in 55. Under the French, he was an advisor in bridge construction and was asked to come into Diem's army in a similar capacity. He did so and continued to work until divergent political views forced him to leave. Finding health as reason for retirement, he and his wife went to France.

Filed to Laos

Also living in Paris is Mrs. Miller's uncle, a former newspaperman in Viet Nam. He was one of those who suffered at the suppression of news censored by Diem and warned that he was about to be arrested, was smuggled by friends into Laos.

Mrs. Miller has been teaching French in the Appleton Public School system since she and her husband, Gordon, a pharmacist, finished school at the University of Wisconsin. Kim has kept in touch with Vietnamese in Chicago and Milwaukee, and all have been impatient for the coup that would remove Diem and his family from power.

Kim's sister, married to Major Gen. Tran Van Minh, has been writing letters in code for some time attempting to tell how bad the situation in Viet Nam had become.

Rumors of Funds

Mrs. Miller and her parents express regret at the death of President Diem and his brother, husband of the bitter Mme. Nhu. At the same time, they say that if the rumors of millions of dollars stowed by her in Swiss banks are true, the money is undoubtedly part of American aid, or Vietnamese gold reserves. Mrs. Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Van Ngoc ponder the good the money might do for food and housing for the people of Viet Nam.

Through all of the events of the past week, Mrs. Miller has been sharply aware of the interest shown by her students at Appleton High School. Every day they ask questions and seek reasons for the happenings in her native country.

Supervised Aid

Mr. Van Ngoc believes that if and when the U.S. resumes aid to Viet Nam without which it will cease to exist, the funds should be supervised to the extent of assuring they are used for their intended purpose. It is very easy for leaders receiving such aid, Mrs. Miller says, to look upon the U.S. as an endless source of money with nothing sacrificed here to provide it. Some supervision is necessary to prevent the money being channeled into private hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Ngoc talk of going home, of seeing their son and daughter, and the friends they left behind. They heartily disagree with Congressman Clement Zablocki's statements that without Diem Viet Nam will be chaos, yet they wonder if merely winning battles assures democracy.

The people of Viet Nam, they say, must be given security, the chance to learn fully

'Saint Nicholas' Set As Theme for Style Show for Children

Plans for a children's style show have been announced by the Chalice Circle of the King's Daughters. Adopting a "Saint Nicholas" theme, members have scheduled the event for Nov. 30 at Xavier Commons. The 2:30 p.m. style show and tea will feature fashions for boys and girls through the courtesy of Shirley's Children's Apparel and the W. A. Close Mens and Boys' Shop.

Mrs. Clifford Vincent is chairman of the program committee, assisted by Mrs. Vincent K. Derscheid, co-chairman. Mrs. Daniel Folsom will be commentator, Mrs. Harold Donnell, decorations chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Theis, refreshments, Mrs. James Veum, tickets, Mrs. Clyde Chumbley, models, Mrs. Eugene Roney, toys, Mrs. William Dafoe, hostesses and Mrs. C. C. Schroeder, publicity.

Proceeds from the project will help support the Circle's Children's Benefit Fund, providing aid to the school milk program for needy school children, and financing gifts and services to the pediatric wards of Appleton Memorial and St. Elizabeth Hospitals.

Discretion Needed With Fertilizer

Dear Kansas City: You are suggesting that certain physicians are getting a rake-off from the pharmacies. This is a highly unethical practice and if you can prove it, the doctor should be reported to the County Medical Society.

It is not uncommon for a physician to express preference for a particular pharmacy, but such a suggestion does not mean that the doctor is getting a cut but rather that he has confidence in the pharmacy. So don't jump to unfair conclusions.

One method of overcoming the problem of too heavy a hand with the water is to leave the plant in its original clay pot which drains off both excess water and harmful salt accumulations through porous pot walls.

For maintenance some plants need only be fertilized twice a year or so. Foliage plants grown in watertight containers, such as plastic pots, may actually be damaged by accumulation of salts that develop from too frequent fertilizing.

Kim Miller and H. H. Helble have kept in touch on changing events in Viet Nam this week. The Helbles' son, John, is chief consul at Hue, where President Diem's brother, Ngo Dinh Can, ruler of the central province, sought refuge Wednesday. John Helble, his wife Joan and son, Stuart, recently returned to Hue from their annual two-week leave in the Philippines. Hue was the site of several Buddhist suicides by fire and the location of a mass grave, discovered at Can's mansion. Since the Helbles have been in Viet Nam many of their friends and acquaintances have "mysteriously" disappeared.

Your Problems

Use Head Rather Than Just Heart When Helping Minister

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We live in a town which can barely support a small church. The minister, his wife and three young children came here (from an even smaller town) three months ago. They are really up against it financially. Their clothes are so shabby it is embarrassing. We made a welcome call on the family recently and we were shocked to see how little furniture they had in the house.

Landers

Several of us want to form a Minister's Aid Club, the purpose of which would be to provide the minister's family with used clothing, furniture, appliances and so on. Personally, I can't imagine anyone being opposed to the idea, but strangely enough it has caused quite a controversy. We want your opinion. — W. Z. X.

Dear W. Z. X.: I hate to throw cold water on an idea which obviously is motivated by kindness. But I think it's a poor one.

Your minister merits the dignity of a living wage — not hand-me-down clothing and used furniture. A clergyman shouldn't be treated as a charity case.

If you women are eager to do something for your minister, I recommend an annual fund-raising event — the proceeds of which could be presented as a cash gift to supplement his inadequate salary.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I tell you my side of the "Pregnant Bride" story? Perhaps my letter will silence people like Mrs. Made A Fool Of."

ZUELKE BUILDING

A diamond may be a girl's best friend, but the stuff her dreams are made of is mink! Surprisingly enough, her passion for pelts is relatively new. Though furs have been clothing since the Stone Age, and luxury fur a status symbol since before 3500 B.C., it took Christopher Columbus, the American Indian, steam heat and the automobile to put mink on milady's "most wanted" list.

In the good old days it was he who wore the pants who got to wear the mink too. Chieftains have been found buried with their precious robes—but the chief's lady seemingly didn't have a mink to her monicker. Whether this is because she stayed in the cave where it was warm, or because luxury furs were rare and ladies underprivileged, no one knows.

Discrimination!
If the Cave Lady didn't fare too well, her Medieval cousin didn't fare much better. Furs were considered such a luxury then that the church wouldn't let monks wear any, and monarchs passed "sumptuary laws"—laws governing extravagance—which forbade luxury furs to any but the nobility. In some countries "sumptuary laws" persisted until our own century.

During the Renaissance ladies wore silks and satins, but it was still the male who wore the mink. Henry VIII, of the six wives, liked fur on his coat. Charles I favored capes lined with fur, and France's Louis XIV, the Sun King, in whose reign Paris first became a fashion center, liked fur on floor length cloaks. Fur was the mark of royalty, and you could tell a man's position in life by the number and quality of the furs he owned.

For The Masses
The "beaver" which eventually became almost synonymous with "hat" was the only skin other than his hide that the commoner was allowed to wear.

It was Christopher Columbus' discovery of the New World, and the American Indian's talent as a hunter that developed the female taste for mink—and the discovery of steam heat and the motor car that made the girls of the New World their number one consumer.

In the early days of the colony, furs were the prize export—and the lure that led the earliest explorers to follow the Indians in their retreat Westward. As more and more furs found their way to Europe they became an increasingly important fashion item, until finally it occurred to the girls that it was time to end the male monopoly.

They did it with a bang: In the middle of the 19th century, fur appeared as trim on everything, as hats, as muffs, as linings for warm capes. When steam heat allowed women to exchange heavy indoor clothing for gossamer garments, and when the drafty motorcar became fashionable, the need for a truly warm outdoor coat became imperative—and fur the high fashion item it is today.

Just why minks occupy the position they do, no two fashion authorities agree: the furs' beauty, its unusual durability, its rarity, the variety of styles made possible by the suppleness of mink, the many natural colors to complement every lady's coloring; each play their part. In the early years of this century, the height of elegance was a full length coat of wild mink.

With the introduction of mink ranches in 1920 both here and in Canada, and the introduction of the rare mutation mink colors, the wild mink has lost some of its prestige to its natural, but tamed and color-conscious ranch cousin.

Colors Changed

About 75 per cent of today's mink crop is ranch grown. The first ranchers started with the standard colors available in wild mink, but over the years mutations have been first located then induced until today's mink comes in shades from dark brown through blue to pure white.

Producing a fine mutation mink is a long, drawn out process. The mink, who shed all their fur in the early fall, and have grown a new "prime" coat by late November or early December, have just one litter a year of three or four "kits". It takes about 100 lbs. of fish, packing house products, meat, cereals, and dairy products to produce a single pelt!

It is an intricate process, too. Some 50 genetic factors can influence a mink's color, and the mutations are encouraged by a special, exacting system of cross-breeding.

Few new colors are expected since reds, greens, yellows are known not to occur in furred animals. Some new delicate shades of greys, browns and blues undoubtedly will eventually be produced for pelting.

To answer some questions commonly asked by lady dreamers about mink: ranch-

Pale Beige Is the Mutation Color of this mink jacket designed by Dior, a hip-length fashion typical of the great French fashion house. Styled with a tiny mandarin collar, the jacket detail has mink worked horizontally, with pelts gradually narrowing from shoulder line to hem.

bred mink is "natural" mink, — at which point remodeling and will last as long as the will prolong its life. Ranch-bred furs usually are other variety — about 10 years

U. S. Wants Anti-Pollution Step at Mills

Federal Official Says Action Needed In Menominee Basin

MENOMINEE, Mich. (AP) — The chairman of a Federal-State conference on pollution in the Menominee River basin has recommended that remedial action be taken at Niagara and Marinette, Wis., and Norway and Menominee, Mich.

Suggestions by the chairman, Murray Stein, could result in pollution abatement orders by the secretary of health, education and welfare.

Stein proposed that steps be taken by the Kimberly Clark Corp. at Niagara to abate pollution by wood chips and fibers and by the city of Niagara to eliminate pollution by effluent from the Niagara sewage treatment plant as already ordered by state pollution authorities. He indicated the steps to abate pollution by untreated sewage at Norway should be accelerated.

The chairman also proposed measures to abate pollution by the Scott mills at Marinette and Menominee. The company's control program was put on the record by T. E. Wisniewski, director of the Wisconsin Water Pollution Committee. Stein commended the city of Marinette on its progress toward abating pollution. The American Can Company's pollution abatement efforts at its Marathon division mill also were outlined.

Beef Cattle Will be Issue In Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP)—A major farm issue in next year's presidential campaign doubtless will be beef cattle price declines and an increasing volume of beef imports.

Cattle raisers and feeders in all parts of the country have been shouting their complaints over this year's big drop in cattle prices, and what they call the dark prospects for the future.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman ran into this in most of his recent report and review meetings with farmers while seeking their views on future federal farm policies.

Prices of fed cattle — a category that provides the better qualities of beef — have been running from 20 to 25 per cent below a year earlier.

What's responsible for the situation cattlemen find themselves in?

Cattlemen have a ready answer. They contend that increased imports and government feed-grain price policies are largely responsible. Kennedy administration farm officials take a somewhat different view. They say that cattlemen are largely responsible because their increased production too much.

Washington Sees 'Nibbling at Edges' to Affect Support Elements, Tactical Air Units

BY FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next year's military budget will provide for "nibbling around the edges" of huge U.S. forces posted overseas but no significant troop reductions in Western Europe or the Far East, informed sources said Saturday.

These sources told a reporter that whatever reductions are contemplated will involve a further cutback in rear echelon support elements and probably some trimming of tactical air units in Europe.

But they said they expect few, if any, combat ground force cuts abroad at least through the fiscal year which starts next July and runs to mid-1965.

Adequate Funds Expected
The new budget, now in the final stages of preparation, takes into account the costs involved in maintaining forces at planned levels in various places. Speculation about impending big-scale U.S. troop withdrawals, especially from Germany, was stoked by the recent "exercise Big Lift."

This operation saw Air Force transports carry more than 15,000 soldiers of the 2nd Armored Division to West Germany from Ft. Hood, Tex., in less than three days. If it was a trial balloon, it was shot full of holes quickly and the Kennedy administration swiftly recoiled in the line holding it aloft.

Reassure Germans
Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance went to Germany and sought to reassure the Germans.

It was stressed that Big Lift was a demonstration of U.S. ability to reinforce the North Atlantic Treaty Organization promptly in a period of tension, not a forerunner to slithering down the U.S. military presence in West Germany.

The uneasiness in Germany, quieted at least temporarily by the West German military, was the uneasiness in Germany.

Anniversary Of Nazi Terror Noted

DACHAU, Germany (AP) — Solemn memorial services were held throughout Germany for Jewish victims of Crystal Night — the night 25 years ago when Nazi-led mobs roamed German cities burning synagogues, beating Jews and looting Jewish property.

Special services were held Saturday at Dachau and Flossenbürg, in Bavaria, sites of infamous concentration camps.

West German newspapers devoted an entire page in their editions to the anniversary.

The night of Nov. 9, 1938 became known as Crystal Night because of the smashing of windows in Jewish stores.

1st Organized Terror
It was the first organized, large-scale terror against the Jews in Nazi Germany. Thousands of Jews were taken to concentration camps.

Some were released later but others were never seen again. The Nazi government called the attacks on Jews a "spontaneous reaction" to the assassination by a Jewish refugee of Ernst von Rath, a secretary of the German Embassy in Paris.

It was the excuse the Nazis had been waiting for to speed up their program against the Jews. The groundwork had been laid some years before with boycotts of Jewish stores and with the Nuremberg racial laws.

Nixon Keeps in Touch With GOP Leaders

BY JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is re-establishing contacts with Republicans in all sections of the country and urging them to withhold 1964 presidential nomination commitments.

The former vice president, who lost the presidency by a hairline in 1960, is described by associates as spreading the doctrine that it is too early to tell what is going to happen in the nomination scramble.

In his conversations with Republican leaders, Nixon has hewed to the line that he is not a candidate himself and does not foresee any likelihood that he will be injected into the contest.

Cool Toward Candidates
But he has made it clear he is less than enthusiastic about either New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who had formally entered his name, and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who is expected to do so later on.

His theme has been that time may bring forward a candidate more acceptable to middle-of-the-road Republicans and one with a better chance of being elected. Thus far he hasn't mentioned any names.

One party leader familiar with the situation said he credits Nixon with sincerity in his declaration of noncandidacy.

"I think he is trying to preserve his contacts with the party to be in a position where he can have some influence on the kind of platform we adopt and the kind of candidate we nominate," this leader said. "But, like anyone else, if the nomination were offered him he would take it."

Another party leader, who, unlike his colleague, opposes Goldwater, voiced the opinion that so long as Rockefeller stays in the contest it will be difficult to develop any strength for a third runner.

Kaukauna Man Injured As Car Rolls 100 Feet

Conrad Hostettler, 44, 216 W. 10th St., Kaukauna, suffered a broken nose and facial cuts about 10:45 p.m. Saturday when his car overturned on County Trunk Z, about 1 block west of the Kaukauna city limits and about two blocks from his home. Hostettler failed to negotiate a curve in the road. His car jumped a ditch, snapped off a utility pole about five feet from the ground and then rolled about 100 feet.

He was taken to Kaukauna Community Hospital for treatment and was admitted for observation.

Another car overturned at the accident scene shortly after police arrived, but the driver, Herbert C. Buss, 500 Sarah St., Kaukauna, was not injured.

Buss had stopped at the scene and was told to proceed. As he tried to pass, his car became entangled on the guy wire of the utility pole and flipped over.

Funston Hits At Trade With Soviet Union

N. Y. Exchange Head Would Follow Reds' Obstructive Course

BY JOHN O. KOEHLER

BERLIN (AP) — Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said Saturday his latest encounter with Soviet Premier Khrushchev convinced him the United States should not sell wheat or any other goods to the Russians.

"In dealing with the Soviets, we must be as difficult and mean as they are," Funston said in an interview. "We must obstruct them as much as possible and we must not concede anything."

Funston was one of 21 American businessmen who met with Khrushchev in Moscow Wednesday and saw him again Thursday.

Soviets Ignore Facts
"What shocked me most about the meeting was the complete disregard for facts," Funston said. "I went away with a sense of frustration. How do you deal with people who lie to you and to whom facts mean nothing?"

Among other things, Khrushchev told the Americans the U.S. Army convoy blockade on the Berlin autobahn earlier in the week was the fault of the Americans for failing to adhere to "established procedures."

He said the incident almost caused a war. Khrushchev refused to say what he meant by "established procedures" but Funston questioned Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin about it.

"Zorin told me that the trouble occurred because the Americans tried to move a convoy of more than five vehicles over the autobahn to West Berlin," Funston said.

The reason for the holdup, however, was that the Americans refused a Soviet demand to line up the troops on the road to be counted by the Russians.

Funston said he had no doubt the Russians "are out to deny us free access to Berlin."

"The Western powers must now resolve not to give them an inch anywhere. If necessary, we must take the risk of shooting. Let the chips fall where they may. We won't have any incidents if we do this."

Chimpanzees Used in Tests Of Nerve Gas in Warfare

HOLLOMAN AIR FORCE BASE, N.M. (AP) — Holloman's famous chimpanzees, pioneers of the space age, are now being used in nerve gas tests.

Chimpanzees recovered their senses much quicker than the monkeys.

"The idea of the gases is to impair, not destroy," Reynolds said. None of the animals is injected with a lethal dose of the gas.

With the threat of complete destruction in a thermonuclear war, with neither side apt to win, other warfare tactics are being devised.

Nerve gas is one. The theory is that complete immobilization of the enemy, short of death, would give troops the opportunity to take over an area while its residents were in a paralyzed condition and unable to resist — much different than the horrible destructiveness of a hydrogen bomb conflict.

The gases are being developed at the Army's Chemical Center at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. Reynolds said each year about 3,000 chemical agents are checked as possible nerve gases.

"Some of the chimps are highly trained animals," Reynolds said. "Their responses to certain tasks at control panels were quick, alert and correct."

Simplicity Is Keynote

Rockefeller Tries for Grass-Roots Support

BY ROBERT T. GRAY

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's usually elaborate campaign operation on the road has been simplified for his grass-roots appeal to New Hampshire voters.

This development reflects apparent concern that the large corps of aides and advisers that normally accompanies the governor on the campaign trails would be no asset in New Hampshire.

The New York governor is counting on a folksy, handshaking approach in his effort to win support from the state's Republicans, who could decide his political future.

The elaborate campaign operation that Rockefeller brought to New Hampshire in a brief visit last month created an aura of affluence and high-level political organization alien to the small cities and rural areas of the Granite State.

Faces Criticism
The Rockefeller road operation also invited unfavorable comparisons with that of Sen. Barry Goldwater, who holds a long lead in this early stage of the contest for the New Hampshire presidential preference primary. The Arizona senator has not yet declared himself a candidate but is expected to do so.

The relative simplicity of Goldwater's political tours has been noted with increasing frequency in accounts of his activities.

Despite Goldwater's lead, Rockefeller's campaign leaders in New Hampshire insist that he is doing well and that his

Wide Search In Hijacking Of Jewelry

NEW YORK (AP) — A small army of police and federal agents fanned out over a wide area Saturday in search of clues in the hijacking of a gem shipment that might have been the richest haul in the nation's history.

Police estimates of the value of the jewelry and gold bars taken Friday at gunpoint by five obviously well-rehearsed bandits ranged from $1 to $3 million.

One police official said "slightly over half" of the physical bulk of the loot had been recovered in a station wagon used by the AAA Jewelers Service to carry gems to and from merchants in Manhattan.

The recovered loot consisted of eight gold bars weighing 15 pounds apiece and some trinkets of little value. All the jewelry and gold was insured against theft.

Defer Realignment Of State Air Board

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A realignment of power and a possible modification of policy of the five-member State Board of Aeronautics will be deferred until the eligibility of a new nominee to the board chosen by Gov. John W. Reynolds is determined by the state supreme court.

The board after a brief flurry of argument Friday declined to seat William Thomas of Madison, named recently by Gov.

Reynolds and sworn in as a member of the commission to succeed Gordon Leonard of Milwaukee.

The board acted after an opinion from the attorney general's office advising it to maintain its present membership and to defer the seating of Thomas until the court decides whether the governor's appointment of him without benefit of confirmation by the state senate was valid under the law.

Leonard told the board he regards it as his duty to remain on the board until his successor is "qualified," as he understands the meaning of the term. Eligible to Sit

Thomas said he has been advised by counsel that he is eligible to sit as a member of the board, but he left the meeting after Don Olson of Two Rivers, board chairman, said he was compelled to act according to the opinion of the state attorney general.

Thomas' seating would probably reverse the balance of power on the board, which has acted by a three to two vote in many major controversies and policy decisions during the last several years.

Olson was elected board chairman in August, after a board minority had asked for a postponement of the election until Thomas' swearing in. The incident apparently posed the possibility that he may be replaced if Thomas is eventually confirmed or if the supreme court decides that his nomination during a period when the state senate was not in session was valid.

Other members of the board are Don Love of Green Bay, Arlyn West of Plover and Ted Cole of Cashton.

Mayor of Oslo Visits Madison For 3-Day Period

MADISON (AP) — Mayor Rolf Stranger of Oslo, Norway, plunged into a three-day visit to Oslo's sister city Saturday, convinced that Wisconsin has maintained Norwegian traditions "in a brilliant and convincing way."

The mayor and Mrs. Stranger arrived in Madison after a drive from Chicago and were welcomed at a reception by Mayor Henry E. Reynolds.

As he received a key to the city, Stranger said he had looked forward "longingly" to the Wisconsin portion of his trip.

It is Stranger's sixth visit to the United States, but he said "this meeting with the famous Wisconsin state has made me a little nervous, but I am full of expectations."

Stranger attended the Northwestern-Wisconsin football game as a guest of Mayor Reynolds.

His busy schedule in Madison includes dinner parties, a tour of the city, visits to state offices and the University of Wisconsin and a Monday speech to a service clubs luncheon sponsored by the Optimist International.

Stranger will leave Madison Tuesday for a three-day visit to New Orleans.

Lawyers' Wives Arrange Programs for Book Week

"Three Cheers for Books" is the gay slogan that will introduce children to National Book Week today through Saturday. The slogan will be announced in flying balloons and gay posters, set up in children's libraries and grade school libraries throughout the county.

The program will be carried out in cooperation with the Lawyers' Wives of Outagamie County, the Appleton Public Library, St. Francis Library and the Kimberly Library. Special programs are planned at these libraries from 9:30 a.m. to noon Saturday. Elementary school children from areas where lack of space has made the program impossible have been invited to attend any of the book programs specified for their grades. Grades one, two and three will have their events from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. and grades four, five and six, from 11 a.m. to noon.

Dramatic Narrations

Members of Lawyers' Wives will present dramatic narrations of books or excerpts of books, giving the children the pleasure of hearing a story read aloud with the flavor of the author's own words. Each program will feature a classic and a contemporary work, selected by the individual giving the programs.

Mrs. Gerald Jolin will present the younger age group's program at the Appleton Public Library's children's room.

She has chosen Sara Cone Bryant's "Epaminondas and His Auntie" and Sinclair Lewis's "Bongo" for narration. The older group will hear Mrs. Edward Bollenbeck give an interpretation of Kenneth Grahame's "The Wind in the Willows" and will read an excerpt from Marguerite Henry's "Stormy, Misty's Foal".

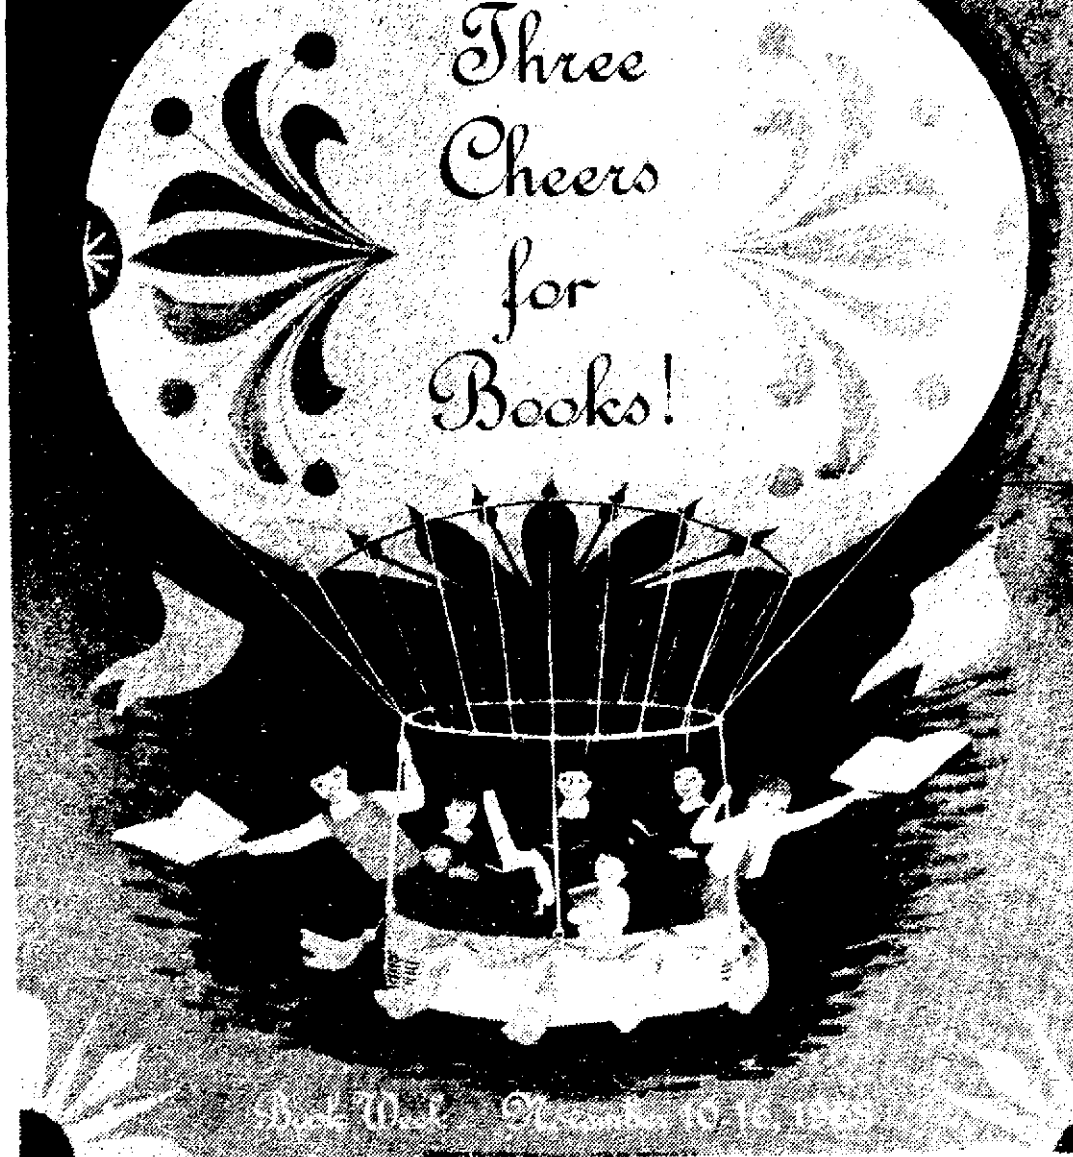

Mrs. Dennis Herring will present both programs at the St. Francis Library. For the younger children she will give A. A. Milne's "Winnie the Pooh" and humorous and serious poetry.

Older youngsters will hear Mrs. Herring give selections and excerpts from A. A. Milne's "The House at Pooh Corner", "The Arbutnot Anthology of Children's Literature," compiled by Mary Hill, and works by Guernsey Van Riper Jr., August Derleth, April Oursler Armstrong and Marguerite Henry.

Mrs. Joseph Shift will give the program for younger children at the Kimberly Village Hall. She has selected an excerpt from Carlo Collodi's "Pinocchio" and Dr. Seuss's "The Sneeches" for dramatic narration. The older children will hear Mrs. Donald Herring read several of James Stephen's "Selected Poems". Her dramatic narration will be an excerpt from Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" and "Stormy, Misty's Foal".

Each child attending a program will receive a book-mark. After each program, a book will be awarded to one child in the audience. Chosen to be given after the first programs is Ezra Jack Keats' "Snowy Day". An autographed copy of "Stormy, Misty's Foal" will be the prize awarded after the second program.

Special displays of books that have received special honors, such as the Newberry

Classics, Recent Publications and books that have won the Caldecott and Newberry Medals for excellence will be displayed under the slogan, "Three Cheers for Books." A series of programs has been arranged by the Lawyers' Wives of Outagamie County Saturday at the Appleton Public Library, The St. Francis Library and the Kimberly Library. Youngsters from throughout the county have been invited to attend the program for their age group at the library of their choice.

and Caldecott medals, classics and recent publications will be set up in the library rooms.

National Book Week was observed the first time in 1919 and has become the traditional time to highlight for children the pleasure and knowledge to be found in reading good books.

Members of Lawyers' Wives who are participating in this program of service to the community are Mrs. Frederick Froehlich, assistant to the children's librarian; Mrs. Harold Bravick, Mrs. Donald Jury and Mrs. Hugh Nelson, hostesses at the Appleton Public Library; Hostesses at the St. Francis Library will be Mrs. William Pfankuch, Mrs. A. Gerard Patterson and Mrs. David Geenen. At the Kimberly Village Hall hostesses will be Mrs. John Wylie, Little Chute; Mrs. Daniel Burns, Kimberly; Mrs. John Esler and Mrs. Donald Swetz, Kaukauna.

Working on committees have been Mrs. Donald Herring, radio publicity; Mrs. Peter Nelson, newspaper publicity; Mrs. Everett Stecker, poster design for schools and libraries, and Mrs. Harry P. Hoeftel, committee chairman.

Lawyers' Wives and library staffs have been assisted by Mrs. Helen Kachura with poster design and lettering, and by Melvin Poppe, who arranged for the balloons inscribed with the slogan "Three Cheers for Books".

Older Women More Elegant

Elegance is most likely found in older women, designer Simonetta of Italy and Paris said here during a recent visit.

"A woman is truly elegant when she has found her own type and can play it up with elegance like everything in life must be worked for."

The fiery wife and designing partner of Fabiani was here to visit a suburban New Jersey store carrying her line. Of American department store shopping she said:

"I am just not used to the way women here just pick off the racks and try on, do everything by themselves. They are so surprised when I speak to them and offer them help."

Customer's Complaint
The customers' biggest complaints, she told a trade press reporter, is "they say I don't think enough about fat people or old people."

County Homemakers Schedule Workshop

BY JUDITH STELLWAGEN
Home Economics Agent

The Outagamie County Homemakers have invited all Home makers and friends to their Festive Fall Workshop. The Four Seasons, at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Black Creek Community Hall.

At the workshop will be presented foods, centerpieces, party favors, table arrangements and gift ideas for many holidays and special occasions on exhibit.

In addition to these exhibits, there will be demonstrations and work centers where women may make articles for the holidays in the afternoon.

Huck Darning and Interlacing will be featured at the decorative stitch center. If interested in learning to design aprons, purses, towels or place mats, bring one yard of check gingham (1 1/2 checks) or 1/2 yard of hop sacking, embroidery floss to match colored gingham, tapestry needle size 22, scissor and other colored floss.

Will Give Instructions. Perhaps you are interested in making a delinter from art foam. Mrs. Marvin Oelke and her committee will demonstrate this. To make delinters bring art foam, 36 inches long and at least 4 1/2 inches wide, art foam cement, pins, scissors, a 12 inch dowel stick and long pin thumb tacks.

At another workshop center you will be able to make copper wire jewelry.

Mrs. Marvin Dalke and her committee will demonstrate making match stick crosses.

The evening program beginning at 8 p.m. will feature Mrs. Kailhofer giving a demonstration on flower arranging. The Seymour 4-H club will provide entertainment.

The fall workshop of 1963 has been planned by a committee of homemakers. Mrs. Marvin Dalke, Seymour, is chairman assisted by Mrs. Olin Bergshagen, Appleton, Mrs. Harold Schmechel, Appleton, Mrs. John Van Asten, Little Chute, Mrs. Elmer Root, Hortonville, Mrs. Louis Steid, Hortonville, Mrs. Marvin Oelke, Hortonville and Mrs. Wilbur Rath, Shiocton.

Mrs. Clifford Johnson, a teacher at the Gard's Corners school of the Waupaca district, has been selected 1963 Wisconsin Rural Teacher of the Year by the Wisconsin Agriculturist Magazine. She believes a teacher should learn to understand each of her pupils in order to help mold their characters. With Mrs. Johnson are Judy Rasmussen, David Thompson and Kathy Geiger. Waupaca Teacher Designated 'Tops'

WAUPACA — A Waupaca day have a more diversified Unified School District teacher, background in current events who believes teaching should be pointed out that radio, television, consist of more than drilling the vision and newspapers are "Three R's." has been named the Wisconsin Rural Teacher of the Year by the Wisconsin Agriculturist Magazine.

Mrs. Clifford Johnson, whose son, Almond, who has taught school Leighton, is a freshman at Alford 17 years, was selected by the Wisconsin Rural Teacher of the Year by the Wisconsin Agriculturist Magazine.

Mrs. Johnson teaches fifth and sixth grades at Gard's Corners school, a multi-room rural school west of Waupaca with the consolidated school district all children are covering a broader area of instruction in the fields of art, music and physical education — subjects which were not available at most one-room teaching fields, like building rural schools except through ex-citizens and teaching children to get along with each other. "We," referring to teachers, "should learn to understand each child and help him to obtain the ultimate goals possible," she said.

During her 17 years of teaching, she has noted some changes, but she maintains children are the same now as 17 years ago. She claims the children of to-

Swim Suit Decolletege Increases

BY JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Lady's swimsuits will be without tops within the next five years, sportswear designers predict. But at the new spring collections previews here, high fashion dresses already are a mere breath away from the same breezy goal.

Emboldened by the success of Christian Dior designer Marc Bohan's bare-shouldered models in Paris last July, American designers are stopping short of next-to-nothing to provide their own rich couture clients with the same public exposure.

The models of designers Luis Estevez, Teal Traina, Ceil Chapman, Larry Aldrich and David Kidd, unveiled the beauty of natural femininity in scooped, ovalled, squared, heart-shaped, and center - slashed necklines that stay as far away from the neck as possible. Additional well known couturiers due to introduce their spring collections soon also are reportedly in favor of unconcealed cleavage.

Ready to Accept. The audience consensus so far is that the fashion climate will be right for decolletege.

Photos of chic French and American manikins, oozing with physical charm, widely publicized in fashion magazines and newspapers, have done their part in conditioning the public to appreciate the nude look.

"The current chest - baring trend," explained an amateur psychologist on a crowded elevator after one of the spring shows, "is modern woman's subconscious reaction to the recent plethora of literature probing her psyche. Whatever is said about her, she is proving she is every inch all-woman."

Natural Trend. But two-time fashion critics award winner Bill Blass believes the trend is a natural swing of fashion pendulum away from the muffled-up style of the past year which had women wrapped up like mummies.

Other spring trends are: lowered waistlines, bias-cut dresses, mixtures of wool with linen, a mismatch of prints and sleeveless coats and jackets. But in view of the new low necklines no one is likely to notice.

hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Make sure the sheet is fitted to the box spring and not the mattress. Do you know those old wood clothespins that our mothers used? They are absolutely darling when giving a party and tucking the sheets in when making the bed. No more unsightly, crooked dust ruffles hanging on each guest's glass or place card must be marked!

I bought a felt marker and labeled each pin with the guest's name and put them on the edge of the bed. Now aren't you the cutest sweetie-pie in this world?

The Shell Game

Dear Folks: Recently a woman wrote to us that she drew "funnyfaces" on the hard-boiled eggs that she put in her husband's lunch box. I tried it in my daughter's lunch box. It caused so much laughter at school that now I makes notes on the egg shell such as "Take your pill," or "Don't forget to bring the spoon home." "It's ours," or just plain I Love You!"

These clothespins can also be dipped in diluted food coloring to match your table decorations.

Spray and Stay

Dear Heloise: What good is an empty spray bottle? The finger type with a plunger. After combing a little girl's fly-away hair, try a spray or two of clear water from the spray bottle... her hair will stay put!

For little boys who need water on their hair to make it stay in the correct place, spray clear water from this bottle, rub into the scalp, and his hair combs into place and the child goes off with sprayed hair which dries quickly.

I keep this bottle of spray water handy in our bathroom.

Calumet Park Youth Camp Survey Set

4-H Tells Board
Study Will be Done
At No Cost to County

CHILTON — Calumet County Park will be surveyed soon as a possible setting for a youth camp.

A representative of Rowland Associates, Wisconsin Rapids, designers and planners of the Chicago White Sox boys camp at Brothertown, will meet with local youth group leaders at the park Tuesday for a preliminary study.

Plans to investigate the possibility of developing a youth camp at the park were unveiled at the Calumet County Board's annual session. Earl Lintner, president of the county 4-H leaders council, successfully petitioned the board for permission to carry out the survey.

No Cost
At the time, Lintner told the board the survey would be completed at no cost to the county. The 4-H organization was prepared to pay for the study, he said, and requested only the board's authorization to go ahead.

Although the 4-H organization is taking charge of the initial studies, Lintner emphasized that the camp is not intended to be a 4-H camp. The plan has the support of almost every youth organization in the county and has some support of similar units from neighboring counties. Lintner stated there was a definite need for facilities of this type and the park, he felt, offered an ideal site.

Designers' Decision
When asked about the extent of facilities desired for the proposed camp, Lintner said this would be left entirely up to the designers.

Money earned by the 4-H in its Pikeramas will pay for the survey. If any building is undertaken, the county would be the likely source of funds, Lintner said.

He felt if a camp were built it would receive continuous use during the summer camping season and he theorized that there would also be some winter camping.

Charles Nikolai, county 4-H club agent, will accompany the Rowland engineers to the park. Nikolai has taken an active role in youth group leadership aside from the 4-H organization he heads.

Wayne State Wins OSC Tournament

OSHKOSH — Wayne State University from Detroit won the seventh annual Oshkosh State College debate tournament sponsored by Pi Kappa Delta here Saturday afternoon. Its negative team defeated the affirmative squad from Illinois State University at Normal, Ill., in the finals held at Reeve Union Lounge.

Both teams had 5-1 records and the most points on best speaker ratings.

Twenty schools from Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri and Wisconsin sent teams to the tournament with each team competing in six rounds of debate.

Next debates for Oshkosh State College will be the entry of five teams in a meet at Bradley University at Peoria, Ill.; four teams at a University of Wisconsin meet and one team at Purdue University at LaFayette, Ind., all on the Nov. 22 and 23 weekend. Robert Carl, OSC forensics director said.

The question being debated this year is "Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Guarantee an Opportunity for Higher Education to All Qualified High School Students."

No Mail Delivery Planned for Monday

MENASHA — Postmaster James Omachinski of Menasha and John Dachel, Neenah acting postmaster, this morning announced no mail will be delivered by carrier Monday in the two cities.

The postmasters also said no window service will be offered Monday. Veterans Day.

However, the lobbies of the Neenah and Menasha post offices will be open so box holders may pick up mail.

The normal daily dispatch schedule will be enforced, Omachinski said.

The Post-Crescent will send 1,000 balloons off the "launching pad" this week, each balloon carrying the message of the dedication of the new parking ramp and the special Post-Crescent tabloid heralding the event to the "far reaches of the land." The exact message reads: "Downtown Appleton On the Move." Watch for this Special Post-Crescent Magazine, Sunday, Nov. 17.

Nearly half of the balloons, will carry a card attached which will notify the finder he is entitled to "two free hours" parking in downtown Appleton through the courtesy of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce and the Post-Crescent. All the finder needs do is present the card at one of the retail stores in downtown Appleton and he will be reimbursed for the cost of two hours parking time. This method is necessary as the law requires that money be placed in parking meters when the space is in use. The free parking offer is good from now until Christmas.

Children and parents will want to keep their eyes on the skies and to test the prevailing winds in their area in order to remain on the alert for the dedicatory — and pretty — balloons.

Neenah Club to Hear Oshkosh Library Sets Panel Discussion 2-Week Art Display

NEENAH — A panel discussion will provide the program for the Monday noon luncheon meeting of the Neenah Club. Participants will be John Wilson of Ripon, a member of the Governor's Commission on Human Rights; Assemblyman Martin of Neenah, and the Rev. E. M. Kelley, Negro pastor from Milwaukee, who will be conducting a series of services next week at Whiting Memorial Baptist Church in Neenah.

A reception is planned for 2 to 5 p. m. today by the Friends of the Library organization which will operate the picture gallery Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Wednesday evenings starting Nov. 25.

As the Pupil Waits Wandering

Conferences May Provide Surprises

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Parent-Teacher Conferences provide a meeting of minds on the subject of education. How a child is progressing, what his problems are, how he can be helped as an individual are of concern to both parent and teacher.

They are also of concern to the child, who may view the entire process with either pride or trepidation, depending on his own attitude. Even though he doesn't attend the meeting in person, his spirit is very much with the parent and teacher discussing his work and his goals.

The same forthcoming conference is viewed by the three individuals most concerned—the child, his mother and his teacher.

How Much They Know Is What Strumps Him

"Oh, Brother, I can just hear them!" "He doesn't do his homework . . . he stares out the window . . . he makes faces behind my back . . . he should do better." That teacher will give me the knife in the back.

"Maybe I shouldn't have said I lost that theme. She probably knows I never wrote the dumb thing. Anyhow, what does she care what I did on my vacation? And why should

I tell her anyway? Ain't she never heard of privacy? Themes. I know English too good already.

"Wonder what they'll say about math. Think she knows I cheated on the final? I didn't really cheat, but when the answer's right in front of you—almost a guy'd be a nut not to look. Anyhow, I'll pass that easy. I always do.

"History too. Course, that's all dead stuff. Ha, Ha. Get it?

"They should just talk about science. Now that's the stuff that's good. I can see myself whizzing around the earth. That's better than sitting in school every day, learning how to tell what I did on my vacation. Out there with the stars . . . that's for me. They should talk about science.

"Guess Mom will be worried when she hears. She might even cut down on television. All day in school and all night at the books. That's some life for a kid!"

Mom Steels Herself For Inevitable Change

"Wouldn't be so bad if they just didn't sit and talk about it. Makes you feel creepy, like they've got an X-ray machine on a guy's brain. What do they know?" "I suppose the news won't be as good as last year. He's changed a lot, probably part

2 Neenah Girls Suffer Injuries in Two-Car Collision

NEENAH — Anna M. Sparks, 12, 328 E. Doty Ave., Neenah and Kathryn B. Benson, 12, 205 Sherry St., Neenah, were injured in a two-car accident at 11 a. m. Saturday at the intersection of E. Franklin Avenue and Elm Street.

Miss Sparks complained of a side ache and Miss Benson incurred a head ache and were advised by Neenah police to consult a doctor.

According to police records, a car driven by Michael J. Plath, 18, Oshkosh, was going west on E. Franklin Avenue and collided with a car driven by Martha Sparks, 37, 328 E. Doty Ave. in the center of the intersection.

Apparently neither driver saw the other and the accident resulted. Plath is being charged with failing to yield the right of way.

At 9:40 a. m. Saturday a car driven by Shirley D. Boyer, 755 Madison St., Neenah, slowed down suddenly and was hit from behind by a car driven by Ronald R. Stommel Jr., 35, 940 Zembek Ave., Neenah.

Both vehicles were going east on Winneconne Avenue just past the Henry Street intersection.

Outagamie Highway Department Prepared for Snow Since July

County Plows, Graders, Trucks
All in Top Mechanical Condition

Let the snow come — Outagamie County has been prepared for it since last July, according to Highway Commissioner Clarence Brownson.

The county's fleet of 25 snow plows and 16 additional graders operations have become so efficient with new machinery, that about 12 lighter trucks equipped for plowing are in top mechanical condition and ready to go at the first sign of snowfall.

Salt is being purchased and over 800 tons have been stored in Shiocton and Appleton bins, in bins built under the grandstand at the Seymour Fair grounds, and at Kaukauna and Hortonville.

About 400 tons of salt will be used on county roads and an equal number of tons will be used on state roads, it is estimated.

Pipes Set Up
Brownson said metal pipes on which snow fencing is hung have been set up along state and county roads. The fencing will follow after the ground is sufficiently frozen to eliminate a possible drifting of the fence. Fencing is not as important in the past, and the day is not too far off that fencing will be a thing of the past. Shoveling operations have become so efficient with new machinery, that about 12 lighter trucks equipped for plowing are in top mechanical condition and ready to go at the first sign of snowfall.

Waupaca Hospital Care Questioned

Winnebago Hospital Sends Patients Home To Be Wage Earners

Pilot Program Shows Institution
Purpose Is Other Than Custodial

OSHKOSH — Once thought of as custodial, releases for patients only, as custodial institutions, county hospitals now are revising that concept and are returning patients to their communities as wage earners.

Vogel cited a twofold benefit from this pilot program. First, the benefit to the patient who can return to his home rather than remain many years in a custodial care. Second is that each time the hospital is able to release someone, the county is released from sustaining that person in the hospital at its weekly per capita cost which for the last fiscal year was $32.74.

Screening, Selecting
"We have begun a program of screening and selecting those patients who seem to be good candidates for release," the hospital superintendent pointed out. "They are evaluated by the medical staff upon recommendations and suggestions made by for two months, replenishing it if needed on each return visit to the hospital."

It is far cheaper to spend a week on medication than the Turn to Page 2, Col. 8

State Calls for Psychiatric Treatment

BY RICHARD McDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WENAUKEE — The threat of suspension of state aids has turned the spotlight of public attention on the conditions and philosophy of administration at Waupaca County Hospital.

Last week the county board learned that the state had found the hospital failing to meet state minimum standards in 27 non-compliances.

The major one raised in the state contention that the hospital should stress psychiatric treatment rather than merely custodial care.

Takes Exception
J. Paul Jones, hospital superintendent, has taken exception to this point and contended that the institution's "home-like atmosphere" is more important than the treatment directed by the state.

Action is based on the issue by the state's warning that if the non-compliances are not rectified in 90 days state aid will be suspended.

Most of these non-compliances can be corrected by the purchase of additional equipment. The administration philosophy is another thing, however.

Long Experience
Jones bases his opinions on his long experience at the county hospital. He confirms his opinions on the fact the Waupaca County Hospital has had more dismissals than other similar hospitals throughout the state.

Jones has been superintendent since July 1, 1941. During his superintendency he has had 60 patient dismissals.

He said Thursday at a meeting of the county board, he seriously doubts if this record can be improved by adding psychiatric services.

Must Comply
Although the county can do nothing but comply with the directives of the State Department of Public Welfare, Divisions of Mental Hygiene, only the future will show if adding psychiatric treatment can improve the results being obtained under present practices.

Hugh Gibson, a hospital consultant with the state department, assured the county board Thursday that the rate of dismissals will increase with the addition of the services of a psychiatrist.

Scandinavia High School Will be Sold After 67 Years of Service

SCANDINAVIA — After 67 years of founding an educational institution, the school experienced great hard-ship on Dec. 31, 1919, when the building was sold this month. The academy building was destroyed by fire. Again the people in Scandinavia and neighboring communities rallied to the support of the school.

Pledges Secured

Pledges of more than $60,000 were secured, and on March 2, 1920, at a meeting of the citizens, it was unanimously decided to rebuild the school on the academy grounds and to add a two-year college course. It was also decided to change the name of the school to Central Wisconsin College.

On Sunday, Sept. 5, 1920, the cornerstone was laid and on Jan. 6, 1921, school began. In the intervening nine months, school had been held in various places in the village, in the basement of the public school, the bank, post office building, and the church. In May 1920, the college was recognized and fully accredited by the University of Wisconsin.

By 1930 nearly every city and town in the state had established a high school. Scandinavia was no exception. Also, in 1930 a financial depression had affected the nation. Because of these circumstances, it was decided to close the school at the end of the school year of 1932.

Community Aroused

Again the community was aroused, and at a special election in July, 1932, the town and village of Scandinavia and a portion of St. Lawrence Township, decided by a large majority to purchase the property and establish a union high school.

Scandinavia High School was maintained for 28 years, to the end of the school year 1960, when because of decreased enrollment and the inability of the school to maintain a varied curriculum, the district voted to dissolve.

Scandinavia village and the northern half of Scandinavia Township voted to join with the Iola Schools while the southern half and St. Lawrence joined the Waupaca school system. The northern district is now a part of the Iola-Scandinavia Public School system and a grade 11th annual convention in Elkhart, Ind., next weekend.

Question Care At Hospital

Home Rule

Jones is of the opinion that no group of people meeting at one place can set a policy that is workable in every hospital and situation. He believes each unit should operate to the best of its ability.

He said he fears the addition of professional services will break-down the homey atmosphere of the home.

The care of the patients at the hospital is not now nor has it ever been a point of concern. It was never questioned at the recent county board meetings when the compliance items were discussed, although it has been brought up in "street talk" when it was first announced there are 26 employees when there should be 81.

This discrepancy was brought down by adding eight more attendants at the Thursday session of the county board.

AHS Band Director To Attend Meeting

Frank Comella, director of the Appleton High School band, will attend the American School Band Directors Association's 11th annual convention in Elkhart, Ind., next weekend.

2 Women Injured in Menasha Auto Crash

MENASHA — Two women were injured and four cars were damaged in two car accidents in Menasha Saturday.

Audrey M. LaPorte, 701 Grove St., Menasha and Rita Parker, Madison both complained of sore necks following a two-car rear end collision at 10:20 a. m. on Third Street, Menasha, just west of the Appleton Street intersection.

According to police reports a car driven by Thomas J. Parker, 26, Madison, ran into the rear of the LaPorte vehicle which was stopped in a lane of traffic on Third Street. Both vehicles were facing East.

Damage to Parker's car was estimated at $200. The LaPorte vehicle damages were estimated at $150.

At 12:15 p. m. a car driven by David W. Schmidt, 35, 310 Twelfth St., Neenah, was passing a car driven by Gary L. Smarzynski, 19, 228 Edgewood Drive, Menasha, while heading North on De Pere Street, Menasha.

Smarzynski was preparing to turn left onto First Street and the two cars collided when he attempted the turn.

The right front and head light of the Schmidt vehicle were damaged while the front and left fender of Smarzynski's car was damaged.

City Recodifies Ordinances Election Day to be Wet One In Appleton, Council Says

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Ye of members of paid up standing in the S&B (suds and booze) set have reason to rejoice.

Hereafter, Appleton taverns will be permitted to do across-the-bar business on Election Day.

Allowing imbibers (of legal age, naturally) to pass through those swing doors of local pubs will be breaking long-time tradition . . . but not the law.

Sometime ago, the Wisconsin Legislature erased the state law which prohibited taverns from dispensing with the spirits on Election Day and the governor signed his "John Reynolds" to it?

Qualifications

However, the action is not to be misinterpreted that tavern owners are compelled to have their establishments open while the citizenship is going to the polls.

And it doesn't infer either that John Q. Public should proceed to get "plowed" before or after voting for the candidates of his choice.

Recently, Robert Sunby, Madison, whose firm is recodifying the City of Appleton ordinances to rid them of some of the blue laws and bring others up to date, put the question to the common council:

"Shall we conform to state law and allow taverns to remain open on election day?"

Wet Decision

City Fathers, not necessarily immune to S&B membership, made a serious deliberation and came up with the consensus that Appleton should be wet instead of dry on election day.

At the same time, aldermen gave informal approval to revise the local ordinance to allow taverns to sell one gallon instead of one quart of booze at a time. This is in keeping with Parkinson's Theory of "thinking big".

Also on the subject of intoxicating beverages, the council indicated Class A and B liquor licenses fees should be raised, as well as most other fees.

Switch Burden

And, the council arrived at the conclusion the city should abolish the health examination for tavern owners and bartenders.

The Appleton Board of Health previously indicated the law had to "go", taking the position that burden for having healthy bartenders was on the tavern owner.

In addition to being physically fit, a bartender must be able to withstand the rigors of bar biz, too.

The recodification is costing the city $8,500 but general feeling is that it's worth it.

Working with Sunby in updating the ordinances is the council's Welfare - Ordinance Committee, which recently made the recommendations concurred in by the aldermen.

Streaming

By the time recodification is finished (about Jan. 1, Ald. Mrs. Dorothy Stillings (?) will have gathered a wealth of knowledge about the streamlined ordinances. For months she has been sifting through stacks of published ordinances, seeking out the outmoded and duplicated laws, and rendering a major "assist" to the project, which requires patience and detail.

Mrs. Stillings said recently that several phases of the recodification have been finished, and new ordinances are getting a final polishing before being sent to the council for adoption.

In addition to relaxing the ban for taverns on election day, the recodification will include such items as:

Removing the legal boundary descriptions of the city from the ordinances as they serve no real purpose.

Give Authority

Giving the Department of Public Works authority to correct an illegal situation (such as snow pushed into public right-of-way, driveway and sidewalk construction without a permit etc.) at owner's expense.

Prohibiting any barrier in a street without a permit.

Elimination of the primary street plan because it creates confusion.

Making it a requirement that permission be obtained from the city for all construction in public right-of-ways, such as carriage walks, driveways, aprons, water mains etc.

Appleton Cyclist Hurt In Collision With Car Making Turn

Richard Rusch, 19, 1024 W. Foster St., was injured about 4:15 p. m. Saturday when the motorcycle he was riding and a car collided near the intersection of Lawrence and Superior.

Robert W. Preimesberger, 32, 421 W. Sixth St., was the driver of the car.

Police reported the motorcycle and car were both going east on Lawrence. Preimesberger attempted to make a left turn and the vehicles collided.

Rusch was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital where he was treated for cuts and abrasions to his chin, right knee and left thigh.

Rescue Squad Takes Girl, 6, to Hospital After Coughing Spell

Susan Brock, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Brock, 742 Prospect, was rushed to St. Elizabeth Hospital by the fire department's rescue squad at 7:15 p. m. Saturday after she had a coughing spell in the home.

The child appeared normal, firemen reported, but had been coughing prior to their arrival, the parents said.

At 4:45 p. m. Saturday, firemen went to the intersection of Fifth and Locust streets where some warning lamps had been overturned. Firemen doused the oil flames in the street.

Industrial Arts Teacher Joins Tigerton Faculty

TIGERTON — Fred Antoneau joined the faculty of the Tigerton High School last week as an industrial arts instructor.

A native of Green Bay, Antoneau attended Algoma High School and graduated from Stout Institute. He completed nine weeks of practice teaching recently at Manitowoc.

Lester Bowker served as instructor temporarily until Antoneau could take over his duties.

Counselors Help Supervise College Entrance Exam

About 325 high school seniors from the Fox Valley area took the American College Testing (ACT) examination at the University of Wisconsin Fox Valley Center Saturday.

The test is required for admission at the Wisconsin State Colleges. The University of Wisconsin and its centers require either the ACT test or the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Entrance Examination Board for admission.

Miss Lila Locksmith, student advisor at the Fox Valley Center, was the test supervisor, assisted by guidance counselors from Fox Valley high schools.

The ACT test battery covers four areas — English, social studies, mathematics and natural sciences. The total score on the four tests provides an over-all estimate of a student's general ability to succeed in college. The tests attempt to measure a student's intellectual skills and abilities rather than his knowledge of specific and detailed content.

The ACT test will be given three more times this year at the Fox Valley Center — on Feb. 15, April 25 and June 20. The opening dates and deadlines for registration are Dec. 9 to Jan. 23 for the Feb. 15 test, Feb. 24 to April 4 for the April 25 test, and May 4 to June 6 for the June 20 test. Students register through their high school guidance counselors.

Accountants Group to Hear Securities Head

Mr. John J. Kyle, director of the State of Wisconsin Department of Securities, will speak to members of the northern chapter of the Wisconsin Society of Certified Public Accountants, on Monday, Nov. 18. The meeting will be held at the Town House in Oshkosh at 6:30 p. m.

Kyle's talk will be on "Wisconsin Requirements for Registration of Securities."

At 3:30 p. m. the same afternoon a seminar will be conducted on "Auditing and Federal and Wisconsin Income Taxes Relating to Savings and Loan Associations". This seminar is being organized by Ray Pusch and Vincent Derscheid, both of Appleton, and Leroy Bruechert of Green Bay.

John Schatz, Oshkosh, is in charge of arrangements for this meeting, and Alfred Hill, Marshfield, is program chairman.

Legion Unit Votes $50 Contribution

CHILTON — Members of the Chilton American Legion Auxiliary unit Thursday night voted a $50 contribution to a fund for rehabilitation programs in veterans' hospitals throughout the state.

In other business, preliminary plans for the group's annual Christmas party Dec. 5 were set. Mrs. Emil Jodar is chairman. There will be entertainment and members will exchange gifts.

The group detailed plans for the joint post-auxiliary Veterans' Day banquet Monday at Hellers Hall, Brant. Ralph Layman, Chilton High School guidance counselor, will speak.

2 Injured in Motorcycle Accident

OSHKOSH — Two youths were injured Saturday afternoon when the motorcycle they were riding collided with a car in the intersection of Ohio Street and W. 18th Street, Oshkosh.

The two, William E. Stiefvater, 20, Kiel, the driver, and Robert J. Walk, 19, Wauwatosa, were taken to Mercy Hospital after the accident by Moore Ambulance.

Stiefvater received a broken left collar bone and abrasions to the right leg, according to reports. Walk suffered abrasions to the left leg and arm.

The motorcycle, which was heading south on Ohio Street, collided with a car driven by Shirley J. Vorisek, 948 Elmwood Ave., Oshkosh, who was going west on W. 18th Street.

In another Oshkosh accident, total damage to two cars was estimated at $150 after they met head-on on County Trunk E in the Town of Algoma.

According to police a car driven by Robert G. Springborn, 31, 136 W. 24th, Oshkosh, was turning left onto a driveway from County Trunk E and was hit by a car driven by Francis W. Schenauer, 49, W. Fourth St. Road, Oshkosh, who was heading west on the highway.

Damage to the left fronts of both cars was estimated at $75 apiece.

"We are pleased with the results of the program thus far and hope to expend it as the months go by. This has been done despite the inequities in the formula for reimbursement to county hospitals."

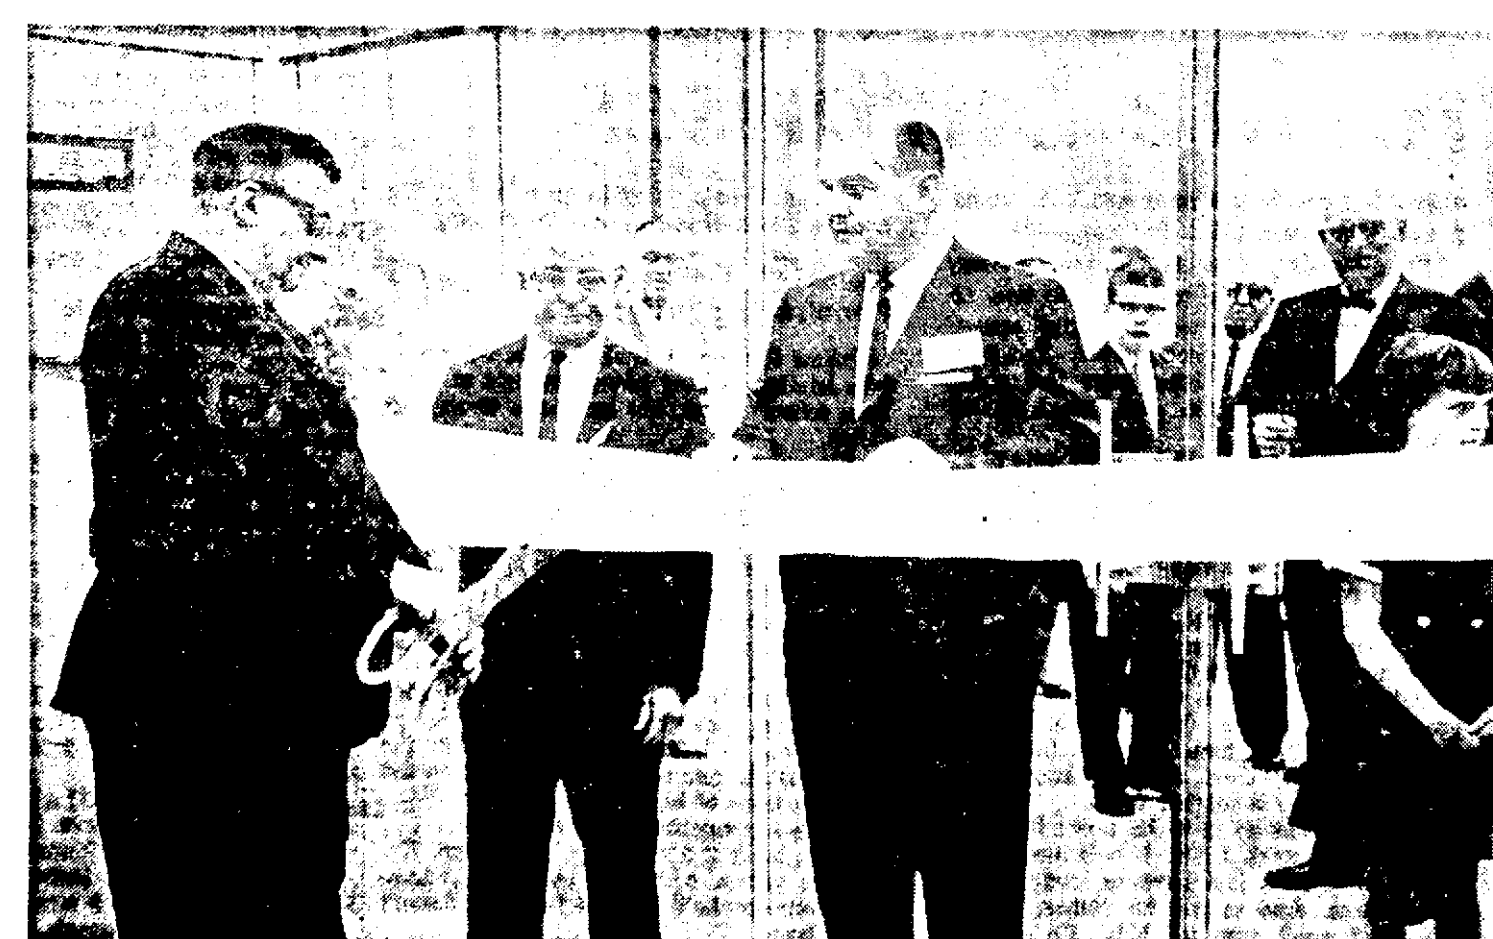

Bill 170-S is pending before the Legislature to revise the state aid program and to encourage county hospitals to develop active treatment services for the mentally ill hospital employees. "To assure that this is done, we have the released patient returned to the hospital every two months for consultation and further evaluation with Dr. Bitter and Dr. Petersik.

"Further, we are assuring ourselves that they are receiving proper medication during the initial one-year release period. If a patient is unable to purchase the necessary medication out of his own funds,

Schools Help Educate Youth To Assume Role As Free Men

BY MARSHALL B. HULBERT
Vice President, Lawrence College.

Before one can examine the values by which free men should live in order to realize and preserve their freedom, it is necessary to understand the meaning of the term itself. The fact that freedom has so many meanings for people in different times and places leads to the suggestion that our concern here be focused upon freedom as it might apply to our time in this country.

In its most obvious sense, freedom implies the right and the possibility of an individual to exercise a reasonable and responsible choice in determining his actions. This principle underlies our political institutions and our moral code; it is the source of individual initiative in industry, trade, scientific research and the creative arts. In short, it is basic to our way of life.

Of equal importance, however, if we hope to enjoy true freedom is the need to liberate intel-tual and emotional resources men to be gainfully employed—these are the essential elements of slavery which frequently prevents us from thinking and acting as free men. Man's inescapable struggle to overcome ignorance, fear and prejudice engages him throughout his entire life, but its persistent nature cannot deter him from undertaking the task if he desires to be a free man.

Irresponsible Liberty

The mere absence of external and inner bondage, however, still does not guarantee freedom in the larger sense. There are those who have thought it did only to discover that misdirected or irresponsible liberty inevitably leads but to tyranny and slavery.

Martin Buber, the contemporary Jewish philosopher-prophet, puts it this way: "It means that in a quite personal responsibility takes the place of one shared with many generations. Life lived in freedom is personal responsibility or it is a pathetic performance." True freedom from his viewpoint is almost man's "desire; one carries that like a cross, not like a cockade." It is not so much 'freedom from' as 'freedom to' which we should in seek.

If we can accept Buber's description of freedom, it seems to follow that the values which men must cherish if they and their children are to possess and preserve their freedom depend upon three central principles: the recognition and the preservation of role as free men — teachers, the dignity and the worth of an individual, the assurance to each person of a fair opportunity to develop his potential abilities, of a social climate favorable to the growth and the expression of human idealism in which freedom can flourish.

Self-Restraint Needed

A man who bears himself with dignity and a true sense of his own value must of necessity exercise a considerable measure of self-restraint. In the case of a state or a nation, such discipline is achieved through legal restrictions upon the behavior of individuals or groups who tend to deny their personal responsibilities by engaging in actions inimical to the welfare of other men.

Granted, the line that must limit one's actions is not easily defined, but it is generally recognized by those who try to understand the true meaning of freedom, for in a responsible democracy such as ours no one segment of society can long withhold basic liberties from a minority without being called to account. Thus, if an individual's rights as a free man are placed in jeopardy, he may seek redress through the democratic processes which our form of government provides.

But citizens of a democracy cannot limit their concern to curbing extreme positions taken by some persons which hinder the personal development of others. They must also proceed in a positive manner to provide equal opportunities for all men to achieve their legitimate aims.

Essential Elements

The right of all to vote and the privilege of full protection under the law, education and specialized training for each according to his talents, a chance for persons to move about at will and mingle with others socially, a fair opportunity for Man's idealistic impulses must find a natural expression through some congenial field of human activity, whether it be in the political arena or the church, the laboratory, a mature devotion to one's chosen work if it is coupled with an honest, personal response to the needs and the rights of others, leads to a fulfillment of a man's destiny, not like a cockade." It is and secures for him the benefit of a freedom which grows in meaning through its sharing.

Educate Youth

The schools, in cooperation with the home and the church, have an important part to play in giving significance and lasting life to these values. Those who are responsible for educating our youth to assume their role as free men — teachers, elected officials, individual, the assurance to each person of a fair opportunity to develop his potential abilities, of a social climate favorable to the growth and the expression of human idealism in which freedom can flourish.

Responsible freedom is far too precious a legacy to be transmitted by chance as a hopeful by-product of the acquisition of knowledge in selected areas of study or even as a logical outcome of formal instruction in ethics and religion. It must be experienced daily by students in a realistic setting, exhibited in the lives of those who have accepted the responsibility of parenthood and of teaching, and should receive full encouragement from the entire community. This is a large order, but a mandate that cannot be ignored.

Full-House Crowd Hears Chamber Unit In Lawrence Series

BY DON VORPAID.

High expectations of a Lawrence Chamber Series audience — a full-house — were confirmed when the Netherlands String Quartet gave a stunning display of Chamber music art.

The 250 listeners heard, and saw, why the four Dutch string players earned the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge medal as "finest string quartet in Europe" in 1962. They were a hard-working, efficient, and compelling quartet. They played a not-too-enticing program in exciting fashion. And they were true to the somewhat erudite dogmas of their art without being the least bit stodgy.

Members of the Quartet are Nap De Klijn and Jaap Schroeder, violins; Paul Godwin, viola; and Carl Boomkamp, cello. All are established soloists, and three of them hold professorships at Dutch music academies.

Distinct Traits

Though they play in remarkable ensemble, each showed distinctive traits which gave the quartet some of the best across-the-footlights appeal seen here in some time.

De Klijn spawned numerous chills on numerous spines with the extremely gracious lyric style of his first violin parts.

Schroeder's playing has great care and refinement; his instrument caught the ear with its unusually generous tone.

Godwin's viola is an instrument of haunting warmth, befitting the serious, expressive attitude he takes in performing. For him, incidentally, this was a somewhat discouraging night with first a broken string and then an uncooperative replacement which refused to comply with the disciplines of fine tuning.

Quick, Skilled

Boomkamp is an outstanding ensemble cellist, whiplash quick and skillful, yet marvelously dignified.

The Mozart "Quartet in B Flat major, K. 458," alias "The Hunt," came off with verve, especially a delicate "Menuetto" and fiery "Allegro assai."

A few anxious moments developed as the Quartet launched into Kees van Baaren's "String Quartet No. 2, 'Sovraposizioni I,'" dated 1962. Van Baaren is Conservatory Director in The Hague, and a leader among Europe's "new music" elite.

Following came another contemporary work, the "Quartet, Op. 49" of Dmitri Shostakovich. The 1938 piece was given great intensity of sound and some lovely lyrical lines.

The program's second half was devoted to the Beethoven "Quartet in F major, Op. 59, No. 1," a wide-ranging work of great symmetry and almost symphonic proportions. It was here the strength of the Netherlands Quartet's ensemble sensitivity found its pinnacle, and here the audience found a common-ground of appeal. Certain technical failings in the performance were overlooked in view of a moving, penetrating corporate skill this quartet shares.

“Human Values in a Scientific Age!”

Wednesday and Thursday Evenings — Nov. 20 and 21 — 8:15 P.M.

STANSBURY THEATER, MUSIC DRAMA CENTER, LAWRENCE COLLEGE

Is “mechanized” teaching good?

Is “mechanized” communication good?

Is technology, scientific mechanization, the moon race, causing us to lose “the human touch?” What is truth? What are “human values?”

Columnist Sydney J. Harris said in a recent Post-Crescent issue: “Whatever teaches us to think, feel and behave more like men (we call such subjects ‘the humanities’) cannot be offered in a dehumanized fashion or it loses all meaning and impact.”

The answers to these questions and views—and much more—may be forthcoming in a most interesting and unique two-evening program, Wed., and Thurs. evenings, Nov. 20 and 21, when, as the climax of a two-day seminar . . .

• Bruno Bettelheim—Prof. of Education and of Psychology and Psychiatry; author, lecturer and child psychiatrist:

• Howard Nemerov—Lecturer on verse, Bennington College, Vermont; poet, dramatist and Consultant on Poetry, Library of Congress:

• Harlow Shapley—formerly Prof. of Astronomy, Harvard Univ., Dir. of Mount Wilson Observatory, renowned lecturer and author:

will speak individually—and during a panel presentation—on the all-encompassing and appropriate subject: “Human Values In a Scientific Age.”

Parents, students, employers and employees, and those just plain interested in happiness and “where we’re going from here,” will want to attend both programs. There is no charge for either performance!

Home Mutuals Hangs Bronze 'Waterfall'

Chicago Sculpture Adds Interest to New Office Building

Visitors to the new Home Mutual office in the Town of Menasha are greeted by a tremendous piece of welded metal, textured and colored by heat, supporting a continuous fall of water into gravel artfully decorated by greens.

It is an eye-catcher upon first encounter and a most engrossing subject for contemplation should the visitor be asked to extend his stay in the anteroom.

The massive piece of bronze backs descending swirls of deeply patinated bronze strips supporting the continual waterfall.

Avant Garde

Although the sculpture — or construction or what have you — may seem avant garde in the Fox Cities, it is practically a household fixture for the sculptor Eldon Danhausen of Chicago.

Danhausen has won a considerable reputation as a sculptor. He has been on the faculty of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago for 18 years and has won a Prix de Rome for his work. By an even more practical yardstick, Danhausen's considerable income from his artistic welding pronounces him a success.

However, his artistic fame is being overshadowed in Chicago by the house he created in collaboration with architect Don Dirsmitz. So unusual are the features of Danhausen's bachelor quarters that he is losing the privacy he sought. Streams of uninvited sightseers pound on his door for inspection tours.

Stark Exterior

The 38-year-old artist's "glorified den" presents an exterior of a stark, white brick cube, pierced by a two-story Gothic arch. The interior has been described as growing "like a tropical plant, sending out new shoots and tendrils at every flash of inspiration."

The living room is dominated by two boulders and a tree and features a Greek amphitheater descending to a centerpiece of a bubble window, providing a "conversation pit."

The Home Mutual bronze could have had its origin in the construction of Danhausen's home.

Artful Drain

When the rear wall was glassed in, Danhausen and Dirsmitz discovered an unsightly drainpipe cutting across their vista. Removing the pipe failed to solve the utilitarian drainage problem from the roof, so they created an artistic cluster of copper pipes at the right point and caused the rain water to flow across their window. So pleasant was the effect, they piped a supply of water to the "modern gargoyles" to obtain a waterfall at will.

The complete house — as it stands today — has cost $150,000, and it's still growing as Danhausen and his three fellow bachelors expand their "creative environment."

Posters Used in Issues of the new Kimberly-Clark Corp. prestige magazine "World Graphics" are on display at the Paine Art Center, Oshkosh. It is the first time this collection of international posters has been shown to the general public. The magazine, a quadrimestrial, has had four issues. (Post-Crescent Photo by Robert Baeten)

Printing Craft Examples Reveal Unique Kimberly-Clark Magazine

Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

OSHKOSH—In the current exhibit of international posters and other graphics collected by William Stone of Kalamazoo, Mich., the Paine Art Center once again brings an artistic first to the Fox Cities. The show that opened last Sunday will run through Nov. 28.

This survey of the most modern uses of typography throughout the world is, in effect, a double-barreled first as far as the general public is concerned.

The posters and the other graphics in the show were collected for use as illustrations in a unique magazine "World Graphics" which Stone as designer of Kalamazoo's Sequoia Press creates and prints for Kimberly-Clark Corp.

Quadrimestrial Although "World Graphics" has a subscription list of some 30,000, the list is restricted. The Paine show will give the general public its first look at the quadrimestrial publication. Stone says the identifying term is found in very unbridged dictionaries—or at least one he's seen—and that it means three times a year.

The posters demonstrate two ways in which the graphic arts industry abroad differs from that in the United States.

The existence of the posters itself indicates the difference in advertisement where the mass media we depend on is eschewed in favor of the kiosk or wall bulletin boards. The more than practical artistry of these posters reveals the close affinity posters have had with the fine arts and the freedom of creativity afforded printers abroad.

Type Design The posters of Toulouse-Lautrec are well known and prized and bull fight posters are collectors' items.

Although the posters in the show do have examples of fine art and some are done on "the graphical excellence in The stone" in much the manner Toulouse-Lautrec worked, the bulk of the show demonstrates the fourth strides being made by type designers and carries the viewers just to the threshold of the modern use of typography.

Stone points out that the European printer hasn't relinquished his status as an artist by becoming separated from his ultimate client by art or advertising agencies which have made the American printer more of a mechanic than an artist.

Returning Status However, he feels this status is being returned to the American printer. In fact, he is doing something about this return.

Stone, after 2½ years of service in the Marines during World War II, graduated from Antioch College with studies in art and literature. At Antioch he met a literature major and writer, and married her. Interested in printing, he spent six months in Sweden studying at the Graphic Institute under Bror Zachrisson and at night school under Karl-Frik Forsberg.

Returning to America, after a stay in England, Stone and his wife, Nancy, founded the Sequoia Press in Kalamazoo. In the beginning the pair did all of the work with Stone doing the typography designing and printing as well as teaching his wife the craft. Later the Press expanded with the addition of a printer and a salesman partner.

Prize Winner The Sequoia Press and Stone as its designer soon became important figures in the printing world. In 1958 he was chosen one of 43 American typographic designers to have work included in an exhibit collected by Joseph Blumenthal for the Graphic Seminar in Sweden.

Shortly afterward Stone brought his idea of "World Graphics" to Kimberly-Clark and the first issue appeared in September, 1962.

The first issue examined typog-

The unique magazine is winning high regard in the printing field and is likely to add more awards to Sequoia's trophy room and give the status of the printer and additional boost in America.

Although Kimberly-Clark is aiming this magazine at the purpose of placing the very best printing in the hands of the leaders of the trade, it also uses the vehicle to demonstrate the printability of its product.

The current "World Graphics" is printed on several different kinds of K-C book and enameled papers in such a way as to provide framing for each section of the book.

The Paine Art Center received the poster collection because of the friendship in Kalamazoo between Richard Gregg, Center director, and Stone.

Top State Artist To Hang Exhibit At Neenah Center

NEENAH—A one-man show of watercolors by Charles Dix, one of the top award winners in the recent Milwaukee Art Center "Wisconsin Exhibition of Drawings," will open Wednesday at the Bergstrom Art Center.

The Friends of Bergstrom organization will honor Dix with a "meet the artist" reception from 8 to 10 p.m. Tuesday.

The exhibition of the work of this young artist who has enjoyed a stunning success in the last few years, will remain at the Bergstrom Center through Dec. 8.

Among the Recent Acquisitions of the Bergstrom Art Center glass paperweight collection at Neenah is a set of modern Baccarat sulphide weights representing the signs of the zodiac and presented to the museum as a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Johns of Wilmette, Ill. The weight pictured above is of Scorpio, the sign appropriate for this time of the year. Johns, a member of the firm of Haskins and Sells of Chicago, was elected to the membership of the Neenah Municipal Museum Foundation in 1962. The Foundation operates the art center. Welding Skill and Imagination produced this unique metal "waterfall" for the ante-room of the new Home Mutuals office building in the Town of Menasha. Each metallic swirl is "tuned" to give a pleasing sound as the water trickles to the gravel box below. The work is an example of the artistry of sculptor Eldon Danhausen of Chicago. Wagner's Clear Watercolors Shade Obscurity in Prints by Courtois

As the hunting season gathers a full head of steam, the exhibit of Ferdinand Wagner watercolors at the Reneita Galleries, 608 N. Lowe St., is a most appropriate one.

With the nearness of Halloween, the same appraisal of appropriateness can be attached to the companion exhibit of graphics by former Appletonian Eugene E. Courtois.

Wagner's collection of wet-on-wet watercolors manifests a great love and deep insight into the beauties and majesties of the out-of-doors. In fact, when his subject matter comes indoors, as it does in a pair of portraits, his brush becomes sentimental rather than incisive.

Nature's Color However, it is not only the subject matter that provides evidence of Wagner's keen observation. In many of his works, Wagner has stolen the very color of nature and frozen it on his brilliant canvases.

The rapport between artist and observer in Wagner's case is instantaneous and pleasant. On the other hand, Courtois' graphics hold the viewer's attention but fail to touch him. The Appletonian emigrant to San Francisco works in the Halloween tradition in so far as his meaning is very well disguised indeed.

Skilled Artisan This is not to say the 1951 graduate of Appleton High is not a highly skilled artisan. His prints have strong design and his lines impart interesting rhythm to his works.

However, his extreme use of chiaroscuro provides an example of the generic meaning of the word — "clear-obscure" or clearly obscured — rather than the life-giving uses employed by Caravaggio and Rembrandt.

What results is akin to Paul Klee's "writing" for which a Rosetta Stone is needed.

Both parts of the complementary exhibit demonstrate the subjectiveness of art; Wagner's work can be subjectively enjoyed by the viewer, Courtois' is an example of subjective expression by the artist.

Home Mutuals' New Million Dollar Office Building Doubles Space

55,000 Square Feet of Work Area Provided

Home Mutual and Homestead Mutual Insurance Companies have settled into their new million dollar home and have invited the public to pay them a visit next Sunday, Nov. 17.

The company moved to the new home office building on State 47, south of Appleton in the Town of Menasha, this fall from its quarters at 228 W. College Ave., since razed to provide a site for a 10-story addition to Aid Association for Lutherans building.

Home Mutual and Homestead Mutual will dedicate the modern stone and glass building Monday. A series of open houses for company agents, Fox Valley businessmen and the public will start this week.

Doubles Space

The H-shaped building, which doubles the company's previous office space, has a 223-foot facade of Fond du Lac stone and glass, stretching from east to west, with a flat roof. Some 3,535 cubic yards of concrete and 8,376 square feet of exterior glass were utilized in the building. It has 55,000 square feet of work area on three levels.

The lower level of the building, which opens to the south, contains utility areas, the supply and print shop, permanent storage space for records, and the mechanical equipment for operation of the building.

The second and third levels feature maximum flexibility. The architects made extensive use of glass partitions, light colors and simple decor to give a sense of airiness and freedom.

Modern Sculpture

The lobby-reception area on the second level features a modern sculpture fountain by sculptor Eldon Danhausen. Service departments on the second level are underwriting, engineering and filing.

The cafeteria, lounge, conference rooms and auditorium are located on the second level. The company plans to make this unit of the building available for community use both during and after office hours.

The auditorium, which has a raised platform at one end, will seat 261 persons seated banquet style. It can be partitioned into three smaller rooms through the use of concealed walls. It will be used for training programs and company conferences as well as by community groups.

Electronics Center

The electronic data processing center is located on the third level. This level also houses the executive offices, board room, legal library, archive library and service areas for the sales, claims, accounting, legal and stenographic departments.

The building is set on a six-acre site facing State 47. Parking is provided for 100 cars. Company officials say the size of the site will enable future horizontal expansion of the building and parking area.

Groundbreaking for the new building was June 20, 1962. Perkins and Will, Chicago architectural firm, designed the new office building. Fluor Brothers Construction Co., Oshkosh, was general contractor.

As it moves into its new home, Home Mutual Insurance Co. also has adopted a new trademark. The trademark includes a sturdy "H" over a house symbol, a pictorial image of the company's name. The "M" for Mutual is incorporated in the center bar of the "H".

and the rooftop of the house symbol. The design is put into a contemporary shield form, which makes a transition from the former trademark and retains its "coat of arms" image associated with insurance and day, Nov. 17. Tours will be conducted throughout the day.

This Oil Painting Hanging in Home Mutuals' new office building is a reminder that the company's headquarters for 31 years were in the farm home of Julius Bubolz, the company's founder. In 1931, the company moved to the fourth floor of the Zuelke Building and 20 years later took over four floors at 228 W. College Ave., recently razed for expansion of the Aid Association for Lutherans office.

Tornado's Devastation Prompted Forming Wind Insurance Company

135 Policyholders in Seymour Area

Took Advantage of New Protection

The present Home Mutual Insurance Co. was born out of tragedy—created to relieve the despair of farmers in the Seymour area.

Julius Bubolz, pioneer farmer and community leader, organized the company with the explanatory name — Farmers Home Mutual Hail-Tornado and

The long and cumbersome name was starkly apt, for the company's beginnings dipped back into the pioneer 1800s when a series of devastating tornadoes and cyclones hit rural Wisconsin with brutal force. The years 1883, 1888 and 1898 were particularly bad, 1900 to the time of his death in the storms killing numerous people, ruining many others in the secretary of the firm.

Open House Tours Set

Company Plans Series of Fetes During Week

The new million-dollar home office building of Home Mutual and Homestead Mutual Insurance Companies will be dedicated Monday and presented to the public in a series of open houses starting this week.

The dedication program Monday will include flag raising ceremonies at 4 p.m., tours of the building conducted by company personnel from 4 to 6 p.m., a banquet at 6 p.m. and the formal program at 7 p.m. Mrs. Gordon A. Bubolz, wife of the company president, will sing selected solos at the banquet, accompanied by Mrs. Clarence Richter.

The formal program will open with the invocation by the Rev. W. E. Lange, pastor of Emanuel Lutheran Church of Seymour, near where the company was founded in 1900 by Julius Bubolz, father of the present president. It was moved to Appleton in 1931.

Madison Speaker

Stanley DuRose, deputy commissioner of insurance, Madison, will be the guest speaker. Gordon A. Bubolz, president, will give the dedication address.

The Rev. Ralph Hermesen, son of one of the company's local agents, Mrs. Susan Hermesen of Little Chute and the late Henry Hermesen, who was a company director, will give the benediction.

An industry open house for professional, industrial and business men of the Fox Valley area is planned for 2 to 5 p.m. Wednesday.

The public open house is scheduled for 2 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 17. Tours will be conducted throughout the day.

heard of in Wisconsin, but its need was recognized and out of this need came the 1900 firm with 135 farmer policyholders.

At that time windstorm insurance policies were written for farmers in only the three counties surrounding Seymour. Today, Home Mutual Insurance Co., operates in six states.

In its early days, the firm's business was conducted by Julius Bubolz with the help of his wife, Emelie, in the founder's home. Throughout its growing with brutal force. The years 1883, 1888 and 1898 were particularly bad, 1900 to the time of his death in the storms killing numerous people, ruining many others in the secretary of the firm.

As the company grew, its need for larger quarters became evident.

Tornado's Wake

Grain, cut by hand then, was blown to the winds. Acres upon acres of excellent timber were flattened. Log buildings, principal shelter for farm folk in northern Outagamie County and its nearby area at this time, were destroyed. The security, four floors in the five-story building at 228 W. College Ave. over the years of hardship, now the firm has its own home were gone. The future was bleak. Without protection from the elements, the task of rebuilding seemed senseless, hopeless.

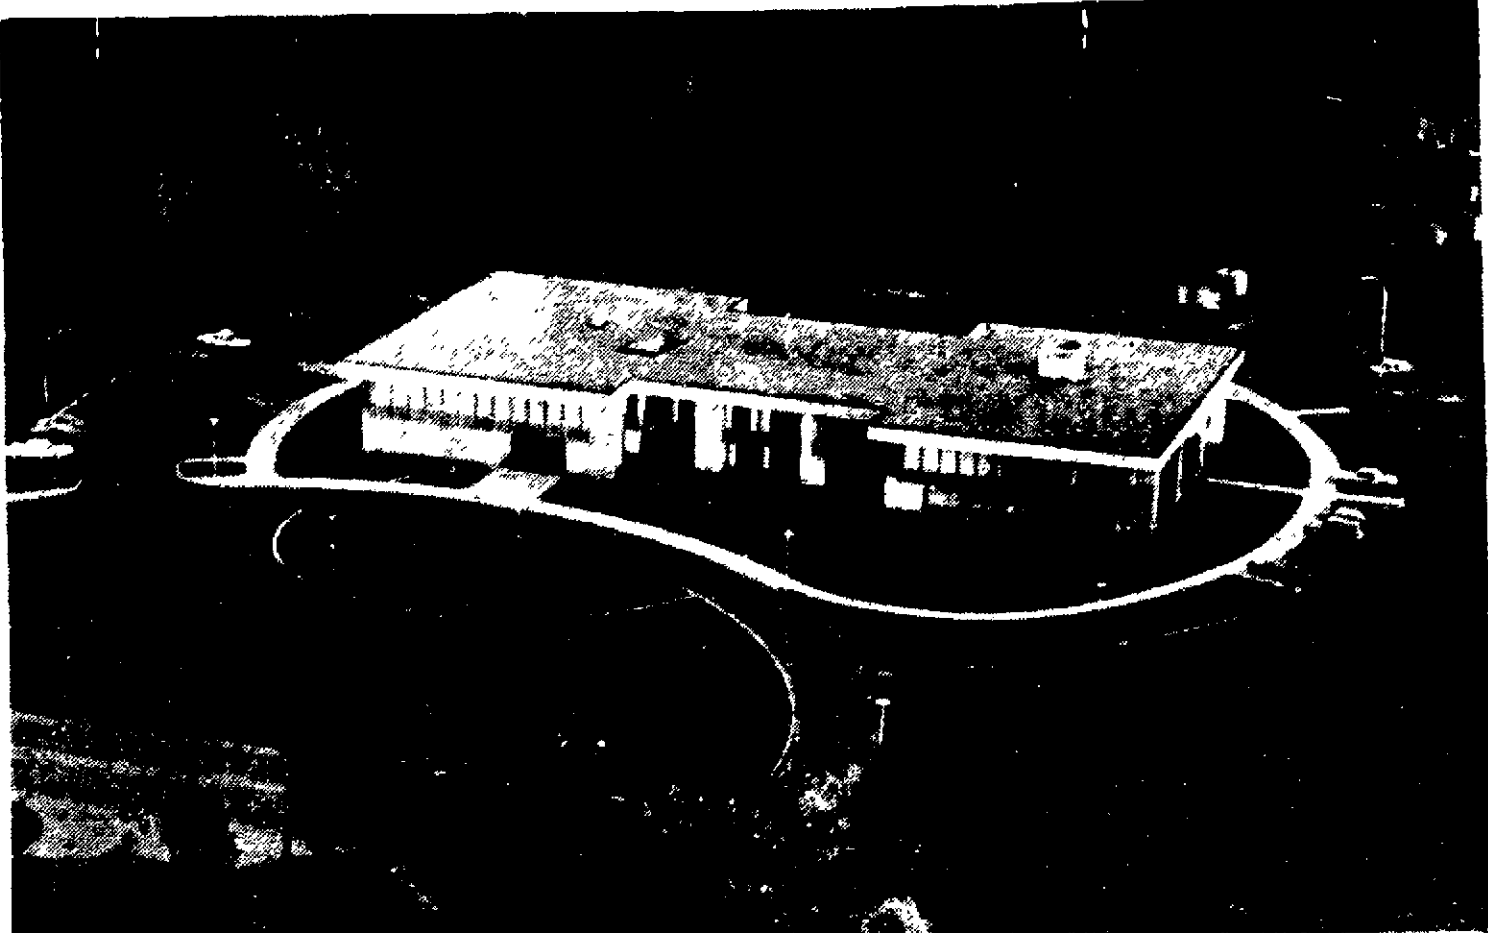

Thus was born the idea of windstorm insurance, based on the proven success of mutual protection against fire losses. Windstorm insurance was un-

In 1931 the firm's operations were moved from the Buholz farm house to the fourth floor of the Zuelke Building in Appleton. Further growth prompted another move in 1951, when the company took over the five-story building at 228 W. College Ave. with its sister company, Homestead Mutual Insurance Co., on State Highway 47, just south of Appleton.

By the early 1930s, Julius' son, Gordon O. Bubolz, had joined the firm and became the assistant secretary. In 1936 he was named president. It was young Gordon who saw the need for automobile insurance and the Home Mutual Casualty Co. was founded in 1935 through his efforts. This auto insurance firm merged with the parent company in 1956.

Gordon Bubolz, Son of Home Mutuals' founder, joined the company in the early 1930s and expanded the firm's coverage by introducing automobile insurance. He has been company president since 1936.

bile insurance and the Home Mutual Casualty Co. was founded in 1935 through his efforts. This auto insurance firm merged with the parent company in 1956.

Fire Insurance

The Home Mutual firm began writing fire insurance on homes and commercial buildings in 1940 and in 1950 the Homestead Mutual Insurance Co. was set up to write insurance on farm properties.

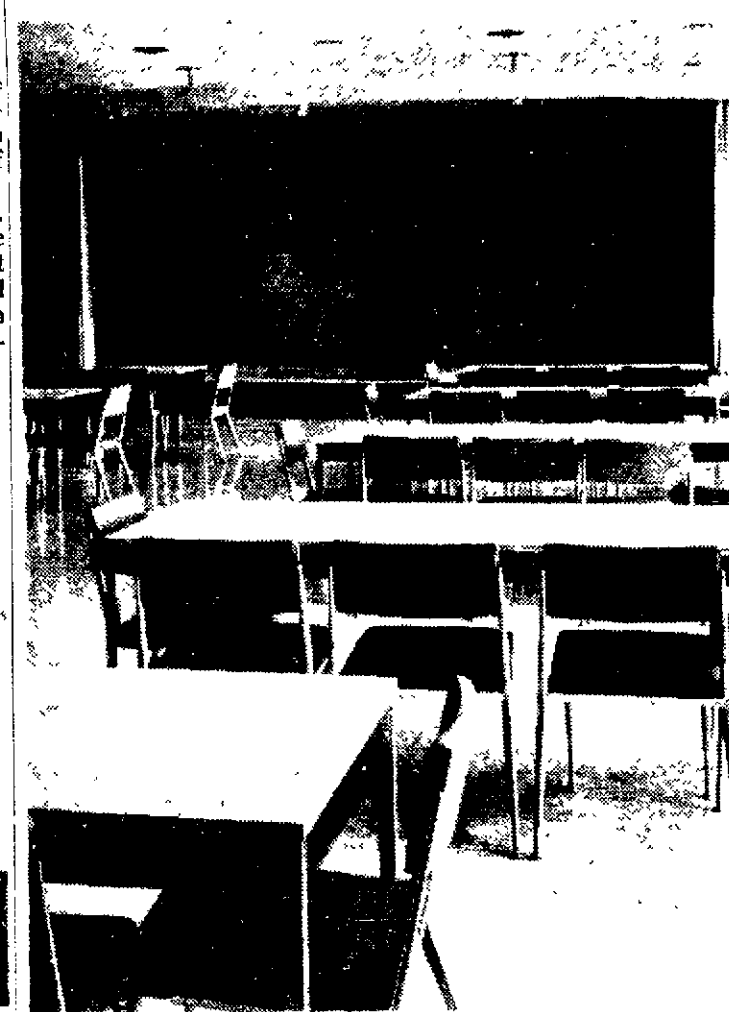

In its 63 years, the insurance firm has grown from 135 members to over a quarter-million policyholders, from one part-time employee to more than 250 with 150 in the home office alone, from a farm house office to a modern home office and three district offices. More than 900 agents represent the company today in Wisconsin, Missouri, Michigan, Minnesota, Indiana and Kentucky. Annual premium volume today approximates $8 million in contrast to the $235 in premiums written in 1900.

Officers of the firm today are Gordon A. Bubolz, president, treasurer and general manager; Edward J. Byrne, vice president and general counsel; J. I. Davis, vice president emeritus; Al-

Plaques Add Life To Dreary Walls

The interiors of modern apartments and homes often lack the accented with gold, or a floral architectural charm that characterizes the old.

Gone are the intricate moldings and trim that were used to frame doors and windows, as of a bed.

Doors, too, are usually flush-surfaced, instead of having the paneled effect previously used.

"While the effect may be neat and uncluttered, it can also be bare and monotonous," points out Mary Ann Wills, decorating consultant.

The remedy is often the imaginative use of deep-dimensional wall plaques and accessories. These plaques, based on actual wood carvings, are reproduced in a simulated wood called Arabesquewood which duplicates the original down to the finest detail.

Offers Ideas

Miss Wills offers these ideas to help homemakers rise to the challenge and make the most of otherwise uninteresting walls:

1. You can give a flush door a custom look by taking a dramatic piece, such as a large chessman plaque in a "weathered" finish, and mounting firmly on the door.

2. At the corners of door openings or at the top of archways, consider a gracefully scalloped room, but also clearly defines its side as a three-foot covering perimeter. It makes a separate over the garage doors. The flat roofline combines with platform of the approach to the bedroom stair, for example, giving the room an added sense of which extends nearly eight feet beyond the corner of the house to give an added appearance of width.

House of the Week Dramatic Room Brightens Split

A new twist to split level design, aimed at giving the living room added formality, is but one of the many luxurious touches in this modest four-bedroom home.

Another clever as well as functional feature is the vanity room in the master bedroom. Actually it is a part of the bedroom; a private dressing area with closet nearby. But when the interior bedroom door is closed it becomes a powder room for guests, ideally located adjoining the main bath.

A 4' by 6' private balcony with the extended solid side walls provides additional glamor for the level room. A large coat closet main bedroom: A secluded spot for a coffee and the Sunday paper, or for a final cigarette before retiring.

Medium Size

For all its glamorous innovations the house remains a medium sized home of 1,553 square feet on the living and bedroom levels, the basic area, within comfortable dimensions of 56'1" wide by 30'8" deep. It was designed by architect Rudolph A. Mattern as H-2 in the House of the Week series.

The house has a crisp, contemporary look from the outside. Its front entrance is framed by vertical posts with a flat 15' feet of width across the back, roof which extends around the enough to accommodate the whole family without anybody getting under the housewife's feet. The efficient U-shape of the work area further assures this as well as providing a maximum of counter top and cabinets in a minimum amount of space.

The breakfast area has a wrought iron balcony and planter overlooking the family room. From the work area, a mother can keep an eye on both the family room and the backyard, the latter by virtue of six-feet of glass over the double sink.

All three family bedrooms are located across the front. Note the abundance of closet space in all the rooms, especially the master bedroom and front corner bedroom.

Downstairs, on the level directly below, is a possible fifth bedroom with an adjoining lavatory. The lavatory also serves the family room and adjacent terrace.

Cabinet Turns Powder Room Into Full Bath

Prefab Units Occupy Little Space in Floor

You can turn a powder room into an efficient and convenient full bath simply by having a prefabricated shower cabinet installed.

It's a good idea to have a corner entrance type installed. This type takes little floor space.

Modern prefabricated shower cabinets are ruggedly constructed and smartly styled. Framed steel side panels are corner-sealed to prevent rattle and chatter when the shower is in use. All joints are water-tight to prevent leaks and to keep your powder room dry.

Receptor Floors

Receptor floors are usually treated in some manner of pie vent slipping. Sometimes the floor slip is spackled on in an ornamental pattern, for an unusual decorative effect. Receptors are deep, with high sides, to give positive protection against leaking.

Installed in the master bathroom, the shower cabinet is a convenient supplement to the shower over the tub. Recessed in the wall and framed with tiling, the prefabricated unit has a custom-built appearance. A glass door with non-rusting hinges adds the perfect finishing touch.

Shower accessories include self-clearing shower heads with spray regulators, thermostatic mixing valves for exact water temperature and volume control, and overhead lights.

Filing Fee Repeal Planned Monday

MADISON, AP — Gov. John W. Reynolds said Friday night he will sign the bill repealing the $2 income tax filing fee on Monday.

The fee was enacted in July as part of the compromise budget-tax bill and immediately became the target of criticism from all sides.

The repeal bill was approved with only one dissenting vote as the Legislature renewed its session this week.

Marine Capital Board Recommends Share Payments

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Directors of the Marine Capital Corp. recommended to stockholders today that they approve distribution of 10 per cent of the small business investment company's paid-in capital and surplus.

Sheldon B. Lubar, president of Marine Capital, said this would amount to about $1.35 a share on the 703,525 shares outstanding, a total of slightly less than $1 million.

Shareholders will vote on the recommendation at a special meeting Dec. 5.

Tiny Screw Inserts Help Create Huge, Thriving Business

Heil-Coil Products Assist in Appliances and Space Program

BY VERN HAUGLAND
AP Aviation Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a success slogan that says "Think Big."

Eduard Baruch of Danbury, Conn., hit it big industrially by thinking small.

Baruch is president of the Heli-Coil Corp., a firm he founded to help industries resolve the design problems of too many holes, or holes that wear out or become enlarged through constant use.

Loose Holes

In an interview Baruch recalled that he and some friends in 1949, started concerning themselves with the rapidly with which hundreds of objects that are used domestically become deteriorated, usually by "coming loose."

"It bothered us that, in everything from electric toasters to automobiles, trouble stemmed from holes getting too big— from screws or bolts stripping, breaking or falling out," he said.

"This was a matter of concern because the industrial world clearly was on the verge of a mass breakthrough in the use of light materials such as aluminum, magnesium, plastics, ceramics, fiberglass, wood and rubber."

More Stripping

Every one of these materials had one common limitation, Baruch says. The screws or bolts holding the parent materials together were stronger than the threads of the holes in the material. This meant more and more stripping of threads, and an increasing tendency of fittings to work loose.

"To us," says Baruch, "the answer seemed to be some kind of a lining for the holes, to make the thread stronger."

Baruch and his associates set up Heli-Coil Corp. in a garage in Long Island City, N.Y., in 1949, and started a search for a material that could be converted into small coils of high tensile strength.

Producing Techniques

Techniques of producing the coils had to be devised, along with precisely engineered cutting tools with which to form the internal thread, and inserting tools for installing the coils.

"We developed an entire new art for which there had been no precedent," Baruch says.

"We had to learn the hard way, by trial and error— by ingenuity, imagination and perspiration."

Selling Job

One of the most important steps was to prove to the various military and industrial markets that assembly of the insert in the hole would serve the purpose.

For this task, one of convincing and selling, Baruch could draw on a background of great scope and variety.

Educated at Switzerland's Rhenania College and at Columbia Law School, he specialized in his first job, with the Irving Trust Co. in New York—in rehabilitating properties on which the bank held mortgages.

Insurance

From Irving trust he went to the Banker's Life Co., Des Moines, Iowa, and devised a method of selling policies and annuities to trust officers and attorneys for estates.

He increased the sale of industrial sponges by having them bleached, graded and packaged as they were received directly from the captains of sponge fishing fleets in the Mediterranean, the Philippines, Cuba and Florida.

Baruch contributed also to ways of using industrial steel wool in a filter cartridge, to filter aviation gasoline, and of camouflage by means of steel wool wire wound through and around a chicken-wire base. This formed a mat that could be sprayed with infrared reflecting paint.

Basic Products

Heli-Coil's basic products are called screw thread inserts. Baruch says that they:

1. Create a thread strength two and a half times that of the conventionally threaded screw hole.
2. Prevent screws from falling out of threads from wearing out.
3. Make it possible to fasten new light metals securely not only in air and space machines, but in automobiles and other consumer goods as well.
4. Make possible the repair of machinery and goods where the original hole has been damaged to the point of apparent uselessness.

Moon Landings

Hughes Aircraft Co. engineers working with Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., to develop the Surveyor spacecraft for unmanned landings on the moon next year, use the Heli-Coil inserts throughout the vehicle.

In all Atlas ballistic missile flights and in the Atlas boosters used in Project Mercury, the Heli-Coil locking inserts insured against structural or parts disintegration.

The inserts have been used in the Polaris missile for three years. Heli-Coil inserts contributed to the reliability of the Minuteman and Titan missiles.

Since 1949 the company has an incidental service to industrial firms.

He changed his plea from innocent to guilty on 11 of the 23 counts filed originally. The remaining 12 counts were dismissed. The counts carry fines of $100 to $500 each. Penalties will be set after a presentence investigation.

Margin Change by Federal Reserve Hits Stock Mart

But General Motors' Hike in Dividend Helps Bolster Spirit

BY JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

Investors found out during the week that they are going to have to dig deeper into their pockets for hard cash to buy stocks.

And giant General Motors Corp. added some sweet icing to the economic cake by boosting its year-end dividend, a move hailed widely as indicating a strong business trend.

The Federal Reserve Board raised the down-payment requirement for purchasing stocks to 70 per cent from 50 per cent. This meant that an investor, to buy $1,000 worth of stocks must put up $700 cash instead of the $500 under the previous rate.

Expensive Credit

The board said it acted to restrain the excessive use of credit for speculative purposes.

Both the New York and American stock exchanges objected to this line of reasoning. They issued statements expressing the opinion that the rise in Thursday, pleaded guilty and was fined $30.

flected the demands of an expanding economy.

The stock market fell sharply on Wednesday, the first day of trading after the Federal Reserve announcement, but brokers generally said they expected such a reaction to be only temporary and that they looked for higher prices in the months to come.

Reduced Volume

However, some said they anticipated a reduction in trading volume as a result of the margin hike.

Sales on the New York Stock Exchange were 19,883,410 for the week, compared with a volume of 28,722,840 the preceding week.

par value compared with sales of $24,624,000 the previous week.

General Motors, biggest of the automakers, aroused enthusiasm by declaring a $1.50-a-share year-end dividend in addition to its regular 50-cent quarterly payment. This brought total dividends to $4 for 1963, a year in which GM broke all records for profits and sales, compared with $3 in 1962.

Car sales continued high with dealers delivering a record 769,000 units in October, a gain of 6 per cent over October 1962.

Demand for steel from the auto industry picked up steam and as a result steel production during the week showed a 1.5 per cent gain over the previous week. Output totaled 1,944,000 tons against 1,915,000 the prior week.

Taking a look ahead, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said "prospects for the economy for the fourth quarter as a whole appear encouraging."

Prospects

The bank found satisfaction with retail sales, the prospects for business spending and a sharp recovery in housing.

New contract demands of Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa cast a cloud on the business horizon.

Trucking Executive Guilty on 11 Counts In Federal Court

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Joseph A. Jennaro, operator of Jennaro Laboratories, Pasadena, Calif., described by the Interstate Commerce Commission as "one of the largest unlawful trucking operations in the Midwest," pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to 11 criminal counts on violating ICC rules.

The complaint said Jennaro, of suburban Elm Grove, "skipped several hundred thousand dollars from unauthorized motor carriers" during the last five years by supplying "to-bai service."

Jennaro claimed he supplied drivers along with his trucks as an incidental service to industrial firms.

He changed his plea from innocent to guilty on 11 of the 23 counts filed originally. The remaining 12 counts were dismissed. The counts carry fines of $100 to $500 each. Penalties will be set after a presentence investigation.

Patrolman Issues Ticket to Himself

SITKA, Alaska (AP) — The anonymous voice complained to the Sitka police department: "Patrolman Bill Bagron's going around issuing citations to motorists for not having stickers on their cars showing they'd been safety-inspected. Where's his?"

Whereupon Officer Bagron gave himself a ticket, appeared before the city magistrate Thursday, pleaded guilty and was fined $30.

Packers Launch Big Push for Title Today

Capacity Crowd to Witness Viking Contest, Hope for Another Bay Game in December

Post-Crescent News Service
GREEN BAY — The Packers launch the "big push" for their fourth straight western division championship — and a shot at that third straight world crown — when they meet the Vikings in City Stadium this afternoon.

The champions and a capacity crowd of 42,327 will be on hand to give a sendoff and "host" wishes for another game in Green Bay next month.

Today's game marks the Packers' 1963 league windup here and the start of a rugged six-game finish. After the Vikings, the Bays face the Bears, 49ers, Lions, Rams and 49ers in that order, and they're all on the road except the first 49er game in Milwaukee.

Kickoff is set for 1:06 and the spectators likely will keep a close tab on the scoreboard for news of the Ram-Bear game in Chicago. The Packers and Bears are locked at the head of the Western Division class with 7-1 records.

Scoreboard Gazing
The Packers themselves won't have much time for scoreboard gazing, since the Vikings are not to be trifled with.

This is a new game, as it were, but the Vikings can't help but hark back to Oct. 13 when they came within 10 yards and two minutes of upsetting the Bays. Minnesota, behind 30-28, had an easy field goal for a 31-30 lead but Herb Adderley blocked it and Hank Gremminger raced touchdowns came on passes — two by Perry Lee Dunn, two by Jim Weatherly and one by Jimmy Heide. Weatherly got the other touchdown on a one-yard run.

Mississippi Smashes Tampa Squad, 41-0

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi smashed Tampa 41-0 Saturday, giving everybody down to the third team a chance to see action.

The lopsided victory put the Rebels through their seventh game without a defeat and another step toward their second straight undefeated season.

Auburn's 13-10 defeat by Mississippi State left Mississippi alone atop the Southeastern Conference standings.

All but one of the Rebels' six touchdowns came on passes — two by Perry Lee Dunn, two by Jim Weatherly and one by Jimmy Heide. Weatherly got the other touchdown on a one-yard run.

The closest Tampa could get to Mississippi's goal was a drive to the Rebels' 36 in the fourth quarter.

Illinois Wesleyan Tops Carroll, 34-7

WAUKESHA (AP) — Illinois Wesleyan remained in the running for the College Conference of Illinois football championship Saturday by trouncing Carroll 34-7.

Matt Shoger scored two touchdowns for Wesleyan on runs of 6 and 1 yards. Vic Armstrong connected on passes for two other TDs. He hit Dick Raab on a 23-yard scoring play and Bob Lawry on a two-yard screen pass that brought scores.

The Illinois team now is 4-2 and Carroll 3-3 in the conference.

Concordia Tips Northwestern '11'

RIVER FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Halfback Al Behnke broke loose for long yardage twice Saturday to score touchdowns that carried Concordia Teachers to a 12-6 victory over Northwestern of Watertown, Wis.

Behnke scored one TD on a 67-yard run, the other on a dash of 69 yards.

Northwestern's touchdown, which knotted the score at 6-6, was scored on a 32-yard pass play, Dave Toepel to Ron Hahn.

Indiana Wins, 20-15, Over Oregon State

Tom Nowatzke Leads Hoosiers With 14 Points

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Tom Nowatzke scored 14 points and recovered two Oregon State fumbles Saturday as Indiana defeated the West Coast football team 20-15.

Nowatzke, a 220-pound junior fullback, ran seven yards for a touchdown, kicked field goals of 24 and 27 yards and booted two extra points.

Oregon State took a first quarter lead on a 43-yard field goal by Steve Clark, but Indiana scored the next 20 points, including a 10-yard touchdown pass from Rich Badar to end Rich Wervy.

Oregon State battled back in the fourth quarter, but fell short.

Gordon Queen passed 12 yards to Dan Espalin for a touchdown, but the Beavers failed in an attempted two-point running conversion. Queen hit end Doug McDougal with an eight-yard scoring pass late in the game and missed another attempted conversion pass.

Blocks Field Goal

The Beavers had the Hoosiers in trouble in the final minutes after Dick Ruhl, Oregon State's center, blocked Nowatzke's third field goal attempt at the Oregon State 33. The Beavers then drove to the Hoosier 31 on a flurry of passes, including one from Queen to Vern Burke that gained 31 yards.

But Queen was smeared for an eight-yard loss on a fourth down and four situation as the game ended.

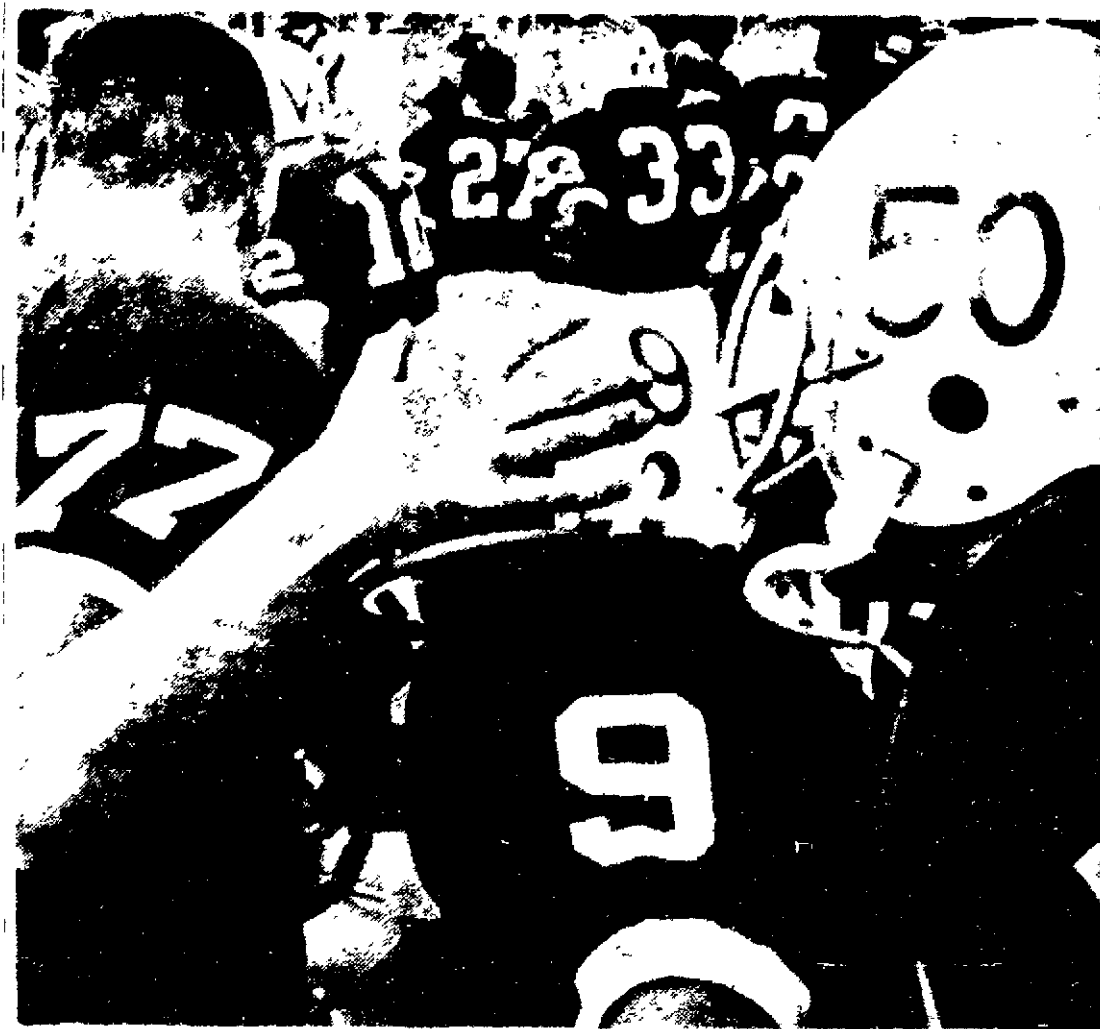

Another promising Oregon State drive died earlier in the fourth quarter when center Joe Tate of Indiana intercepted a Queen pass on the Hoosier two.

Indiana now has won three straight games, its longest victory string since it won four in a row in 1958.

Penn State '11' Upsets Favored Buckeyes, 10-7

Ohio State Fails To Get 1/2-Yard on Third Period Gamble

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Penn State capitalized on a missed first down gamble by Ohio State in the third quarter and Ron Coates kicked a 23-yard field goal that produced a 10-7 upset of the 10th-ranked Buckeyes Saturday.

With the score tied 7-7 in the third quarter, the ground-eating Ohioans needed only one-half for a first down on their own 49, but a line plunge failed and the Nittany Lions, with some sensational passing by quarterback Pete Liske, moved to the Buckeye six. Then Coates booted a 23-yard field goal for the conquest.

The Penn Staters, who moved to a 6-2 record with Saturday's triumph, gave Ohio the same opportunity in the second period, surrendering the ball on downs on their own 46. Eight plays later Paul Warfield plunged five yards for a touchdown but that was Ohio's dying gasp.

Six Attempts
In the second half, in six attempts with the ball, the hosts failed to reach Penn State territory.

Liske passed 13 yards to end Bill Howes to climax a 61-yard, eight-play scoring drive on the first series of the second half to deadlock the game, and set the stage for Coates' winning three-point.

Champion Ripon Trims Beloit, 20-0

Ankerson Scores 14 Points to Boost Season Total to 145

RIPON — Neenah's Jack Ankerson became the nation's leading small college scorer here Saturday, tallying his 145th point, and at the same time led the Redmen to their 12th straight victory and eighth of the season, a 20-0 whitewashing of Beloit, in the 1963 finale.

The Ripon senior scored 14 of the Redmen's 20 points, completed 10 of 24 passes and carried the ball nine times, losing 24 yards, the first time this season the quarterback has lost any yardage. He scored the first Ripon touchdown, kicked two PATs and booted two field goals.

The Buccaneer defense held the Redmen down, but Ripon's defense proved stronger. Although the Redmen were held to 20 points, with the aid of three interceptions of Beloit passes, the Bucs never crossed the 50-line.

In the first frame, a series of Ankerson passes to end Doug Bradley brought Ripon to the Beloit 31, a quick drive moved the ball to the 13. Fullback Dick Willich ran it to the 3 and Ankerson ran it across for the TD. The Neenah quarterback followed with a clean PAT kick.

The Red-fourth quarter when Douglas men got a first down, but were benched held back by the Buc defense. Touchdowns came after drives forcing Ankerson to kick his first of 85, 77, 79, 90 and 48 yards.

With only one minute left in the third period, halfback Dick Bennett ran around left end for the 11 for the final Ripon of fleet and powerful runners TD. Ankerson booted the extra against the Bears, yet it was the field generalship of Douglas Ripon moved from midfield in plus his passing and running the fourth frame on a series of that proved outstanding.

Unstoppable Washington Wins, 39-26

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Washington quarterback Bill Douglas engineered six straight touchdowns for the unstoppable Huskies as they continued their drive toward the Rose Bowl with a 39-26 football victory over California Saturday.

Consider, Minnesota never has beaten the Green Bay Packers. Los Angeles hasn't beaten Chicago in its last eight tries. And Nick Skorich never has beaten Allie Sherman.

By the book, none of these strings should be snapped today. Green Bay, Chicago and Sherman's New York Giants all are solid favorites in their National Football League games.

But don't bet the grocery money against an upset. They are not infrequent in the NFL, and one this Sunday could put a new look on one of the conference races.

Green Bay and Chicago are tied for the Western lead at 7-1 and each is at home, the Packers to Minnesota, 3-5, and the Bears to Los Angeles, 2-6.

New York, 6-2, is in second place in the East, a full game back of Cleveland, 7-1. The Giants meet Philadelphia, 2-5-1, at New York and at this stage a loss could all but kill their chances for a third straight division title.

Day After Season Brings Type Of Weather Duck Hunters Wanted

Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor
TUSTIN — It could only happen that way.

The weather, which has been tossed about in conversation more than a football this fall season, finally turned to what duck hunters wanted — only it came a day after the season closed.

Saturday, with the southeasterly wind and steady rain, saw duck hunters hereabouts winding up anchor lines on decoys and putting them away for another year. Friday, with the fog and overcast conditions some last-day hunters filled their bag but a day like Saturday is what everyone wanted.

I checked over the last-day prospects in a visit to Monsted's Resort on Lake Poygan Thursday. Temperatures zoomed stake in the Cowboy 49'er meeting, only their second game ever and the first in San Francisco.

Nears End of NFL Career
'Losing Tougher Now,' Says Colts' Marchetti

BY GEORGE BOWEN
BALTIMORE (AP)—You feel tougher losing if you've known how it is to be a champ and when you have friends to worry over letting down.

So says Gino Marchetti, the Baltimore Colts veteran defensive end, as he nears the end of his 12th and last National Football League season.

The Colts are on the down-grade, winners in only three of eight games, but praise and respect for Marchetti is voiced by his 36th birthday when he came to Baltimore 10 years ago with his raw brute strength.

"But losing is tougher, now," he explained. "I don't enjoy going out and having to face my friends. It's different than being a transient."

During his first four losing seasons with the Colts, Marchetti recalled "I was just a ball player here for five months." He returned to California after the season.

Then came 1958. It provided Marchetti with a new home town and the Colts a world championship. The red-letter day to Marchetti was the third-to-last game of the season.

The Colts trailed San Francisco 27-7 at halftime. They launched a second half comeback and when the 49ers threatened to interrupt it, Marchetti tipped a crucial pass by Y. A. Tittle. San Francisco didn't position.

River Falls, Augsburg '11' Deadlock, 21-21

RIVER FALLS (AP)—Augsburg turned a pass interception by Joel Nyquist into a fourth period touchdown to gain a 21-21 deadlock with River Falls in a non-conference football game Saturday.

Byron Thompson plunged a foot for the touchdown after Augsburg covered 38 yards in five plays.

Augsburg, with a 5-3-1 record, scored in the first period on a 21-yard dash by Kinney Johnson and in the third quarter on Larry Sholla's 8-yard run.

Dennis Kaiser dashed 63 yards for River Falls' first TD and Ted Ragatz got the second running 80 yards with an intercepted pass. Wayne Burich scored the Falcons' final TD on a 6-inch plunge. The Falcons completed their season with a 4-3-2 slate.

40-Foot Goal Wins College Soccer Title

Baseball Accepts Pro Grid Challenge

Will Extend Pennant Races Longest of Last 35 Years

BY JOE REICHLER
NEW YORK (AP)—Baseball brass finally has decided to accept the challenge of professional football for fan following.

Although they won't admit it, baseball bigwigs are unhappy about the steady encroachment of football into what they regard as their season. Consequently, they will retaliate next year by extending their pennant races deeper into October than any campaign in the last 35 years.

During the past World Series, major league club owners formally approved a playing schedule for 1964 with the season opening Tuesday, April 14 and closing Sunday, Oct. 4. Not since 1929 have the majors started and ended a season this late.

In 1963, the majors opened on April 9 and closed Sept. 29. "There was a time when professional football did not start its season until the first week in October or the last week in September," a baseball man said. "In recent years, they've been encroaching more and more into our season. Why, they now start practice in July and start playing exhibition games in August."

How much of an effect, if any, the extra baseball week will have on football attendance is a question. It is doubtful that the football owners would even consider changing their playing schedule so as not to conflict too much with baseball.

Some years ago, the baseball people owned all or nearly all the parks and the football teams paid them rent. Today, only four parks—Busch Stadium in St. Louis, Wrigley Field in Chicago, Tiger Stadium in Detroit and Fenway Park in Boston—are owned by baseball clubs.

In addition, only eight of the 14 National Football League teams and just two of the eight in the American Football League rent parks from the baseball clubs who either own them or have the original lease to the stadiums.

The official reason for moving back the schedule by a week is the uncertain weather that usually prevails early in April. But it is a fact that baseball people were concerned by the huge crowds that witnessed the football exhibitions in big league parks in late summer.

They feel a tight pennant race followed by a late World Series—the 1964 Series is scheduled to start Oct. 7—would lessen the interest and excitement that a new football season normally generates.

In any event, Oct. 10-11 of next year will perhaps be the busiest weekend in sports history. In addition to the World Series, there will be college and pro football and the opening of the Olympics in Japan.

Ducks Sit Cackling
As the evening hours approached Thursday, the sun went down with a glow behind a few clouds. The thousands of ducks and geese on Poygan sat cackling, probably laughing because they knew there was only one day left of the season.

The afternoon had produced nothing in the game bag but more important, it had acquainted me with a group of fine folks. Bob and Ann Monsted, ageless Frank Niemuth and a number of the neighbors from nearby all contributed facts and tales that amounted to a memorable day.

Middies Win, 42-7
Staubach Stars as Navy Trims Maryland

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—The Navy defense also covered three fumbles. Maryland's hopes for an upset in this intense neighborhood rivalry were dashed early.

Line backer Fred Marlin picked off a Shiner pass at the Navy 34 early in the first quarter and ran it back to the 49.

Staubach scored two touchdowns and passed for one in turning in another spectacular job of quarterbacking before leaving the game early in the third quarter.

His seven pass completions in 12 attempts tied a Naval Academy season record at 94 completions, with two games left. His 104 yards passing and 20 rushing boosted his total offense for the season to 1,544 yards.

76-Yard Run
Paskewich, a sprinter on the track team, turned in the most spectacular run of the day by racing 76 yards for a touchdown after intercepting a Dick Shiner pass. It was one of four pass interceptions by the Middies, who harried Shiner throughout the day.

Biggest Ice Stadium in World Opens
INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Austria opened the world's biggest ice stadium Saturday, completing the construction work for the 1964 Winter Olympics, to be held here Jan. 29-Feb. 9.

The stadium, which will hold 11,000 spectators, has 107,000 square feet of artificial ice surface. It includes an indoor rink for hockey and figure skating and outdoor tracks for speed skating. It was the last of the Olympic sites in and around Innsbruck to be completed.

The $3.06 million stadium has 3,000 seats and standing room for 8,000 others. It also will be the site of the colorful Olympic closing ceremonies.

Tickets for hockey and figure skating events were sold out last month. The technical equipment, including some 230 miles of water and steam pipes and freezing machinery, was tested and found in order. Officials said about 45 pre-Olympic competitions will be staged to test any possible weak spots in the set-up.

Cost of the preparing for the Winter Olympics has been estimated at $8 million in direct expenditures and another $16 million for roads, bridges and other installations.

Resume Power Battle Between AAU and NCAA

Political Struggle Won't Violate MacArthur's Rule

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association, observing a cease-fire until after the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo, resume their struggle for power at the biennial meeting of the U.S. Olympic Committee today and Monday.

This will be a political battle for voting power which doesn't figure to violate the directive of Gen. Douglas MacArthur that neither group do anything to hamper the development of the best possible American team for the Tokyo Olympics Oct. 10-24, 1964.

Gen. MacArthur was appointed by President Kennedy to arbitrate the dispute between the two rival groups. The main objective was to permit athletes from all groups to compete and prepare for the Olympics. MacArthur has succeeded.

Majority of Votes
The battle of Washington will be over a series of proposed amendments. The most important is an AAU-backed proposal to give governing bodies of sports affiliated with international federations the majority of votes in the U.S. Olympic Committee. It pertains to the 26 federations involved in Olympic sports.

This actually is a rule of the International Olympic Committee which has not been observed by the USOC in recent years. No group has majority voting power now.

These 26 groups have a total of 270 votes out of about 756. They form the Class A group in the USOC. This is the group which must have majority voting power according to IOC rules.

The NCAA, which has supported groups seeking to unseat the AAU as the international representative in several sports, is in Class B along with the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines, and the equestrian body. The NCAA has 100 votes and the others 10 each.

NOTES and NOTIONS

The caliber of Fox Cities area high school football teams with any in the state. While this isn't exactly a bulletin to avid sports fans, it's reassuring that a number of area teams again came up with big seasons. Xavier, Neenah and Appleton High won championships of the Valley's three major conferences: the Fox Catholic, the Mid-Eastern and the Fox River Valley. (AHS shared the title with Sheboygan North). Although an unusually large number of good coaching jobs were turned in this season, the performances of Carl Neenah's Harland Carl, Appleton's Adillon and Xavier's Gene (Torchy) Clark stand out in a title bolder relief because their titles represent tangible evidence of outstanding success. Clark and Carl have the unique distinction of batting 1.000 in the "conference title" league. Clark has led Xavier to championships in all three years the Hawks have been members of the FVCC. Carl's teams have produced M-E titles in only two years as head coach. Dillon, the dean of Fox Cities prep grid leaders, continued to show enthusiasm and to use progressive methods in logging his fourth coaching championship. The three title teams won in leagues that were better balanced and seemed to include more dangerous teams this season. Each conference, in fact, had only one really weak team.

Clark's combination football-basketball coaching record continues to amaze. His teams have the state's longest winning streaks extant in both sports—31 straight for football and 27 for basketball. Since Xavier's last loss—to Eau Claire Regis in March, 1962 state tourney basketball, the Hawks have won 45 successive varsity (basketball and football) contests.

After Xavier won all major Catholic grid and cage honors in the 1962-3 school year, the question arose, "Will success spoil the Hawks?" The answer was an emphatic "no" in football despite three possible dangers: (1) The talent supply was down a bit from '62; (2) the threat of complacency is ever present; and (3) every team is ultra "high" for Xavier, just as every NFL team is aroused for the Packers. The Hawks met every challenge, including the serious one posed by their chief rival, Prentiss, to earn the No. 1 Catholic school rating in the state for a second straight time.

Clark's fellow coaches paid him an indirect tribute by choosing comparatively few Hawks on the all-conference team—the implication being that if the material wasn't better than anyone else's, it must have been the coaching. (The general feeling, however, was that Xavier was short-changed a bit, especially on offense. The Hawks more than doubled the point total of any other team, yet placed only two on the all-FVCC attack unit).

Dillon concocted a mental blue-print for a championship as early as '61, then judiciously brought it to fruition. When it became apparent that the dark side of the talent cycle was at hand in '61 Dillon used a good many sophomores. Though AHS suffered through a 2-6 season, the players gained vital experience. Last year, the defensive unit, in particular, came into its own, and the AHS record jumped to 5-3. This year, Dillon brought his grid-iron recipe to a championship boil despite being put in the pressure cooker by Valley sportswriters. The FRVC was the only area league with an "official" pre-season ballot, and the Terrorists were tabbed favorites. Dillon gave the green light to a new, wide-open attack, and it paid dividends. In the only loss (14-6 to North), two potential Terror TDs were lost on fumbles inside the 5-yard line, and a coach can hardly be faulted for that.

Neenah's talent dropped off a little from its powerful unbeaten team of '62. But Carl—like Clark and Dillon—got the maximum out of his material. The Rockets showed their quality by recovering from their only loss (by an unexpected, 19-0 count to Shawano) to tie much-improved Kaukauna and to whip all remaining foes impressively. Carl proved his right to join Jerry Thompson, Tom Porter and Marlon Batterman in a fabulous line of winning Neenah coaches in the last dozen years.

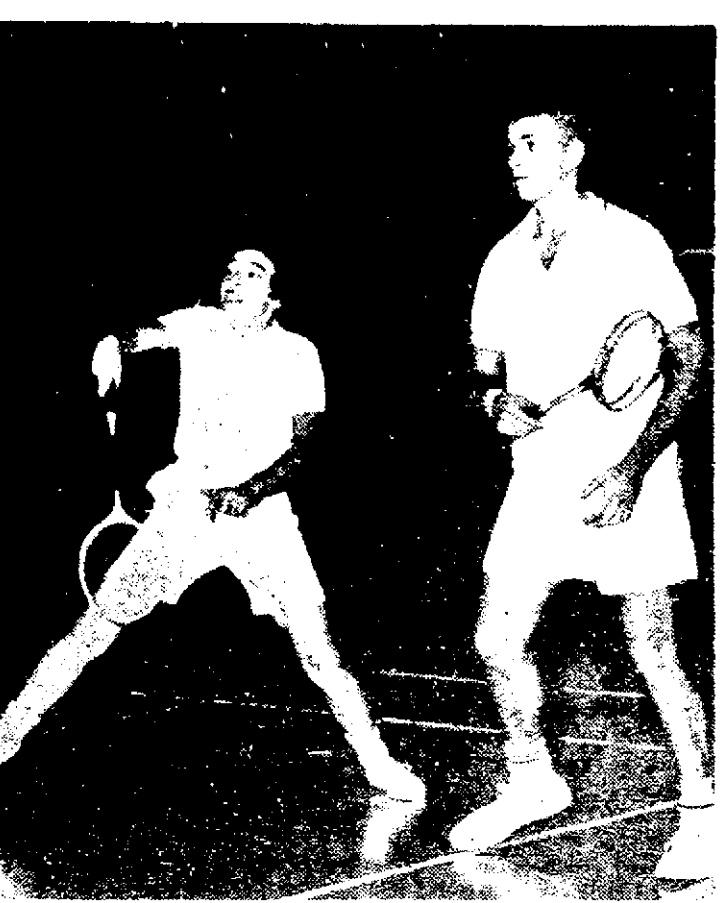

One intriguing question must remain unanswered: "How would the three teams have fared against one another?" Post-season bans prevent any settling of the problem on the field of play. The AHS-vs-Neenah issue could be resolved in the future, for we understand the two teams may agree to meeting in a series of non-conference openers. As discussed in this space last year, it may be sometime before AHS and Xavier clash. It appears to me as though they would have been evenly-matched had they met this season. Their success bears out this writer's observation that there are enough good athletes around to supply both.

Since the ultimate responsibility falls to the head coaches the vital work of assistants sometimes passes unnoticed. Each of the three schools was blessed with strong aides. AHS has Herdis McCrary, Keith Kohlman and Chuck Kunitz. Joe Braun assisted Carl. Harry Nelson was Clark's right-hand man.

Among other notable coaching feats were those turned in by Harry Wilson, whose Kaukauna team didn't lose after the conference opener; Tom Weede, who brought the Menasha Jays back from the depths to the .500 level; Oshkosh's Harold Schumacher, whose team was the only one to beat Sheboygan North; Larry Van Alstine, whose Lourdes Knights became the only team outside of Xavier to beat Prentiss since its return to the FVCC; Jack Wippich whose St. Mary team lost only one game—to Xavier; and to Omro's Ed Goss whose team came back from a 1-point opening game loss to share the Little 9 title; and to Dick Weed who returned Waupaca to its one-time position of power in the CWC.

Final "Guessing Scoreboard" report: Last week's 18 wins and three losses (with three ties) — for an 85.7 per cent—brought the season's record to 77 per cent (164-49-11).

KING PIN capers

Neither Bob nor Wayne's Pink-Kathy Sodermark, Jean and a dulla of Milwaukee qualified for the national Bowling Proprietor's Association tournament during competition last weekend at the 41 Bowl, but both had some thrilling moments during the qualifying rounds and state finals.

Bob blasted a 300 game, the first in the history of the 41 Bowl. Wayne had a 300 game just two weeks earlier in a qualifying round of the tourney.

There's a little story behind Wayne that has an Appleton flavor to it. When he was a half-back for Ripon College nine years ago he suffered a painful shoulder separation in a football game against Lawrence College at Whiting Field. The injury ended Wayne's football career and for a while it looked like his promising bowling career also might suffer.

However, Wayne went into service and the rest did his shoulder good. When he was discharged he started bowling with a lighter ball and gradually worked into a regulation ball. Work and practice has paid off for Wayne. He averaged 217 for 24 games to get into the finals here a week ago but finished seventh. The top six keg-lers won spots in the national tourney and a shot at a $50,000 jackpot. Wayne's total was less than a full Petersen Point out of the sixth place spot.

University of Texas Regents Vote to Integrate Athletics

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas regents voted unanimously Saturday to integrate varsity athletics at the school, the first Southwest Conference school to take this action.

That was the major effect of a board ruling "to remove all student restrictions of every kind and character based on race or color heretofore imposed by the board of regents."

The eight-member conference includes besides the university, Southern Methodist University, Texas Christian University, Texas A&M University, Texas Tech, Rice, Baylor and Arkansas.

An unwritten regent rule at the university has prohibited Negroes from participating in varsity sports, although they have been allowed to take part in intramural sports for men and women since first being admitted to the school in 1950.

Will Vote 'Aye' Sources said two years ago that "integration of athletics is not a unilateral choice. Members of the board of regents have indicated that when a Southwest Conference vote comes up on the integration question, the university's representatives will be instructed to vote 'aye'. But the university regents do not want to imperil the excellent relationships they have with other Southwest Conference members."

The regents' ruling, made at the closing session of a two-day meeting, gives Texas Athletic Director Darrell Royal the authority to decide when and if a Negro may participate in the school's athletic program. Royal was not available for comment. The ruling said in part: "Any student is entitled to the use of all the facilities of the

At One Time Farmers in Morocco Were Armed, Afraid to Live Alone

BY JACQUELINE FIX

Leon Nahon, new geography instructor at the University of Wisconsin Fox Valley Center, can remember days before Moroccan independence when "farmers were afraid to live alone on the farms and almost always were armed."

Nahon, a Frenchman born in Casablanca, Morocco, left Morocco in 1958 because opportunities for a young person were scarce in the newly independent country, and immigrated to Canada.

He declines to comment on the current Moroccan-Algerian dispute, saying he is out of contact with the situation there and "is not interested in politics."

Owned Farms

Nahon's family settled in Morocco many years ago, and his father owned many farms. Nahon studied four years at the Agricultural Institute in Paris to prepare himself to manage the farms.

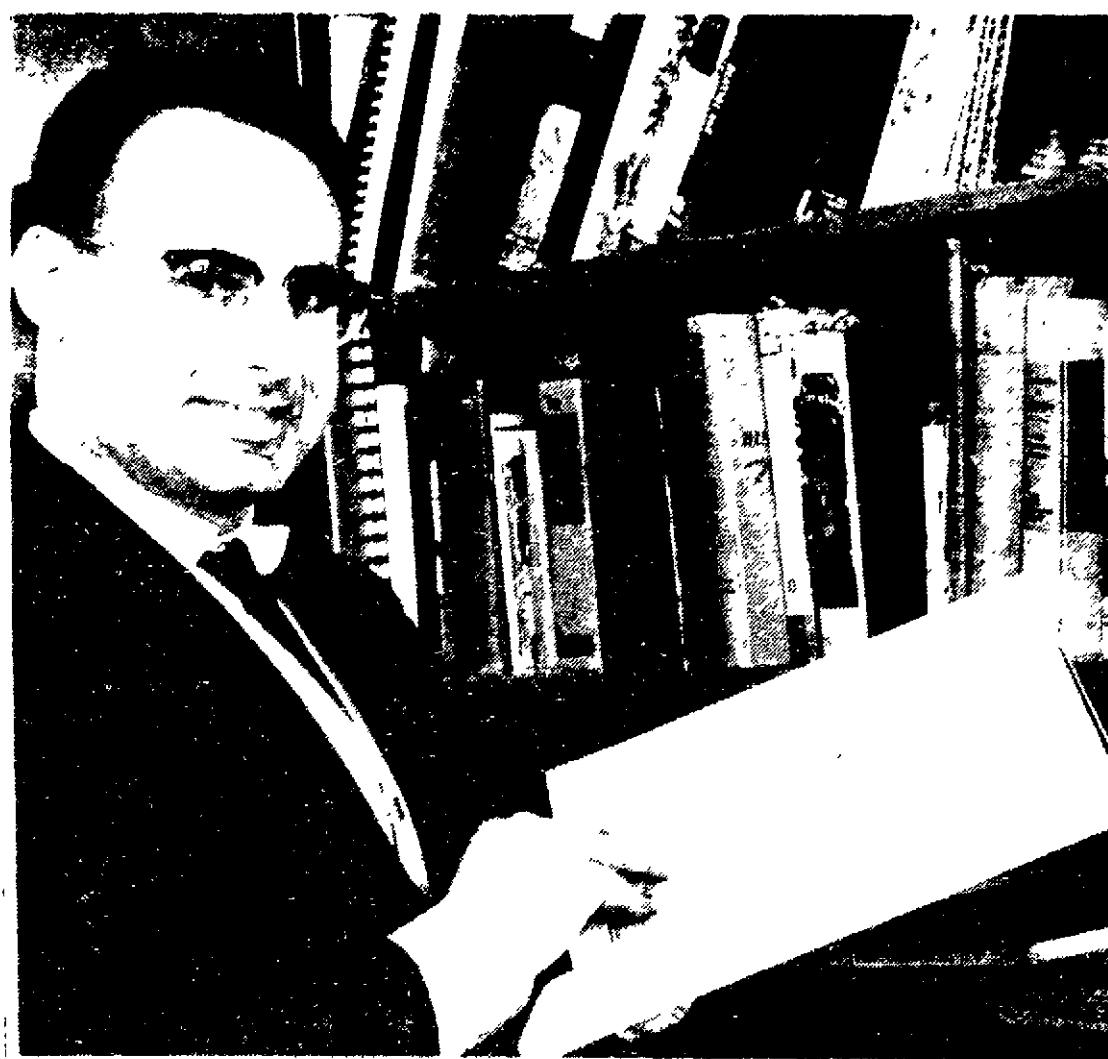

However, there was a strong reaction against the French in Morocco before independence was granted in 1956, leading to massacres in the country. Most of the unrest centered in the rural areas, Nahon said.

Because of the political and economic situation, Nahon and his family left Morocco in 1958 and spread over France and the world," he said. His parents and a brother now live in France, and another brother and a sister live in the United States. His brother now is a professor of French literature at Fordham University, Bronx, N.Y. Most of the French left Morocco, he said, and many came to Canada or France.

Chose Canada

Nahon said he "took an atlas and chose Canada" as the place to immigrate to. He selected Canada, he said, because it is one of the countries of the free world that wants immigrants. He now has Canadian citizenship, but may decide to take out American citizenship when he has fulfilled residence requirements.

He earned his master of arts degree in geography at the University of Montreal, and is completing work there on a doctoral "In Europe it is not so."

He said he knew many persons who could not find work in France. He was editor of the Canadian Geographical Review at the University of Montreal.

Gigantic

The "gigantic economy" of North America has amazed Nahon. "People here, if they want geography of the triangular region between the St. Lawrence and the Richelieu rivers in Canada, Europeans have many similar-

He studied the agriculture methods, specializations in rural areas, rural economy and way of life since 1860 in this area.

The farmers there resemble European farmers more than American, he said. Modernization of agriculture and emphasis on industrial rather than family-centered agriculture is necessary, he believes.

Cattle raising and dairy farming are the main forms of agriculture in Morocco, which has a primarily rural economy, Nahon said. The farms owned by Europeans have many similarities to Wisconsin farms, he said, but those owned by the natives are quite different.

SEYMOUR -- A fledgling group of laymen are providing a valuable service in northeastern Wisconsin to arouse the

Like California

He speaks with fond reminiscence of Morocco, which he calls a very beautiful country with a climate much like that of California.

"In this tiny country you can find almost all the features which are picturesque," Nahon said, from the coastal plains and beautiful seashores near Casablanca to the mountains capped with perpetual snow near Marrakech in the interior and the desert-like dry plains bordering the Sahara.

The people are mixed, he said, and include about 400,000 Europeans, mainly French and Spanish, and Arabs, Berbers, Jews and Negroes.

Word has been received this week that an information program will be held at the Wausau Hospital at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 21, in the interest of forming a lay society for Waushara and Green Lake counties. A Green Bay doctor will address the group. If formed it would become only the fourth society in the state.

Main Action

Primary activity of the group has been in Brown County where the County Medical Society has invited the State Board of Health mobile unit for X-rays, blood pressure tests and blood sugar tests for diabetics. The visit is planned for February 1964 and the same deal is open to Outagamie County if its medical society should decide to go along with the program.

The lay society is ready to assist at information programs, speakers at organizational meetings and generally assist the county medical societies in drawing attention to diabetes and its control.

The lay society covers Door, Winnebago and Outagamie counties. Since the area unit was formed a third society has begun in the Fort Atkinson area.

The state association operates a two-week camp for diabetic children at Camp Sidney Cohen near Delafield each summer and teaches them to give themselves insulin shots if they have not been doing it.

The society's constitution states its purpose as providing general information on diabetes. Supporting early detection programs, research and study, camps for diabetics and regular medical attention.

The society avoids medical or commercial controversies on the topic contending these are private matters between the physician and his patient. The group's business is conducted by a board of directors consisting of officers, committee chairman, past president and a representative of the Clinical Wisconsin Diabetes Association.

Monthly meetings are held from September through June. Current officers include Roy Chapelle, Green Bay, president; James White, Green Bay, vice president and program chairman; Mrs. Mary Puls, Seymour, executive secretary and publicity chairman; Mrs. Verona Helmke, Seymour, treasurer; Ernest J. McMullen, Green Bay, recording secretary and membership chairman; and Jeanette Van Camp, Green Bay, has been named medical ad-hospitality chairman.

Scouts Swarm Over Ripon's Campus to Watch Ankerson

BY RALPH MUELLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

RIPON—Ripon's Jack Ankerson has spent a number of anxious moments in the past three years while directing the Ripon winged-T pro type offense.

None, however, will be as anxious as the moments he will spend on the morning of Dec. 2 at the Phi Delt House on the Ripon College campus.

The agile, 6-4, 215-pound quarterback will be waiting for a possible long-distance phone call from Chicago on that morning. Several National Football League teams, with the St. Louis Cardinals being one of them, have requested that Ankerson be near a phone at the time of the league player draft.

The teams usually follow this formality so they can contact the players they are high on for last-minute information just moments prior to selecting them in the draft.

Open to Offers

The most likely question will be, "Will you play with us if we select you?" and the answer will most likely be, "Yes". Ankerson prefers the NFL but is open to all possible offers from the American Football League and Canada.

The lanky former Neenah High School athlete makes no effort to hide the fact that the real dream would be his selection by the Green Bay Packers. But, he goes on, "We have to be realistic."

He knows it will be quite a challenge to make a professional team and thinks the challenge will be that much harder because he comes from a small college.

Scouts have been swarming around the Ripon campus by the score this season. Some of them ask to see him throw long passes and others have him run short and long distances and put a stop-watch on him.

Ripon Head Coach John Storzer claims he isn't qualified to really give an opinion as to whether, or not, Jack can play pro ball because he has just worked with college boys. "The I remember the one that went for a touchdown against Lawrence last year."

Only 2 Exceptions

Ankerson has heard from all NFL clubs, except the Washington Redskins and Baltimore Colts. San Diego, Houston, Kansas City, Buffalo, and Denver have been the AFL representatives in touch with him, and one Canadian League team, Montreal, has contacted Storzer for information.

The Cowboys have told Ankerson he is high on their draft list and the Detroit Lions have asked him if he would object to being shifted to another position.

"Just so I play," was Jack's reply to that question. The scout obviously had reference to shifting him to a tight end position.

It is very conceivable that Ankerson could play at that position as he feels he could gain 20 to 30 pounds without losing agility.

Ankerson calls his own plays with only about five having been sent in by Storzer in the past

Outstanding Leadership

In addition to a 64-per cent completion percentage, Ankerson's strong points include toughness and outstanding leadership.

Storzer is amazed at the leadership. "They really respect him," the coach said. Ankerson is Cadet Lt. Col. of the Ripon ROTC Corps.

"They kid him and he gives backs in small college football. It right back," says Storzer. "He gets along with everyone real well."

The Ankerson success story could be set as an example for 60-40 in favor of passing. He has many high school kids, who realize "too" late that they should have gone out for football.

Ankerson went out "late" as he played only one year of prep have come to the Ripon practice football at Neenah High under sessions and still others watch the late March "Bat" Battered man.

Gives It Up

Only 5-7 and 130 pounds after his freshman season, he decided to give up the sport because he was too small and began concentrating on basketball speed, how far he can throw a football, etc.

With the growth of about seven inches in the next two years, Ankerson went out his senior year and led the Rockets to a share of the Mid-Eastern Conference crown.

Upon graduation, Ankerson was considered "big school" basketball material and considered several offers, especially one from Michigan State.

Ripon cage coach Kermit "Doc" Weiske got hold of him one day and really sold him on Ripon, and Ankerson says it was one of his best decisions. Jack says he usually puts down the New York Giants, and Mark Aamot, a little quarterback from the same school.

Ankerson credits both Batterman and Storzer with his development as a passer. There may be some question as to his faking ability as it is really one of unknown quality. "The Ripon offense is not really one of deception", says Jack.

His physical development wasn't really a surprise to the Ankerson family. Jack's dad, Cliff (a bowler of note in the Neenah area) is 6-4 and younger brother Doug (a sophomore at Ripon) is in the process of growing right now.

Doubles Unit

"There'll be a battle of Ankersons for that No. 1 spot on the tennis team," says Jack. Jack and Doug will both compete for the position and are likely to form the No. 1 doubles unit for the Redmen next spring.

Scouts generally rate George Bork of Northern Illinois, and Ankerson as the two top quarter-

Bork throws passes on almost every play while Ankerson has thrown slightly more than 120 this season. His ratio has been 60-40 in favor of passing. He has picked up well over 1,000 yards passing and more than 90 yards rushing.

How do the pro scouts contact him? Well, a number of them have come to the Ripon practice sessions and still others watch the games. Most of them, however, send questionnaires.

Vital Statistics

The questions concern the vital statistics such as height, weight, age, etc. They also want to know his military draft status, his speed, how far he can throw a football, etc.

They also want to know about his placekicking ability and his longest field goal which was 43 yards against Cornell last season. His longest football throw in a game came against St. Olaf last season. Ankerson surprised his receiver by waving him further and further down field and then let loose with a 70-yard heave over the receiver's head.

Another item that appears on nearly every questionnaire asks him to put down the best players of the season. Vissers, hurt in the first football game, hasn't reported for practice as yet. Langner, Voss, Beisenstein and Vissers all are about 6-0.

Since Karisny was well school-

Zephyrs Begin Cage Season Friday Night

BY GEORGE MANCOSKY

MENASHA — St. Mary will pry the lid off the 1963-64 basketball season for Fox Cities high school squads when it entertains Wisconsin Rapids Assumption Friday night at the Menasha High School gym.

The Zephyrs, in their first season under Coach Bob Karisny, will play their second game two days later at Milwaukee Pius.

Karisny, who coached at Shiocton last year, succeeds his high school mentor, Ralph McCrone, as coach at his alma mater. Ed Spethman has succeeded Roger Harkins as junior varsity coach.

Six underclassmen were awarded letters last year but because of football injuries and other activities, Karisny hasn't had his entire squad together as yet. The seniors were on retreat the first three days last week.

Has Football Injury

Boys who earned letters for their 1962-63 efforts were Chuck Hoerke, Bill Martin, Mike Rausch and Ken Jahnke, seniors; and Tom Mortell and Kim Vanderhyden, juniors. Martin is still out with a football injury. Age 69, passed away Friday morning, Mr. Korsmoe and family resided in Appleton for 25 years, and were members of the Trinity Lutheran Church, Appleton. Woodcock and Grouse Offer Some Sporty Hunting

BY DAVE DUFFEY
Post-Crescent News Service

NEILLSVILLE—The big man looked hard at the little bird. "First one of these I ever shot," he said, "and they won't believe me when I tell them. I never thought I'd see this many birds to shoot at in the wild."

The big man was Bob Skoronski, offensive tackle for the Packers. The little bird was a woodcock, one of between 50 and 75 he had flushed from a tag der creek bottom in Clark county in about an hour and a half of hunting time.

In Wisconsin, probably more people know a Green Bay Pack-er than there are hunters ac-quainted with woodcock. This is along our starting point when fortunate, because for fast, sporty shooting the woodcock is unexcelled and those of us who like to hunt them don't like to share a good thing with a crowd.

Avid Hunter

Skoronski is an avid hunter, safe to say has produced more but because the football season woodcock for gunners than any and hunting seasons coincide his other dog in the U. S. and the hunting time is limited. We'd set up the hunting date a couple of weeks before and at 5 a.m. Monday morning Skoronski fled through the cover and wood-drove into the yard. Three 20 gauges and a 12 bore burned a lot of powder. Some birds fell. But more went on their erratic, Neillsville, who with his hunting partner, Herman Hagedorn, a garageman, know just about every woodcock and grouse in Clark county by its first name. When we got there, over breakfast with Art Schroeder, never thought I'd see this many birds to shoot at in the wild."

He said, "and they won't believe me when I tell them. I never thought I'd see this many birds to shoot at in the wild."

He said, "and they won't believe me when I tell them. I never thought I'd see this many birds to shoot at in the wild."

Looking Over a Days Bag of woodcock and partridge are Milo Mabie, Neillsville and Bob Skoronski, offensive tackle of the Green Bay Packers. This has been a particularly good season for woodcock because of the mild weather. The little birds remained in the state much longer than under normal conditions. SINGLE SHOT

The opening of the Wisconsin deer season is less than two weeks away. Most hunters have checked their gear, will be sighting in their rifles and know where they will be heading on opening day.

However, there are a few items that usually go overlooked or are left until the last minute and then passed up.

If you'll be out in a house trailer, tent-trailer or an ordinary tent, be sure to check over your heating facilities before leaving. Each year several hunters never come back to tell of the hunt because of a leak in a gas stove, a flash fire in a trailer or something else that goes wrong with the heating mechanism.

A good thing to do about a week ahead of time is to make a check list of what you'll need and things to do. It will save a lot of last-minute rat-racing.

Artists who wish to compete in the annual Duck Stamp design contest will have until Nov. 15 to submit entries, according to the Wildlife Management Institute.

A free copy of the leaflet, "Rules for the Annual Duck Stamp Design Contest," are available from the Office of Information, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington 25, D.C.

Harold Steinke of the State Conservation Department's area headquarters at Oshkosh will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Outagamie County Conservation Club at 8 p.m. Monday at the VFW hall in Freedom.

The local club is trying to boost membership and meeting attendance and all sportsmen are urged to attend. Plans also will be discussed for a membership campaign to be staged early in the new year.

The Freedom VFW hall is about 1/2-mile south of town on Highway 55.

From South Dakota comes this story:

Probably no one but a clergyman could bag a wild pheasant without using a gun. The Rev. William Wetmore did it.

Rev. Wetmore saw the bird in a field, ran toward it and the pheasant headed for a fence row. The bird became entangled in the wire and Rev. Wetmore promptly grabbed it. A recent newcomer from Montana, the reverend said he often hunted elk, but always used a gun for them.

Low Water Discouraging To Trappers

The trapping season is on! It opened Oct. 28 without a fanfare and there won't be much publicity during the muskrat and mink trapping season which runs through Jan. 15 in most of the state. But trapping provides recreation and income for thousands of Wisconsin sportsmen.

The Oct. 28-Jan. 15 is the wettest season for muskrat and mink trapping. The muskrat runs from Jan. 15 through March 15.

From the trappers' standpoint the low water has been discouraging. Wet sets are made in such a fashion that the trapped rat or mink drowns himself. Water is scarce this year and even in places where it is wet, the water is often too shallow which leads to "wring-offs" and the trapped quarry escaping minus a foot.

Plan to Revitalize Marion Mill Pond Recommended by Agencies

Proposal Would Give Community 65-Acre Fishing, Recreational Area

BY DICK McDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MARION—A plan to revitalize the Marion Mill Pond into a fishing and general recreation pond has been recommended by various soil and water conservation agencies as well as the Wisconsin Conservation Department.

John Nimlos, Waupaca county soil conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, correlated the various reports into a plan of action which was submitted to Blaine Miller, a local insurance agent, who with other local people have been concerned over the growing deterioration of the mill pond.

Dan Polz, district fish manager, worked with Nimlos in preparing the suggestions, which could give Marion a 65-acre lake to replace the silted, muck-bottomed pond it now possesses.

The pond is fed by the North Branch of the Pigeon River, which has collected and deposited much muck in the pond to such a degree that only one third of the 65 acres consists of open water.

Empty for 2 Years

Nimlos said the plan is to drain the pond and keep it empty for about two years. This, he said, would give the muck a chance to settle and perhaps lower the bottom of the pond about 2 feet.

After the pond is drained for one year, Nimlos said it would be a good move to dredge out a channel for the river to follow.

This channel would offer a continued supply of fresh water which could possibly prevent winter "freeze out" of fish. The fish each year die because of the decaying organic matter which uses up the oxygen for the fish.

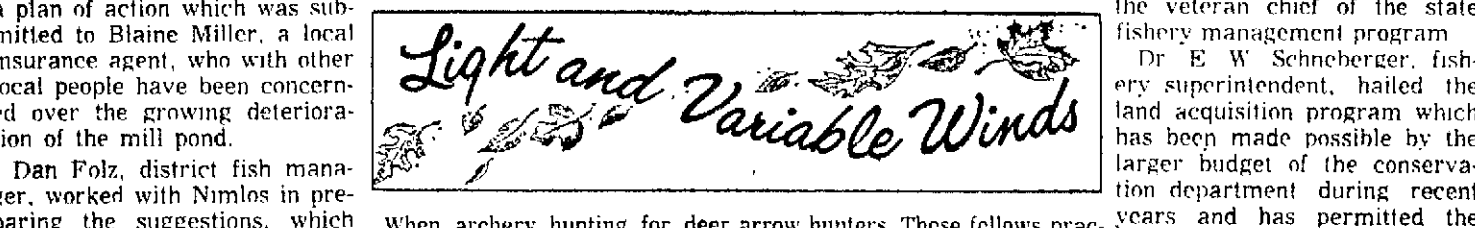

Nimlos said he suggested the muck dredged from the channel could be used to build up the shoreline or to create a number of islands, which would be unattainable except by boat.

Major Effort

He maintained it would take a rather major effort to drain the pond as the dirt in front of the 16-foot dam also would have to be removed.

He said when the dam is opened and the dirt removed, the stream will form its own channel, which does not necessarily have to be followed for the dredging operations.

If the project is to be undertaken by Marion City Council it would involve the acquisition of the water rights from owners of the mill.

When archery hunting for deer was first allowed in Wisconsin a lot of gunners put up a howl. They don't hunt with other weapons and could not stand the idea that any other else should be allowed out after deer for several weeks starting in September while they and their guns were barred. Then too there was the fear that there would be many dead deer in the woods with arrows stuck in them.

Now, after almost a score of years, the protests have died away. Some of the protesters have joined the archers while those who stuck to their guns have decided that archery season and its damage to the deer herd isn't worth hollering about.

I took up the ancient game of archery back in the '40's when deer were so very plentiful. The nearest I ever came to getting one was the time I cut the hair off a buck's back at twenty yards.

I had found a good deer trail coming into a backwoods clover field that looked like a sure thing. Making use of an old Indian trick, I hung my coat on a limb upwind from the trail and hid in the brush downwind.

When this buck came out he saw the coat and while he was giving it the eye, ear and nose treatment I raised up behind him and "let him have it." I would have got him, too, but there was a little twig about the size of the shin of a chick-a-dee that I should not have ignored. Halfway to the heart of the buck the feather of the arrow touched that twig and zoom! A tuft of hair in the deer trail told the story.

The best chance one has of getting a deer with bow and arrow is to join an organized party of bow-arrow hunters. These fellows practice archery all summer. They don't hunt with other weapons and they don't fish. They organize their weekend hunts in the point where the chances of one of them getting a deer are pretty good.

I was a member of one of these groups one time (there were no birds that year). We were on the way from one to another of their planned hunts when we spotted a deer out in a small field surrounded by woods. The car rolled to a stop in a cut and we all tumbled out. Fast and excited plans were made on the spot as bows were strung and arrow nocked.

The strategy was to surround the field by going around through the woods, leaving one who, after ten minutes, was to crawl back up the road out of sight in the ditch and drive the deer into the ambush.

Since I was the newest hand at the game and thus the most unpredictable at shooting I was delegated to do the ditch crawling. After the agreed interval I was in position and a peek through the tall grass disclosed the deer, undisturbed, right where we wanted it to be. We had it surrounded!

Driving a deer upon waiting archers must be done carefully for a bounding deer is hard to hit with an arrow. The idea is to frighten it only slightly. Watching the deer though the grass I raised my cap as a signal. The deer looked up for a moment then it resumed its grazing. I waved the cap—same waiting. When the members gathered, then I stuck my head up, and I saw a lot of silly grins, but the deer wouldn't move. So I You might say they were charwarded the deer on all four. Then I stood up.

To my utter surprise that deer, instead of running away, came toward me! About that time I noticed something peculiar about the animal. The wind was blowing leads all who hunt for fun rather than there was a bell around the bird of mystery, not only to hunters but to wildlife experts. Some talk knowingly about "flight birds" as opposed to local birds. It sounds good but no one has yet shown me how to tell a flight bird from a local and it could be done. I'm sure Mabie, who hunts them ceaselessly would know about it. All the books claim woodcock dine primarily on earthworms. I doubt this. I know of no one who has ever seen a woodcock eat an earthworm and the places they are usually in moist, acid soil where a trout fisherman could not find a worm if his reputation depended on it.

Makes Up Diet

Personally, I think when a woodcock drills into the ground he sifts in through his long-billed bill minute organisms, bugs, crustaceans etc. to make up his diet. But what makes him come and go, I have no idea. All I know is I'm happiest when I get into a flight of them.

A small gauge gun, bored open, with light loads of fine shot, is the ticket for woodcock. I've shot them with everything from a 12 gauge to a .410 and because the shots must be gotten off quickly and the birds are close (30 yards is an extremely long shot) the little .410 is a cripple, on larger birds at greater ranges, is just as good as a 12 gauge. But I've settled on a 20 gauge with lightloads of No. 8 shot as sure poison for the timberdoodles and the grouse that add spice to the hunt. Like the rest of us, Skoronski had to learn that "the who doesn't shoot is lost." Waiting just lets the bird get out of sight in the dense cover or your hunting partner zeroes in and knocks him down about the time you're ready to pull. After having a couple shot out from in front of him, missing a couple he rode out, and having one close - sitting bird brush the crown of his hunting cap as it came overhead, the big Packer tackle started to smack birds.

Short of Limit

That afternoon, although we were a couple of birds short of our 4-man bag-limit on woodcock and grouse (each hunter gets 5 woodcock, 3 ruffed grouse), we were slowed down considerably by a huge roast beef dinner Mrs. Mabie prepared for us.

There was still an hour's shooting time left, when we came out of the last piece of cover and Hagedorn said, "we could go back to the morning place and fill everybody out in about half an hour."

Skoronski, still looking at the little brown, long-billed bird with a splash of white on its tail, shook his head. "To heck with that limit stuff," he said. "I had more shooting in a day than I've ever had. Nobody's going to believe me when I tell you Let's leave some for next time."

That day did.

Deer Population in Waupaca County Has Increase, Warden Says

Cites Number of Animals Killed By Automobiles

WAUPACA — Conservation Warden Rex Oatman told the county board the deer population is increasing in the county, judging from the number of deer being struck by cars.

Oatman said 141 deer were killed by cars since the November, 1962, meeting of the county board.

He said the enforcement of the game laws in the county during the year has been excellent due to the cooperation of the 16 county wardens, the sheriff's department, county police and the water patrols. He said there are now three state game wardens in the county.

Oatman reported there were over 300 arrests made during the year, most of which were for fishing without licenses. He said this was lower than last year's arrests, presumably due to stricter law enforcement.

Arrests Down

He mentioned the boating arrests were down and he could recall only one drowning during the year. He commended the county for furnishing the water patrol and pointed out 75 per cent of the $3,600 spent by the county for the water patrol and the county wardens is being refunded by the state.

He said there have been four training sessions with the county wardens on proper procedures in arrests and search.

Oatman indicated the deer population is decreasing in the county, mentioning White Lake as an example. He said ducks, however, are increasing in the Fremont area.

He also reported many fish were planted in lakes in the county by the fisheries division.

Oatman said there were quite a few boating accidents on the O'Leakes and said it is federal forests.

State Park Land Is Game Refuge

MADISON—Hunting is prohibited on only about 3,000 acres of the nearly 120,000 purchased for public recreation by the Conservation Department during the past two years, it was announced today.

Under Wisconsin law, all lands purchased for state parks automatically become game refuges where shooting is forbidden. This is primarily safety legislation based on intense public use.

The current park area in Wisconsin where hunting is not allowed totals 23,439 acres. This compares to about 4.3 million acres in the state open to public hunting on hunting and fishing grounds and county, state, and federal forests.

U. S. Wants Anti-Pollution Step at Mills

Federal Official Says Action Needed In Menominee Basin

MENOMINEE, Mich. (AP) — The Chairman of a Federal State conference on pollution in the Menominee River basin has recommended that remedial action be taken at Niagara and Marquette, Wis., and Norway and Menominee, Mich.

Suggestions by the chairman, Murray Stein, could result in pollution abatement orders by the secretary of health, education and welfare.

Stein proposed that steps be taken by the Kimberly Clark Corp. at Niagara to abate pollution by wood chips and fibers, and by the city of Niagara to eliminate pollution by effluent from the Niagara sewage treatment plant as already ordered by state pollution authorities. He indicated the steps to abate pollution by untreated sewage at Norway should be accelerated.

The chairman also proposed measures to abate pollution by the Scott mills at Marquette and Menominee. The company's control program was put on the record by T. E. Wisniewski, director of the Wisconsin Water Pollution Committee. Stein commended the city of Marquette on its progress toward abating pollution. The American Can Company's pollution abatement efforts at its Marathon division mill also were outlined.

Beef Cattle Will be Issue In Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP)—A major farm issue in next year's presidential campaign doubtless will be beef cattle price declines and an increasing volume of beef imports.

Cattle raisers and feeders in all parts of the country have been shouting their complaints over this year's big drop in cattle prices, and what they call the dark prospects for the future.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman ran into this in most of his recent report and review meetings with farmers while seeking their views on future federal farm policies.

Prices of fed cattle — a category that provides the better qualities of beef — have been running from 20 to 25 per cent below a year earlier.

What's responsible for the situation cattlemen find themselves in?

Cattlemen have a ready answer. They contend that increased imports and government feed-grain price policies are largely responsible. Kennedy administration farm officials take a somewhat different view. They say that cattlemen are largely responsible because they increased production too much.

Washington Sees 'Nibbling at Edges' to Affect Support Elements, Tactical Air Units

BY FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next year's military budget will provide for "nibbling around the edges" of huge U.S. forces posted overseas but no significant troop reductions in Western Europe or the Far East, informed sources said Saturday.

These sources told a reporter that whatever reductions are contemplated will involve a further cutback in rear echelon support elements and probably some trimming of tactical air units in Europe.

But they said they expect few, if any, combat ground force cuts abroad at least through the fiscal year which starts next July and runs to mid-1965.

Adequate Funds Expected
The new budget, now in the final stages of preparation, takes into account the costs involved in maintaining forces at planned levels in various places. Speculation about impending big-scale U.S. troop withdrawals, especially from Germany, was stoked by the recent "exorcise Big Lift." This operation saw Air Force transports carry more than 15,000 soldiers of the 2nd Armored Division to West Germany from Ft. Hood, Tex., in less than three days.

If it was a trial balloon, it was shot full of holes quickly and the Kennedy administration swiftly recoiled in the line holding it aloft.

Reassure Germans
Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance went to Germany and sought to reassure the Germans. It was stressed that Big Lift was a demonstration of U.S. ability to reinforce the North Atlantic Treaty Organization promptly in a period of tension, not a forerunner to slithering down the U.S. military presence in West Germany.

The uneasiness in Germany, quieted at least temporarily by the West German government, the uneasiness in Germany, the uneasiness in Germany,

Anniversary Of Nazi Terror Noted

DACHAU, Germany (AP)—Solemn memorial services were held throughout Germany for Jewish victims of Crystal Night — the night 25 years ago when Nazi-led mobs roamed German cities burning synagogues, beating Jews and looting Jewish property.

Special services were held Saturday at Dachau and Flossenbürg, in Bavaria, sites of infamous concentration camps. West German newspapers devoted an entire page in their editions to the anniversary.

The night of Nov. 9, 1938 became known as Crystal Night because of the smashing of windows in Jewish stores.

1st Organized Terror
It was the first organized, large-scale terror against the Jews in Nazi Germany. Thousands of Jews were taken to concentration camps.

Some were released later but others were never seen again. The Nazi government called the attacks on Jews a "spontaneous reaction" to the assassination by a Jewish refugee of Ernst von Rath, a secretary of the German Embassy in Paris.

It was the excuse the Nazis used to speed up their program against the Jews. The groundwork had been laid some years before with boycott of India, Nepal, Ceylon, Indo-China and Burma.

Nixon Keeps in Touch With GOP Leaders

BY JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is re-establishing contacts with Republicans in all sections of the country and urging them to withhold 1964 presidential nomination commitments.

The former vice president, who lost the presidency by a hairline in 1960, is described by associates as spreading the doctrine that it is too early to tell what is going to happen in the nomination scramble.

In his conversations with Republican leaders, Nixon has heaved to the line that he is not a candidate himself and does not foresee any likelihood that he will be injected into the contest.

Cool Toward Candidates
But he has made it clear he is less than enthusiastic about either New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who had formally entered his name, and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who is expected to do so later on.

His theme has been that time may bring forward a candidate more acceptable to middle-of-the-road Republicans and one with a better chance of being elected. Thus far he hasn't mentioned any names.

One party leader familiar with the situation said he credits Nixon with sincerity in his declaration of noncandidacy. "I think he is trying to preserve his contacts with the party to be in a position where he can have some influence on the kind of platform we adopt and the kind of candidate we nominate," this leader said.

"But, like anyone else, if the nomination were offered him he would take it."

Another party leader, who, unlike his colleague, opposes Goldwater, voiced the opinion that so long as Rockefeller stays in the contest it will be difficult to develop any strength for a third runner.

Indonesia Plans to Nationalize Oil Firms

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The Indonesian Parliament has approved two bills providing for the eventual nationalization of foreign oil facilities in Indonesia. Three American-owned firms — Stanvac, Caltex and Pan American — and British Shell have already agreed to the nationalization plans.

Under the agreements, the firms become contractors to state-run corporations, with profits split on a 60-40 basis in favor of the government.

Radioactive Iodine Count Low in State

MADISON (AP) — The State Board of Health reported today that "extremely low" daily averages of radioactive iodine 131 and Strontium 90 were detected in Wisconsin milk during October.

The board announced that iodine 131 content in Wisconsin milk during the last 12 months has averaged only 14 per cent of the acceptable standard established by the Federal Radiation Council.

Funston Hits At Trade With Soviet Union

N. Y. Exchange Head Would Follow Reds' Obstructive Course

BY JOHN O. KOEHLER

BERLIN (AP) — Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said Saturday his latest encounter with Soviet Premier Khrushchev convinced him the United States should not sell wheat or any other goods to the Russians.

"In dealing with the Soviets, we must be as difficult and mean as they are," Funston said in an interview. "We must obstruct them as much as possible and we must not concede anything."

Funston was one of 21 American businessmen who met with Khrushchev in Moscow Wednesday and saw him again Thursday.

Soviets Ignore Facts
"What shocked me most about the meeting was the complete disregard for facts," Funston said. "I went away with a sense of frustration. How do you deal with people who lie to you and to whom facts mean nothing?"

Among other things, Khrushchev told the Americans the U.S. Army convoy blockade on the Berlin autobahn earlier in the week was the fault of the Americans for failing to adhere to "established procedures." He said the incident almost caused total war. Khrushchev refused to say what he meant by "established procedures" but Funston questioned Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin about it.

"Zorin told me that the trouble occurred because the Americans tried to move a convoy of more than five vehicles over the autobahn to West Berlin," Funston said.

The reason for the holdup, however, was that the Americans refused a Soviet demand to line up the troops on the road to be counted by the Russians. Funston said he had no doubt the Russians "are out to deny us free access to Berlin."

"The Western powers must now resolve not to give them an inch anywhere. If necessary, we must take the risk of shooting. Let the chips fall where they may. We won't have any incidents if we do this."

Chimpanzees Used in Tests Of Nerve Gas in Warfare

HOLLOMAN AIR FORCE BASE, N.M. (AP)—Holloman's famous chimpanzees, pioneers of the space age, are now being used in nerve gas tests.

Chimpanzees recovered their senses much quicker than the monkeys.

"The idea of the gases is to impair, not destroy," Reynolds said. "None of the animals is injected with a lethal dose of the gas."

With the threat of complete destruction in a thermonuclear war, with neither side apt to win, other warfare tactics are being devised.

Nerve gas is one. The theory is that complete immobilization of the enemy, short of death, would give troops the opportunity to take over an area while its residents were in a paralyzed condition and unable to resist — much different than the horrible destructiveness of a hydrogen bomb conflict.

The gases are being developed at the Army's Chemical Center at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. Reynolds said each year about 3,000 chemical agents are checked as possible nerve gases.

"Some of the chimps are highly trained animals," Reynolds said. "Their responses to certain tasks at control panels were quick, alert and correct."

Simplicity Is Keynote Rockefeller Tries for Grass-Roots Support

BY ROBERT T. GRAY

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's usually elaborate campaign operation on the road has been simplified for his grass-roots appeal to New Hampshire voters.

This development reflects apparent concern that the large corps of aides and advisers that normally accompanies the governor on the campaign trails would be no asset in New Hampshire.

The New York governor is counting on a folksy, handshaking approach in his effort to win support from the state's Republicans, who could decide his political future.

The elaborate campaign operation that Rockefeller brought to New Hampshire in a brief visit last month created an aura of affluence and high-level political organization alien to the small cities and rural areas of the Granite State.

The Rockefeller road operation also invited unfavorable comparisons with that of Sen. Barry Goldwater, who holds a long lead in this early stage of the contest for the New Hampshire presidential preference primary. The Arizona senator has not yet declared himself a candidate but is expected to do so.

The relative simplicity of Goldwater's political tours has been noted with increasing frequency in accounts of his activities. Despite Goldwater's lead, Rockefeller's campaign leaders in New Hampshire insist that he is doing well and that his

NEW YORK (AP) — A small army of police and federal agents fanned out over a wide area Saturday in search of clues in the hijacking of a gem shipment that might have been the richest haul in the nation's history.

Police estimates of the value of the jewelry and gold bars taken Friday at airport by five obviously well-rehearsed bandits ranged from $1 to $5 million.

One police official said "slightly over half" of the physical bulk of the loot had been recovered in a station wagon used by the AAA Jewelers Service to carry gems to and from merchants in Manhattan.

The recovered loot consisted of eight gold bars weighing 15 pounds apiece and some trinkets of little value. All the jewelry and gold was insured against theft.

Defer Realignment Of State Air Board

Post-Crescent Staffing Bureau

MADISON (AP) — A realignment of power and a possible modification of policy of the five member State Board of Aeronautics will be deferred until the eligibility of a new nominee to the board chosen by Gov. John W. Reynolds is determined by the state supreme court.

The board, after a brief flurry of argument Friday declined to seat William Thomas of Madison, named recently by Gov.

Mayor of Oslo Visits Madison For 3-Day Period

MADISON (AP) — Mayor Robert Stranger of Oslo, Norway, plunged into a three-day visit to Oslo's sister city Saturday, convinced that Wisconsin has maintained Norwegian traditions in a brilliant and convincing way.

The mayor and Mrs. Stranger arrived in Madison after a drive from Chicago and were welcomed at a reception by Mayor Henry E. Reynolds.

As he received a key to the city, Stranger said he had looked forward "longingly" to the Wisconsin portion of his trip.

It is Stranger's sixth visit to the United States, but he said this meeting with the famous Wisconsin state has made me a little nervous, but I am full of expectations.

Stranger attended the Northwestern-Wisconsin football game as a guest of Mayor Reynolds. His busy schedule in Madison includes dinner parties, a tour of the city, visits to state offices and the University of Wisconsin.

Stranger will leave Madison Tuesday for a three-day visit to New Orleans.

Reynolds and sworn in as a member of the commission to succeed Gordon Leonard of Milwaukee.

The board acted after an opinion from the attorney general's office advising it to maintain its present membership and to defer the seating of Thomas until the court decides whether the governor's appointment of him without benefit of confirmation by the state senate was valid under the law.

Leonard told the board he regards it as his duty to remain on the board until his successor is "qualified" and he understands the meaning of the term.

Eligible to Sit
Thomas said he has been advised by counsel that he is eligible to sit as a member of the board, but he left the meeting after Don Olson of Two Rivers, board chairman, said he was compelled to act according to the opinion of the state attorney general.

Thomas' seating would probably reverse the balance of power on the board, which has acted by a three to two vote in many major controversies and policy decisions during the last several years.

Olson was elected board chairman in August, after a chair minority had asked for a postponement of the election until Thomas' swearing in. The incident apparently posed the possibility that he may be replaced if Thomas is eventually confirmed or if the supreme court decides that his nomination during a period when the state senate was not in session was valid.

Other members of the board are Don Love of Green Bay, Arlen West of Plover and Ted Cole of Cashton.

Gift Bazaar Set Saturday at Church

OSHKOSH — The annual Gift Bazaar, sponsored by the Aquinas Club of St. Peter Catholic Church, will be held from 2 to 9 p.m. Saturday in the school gymnasium.

The highlight of the bazaar will be an auction, which will begin at 7 p.m. Auctioneer S. G. Nowacki will "sell" a variety of items, including antiques and four marble candlesticks. The candlesticks were made from marble obtained from the communion rail of the old St. Peter Church.

The bazaar booths will feature toys, Christmas items, books, records, and plants. Many games will also be in operation. Bazaar co-chairmen are Mrs. J. G. Stratz and Mrs. Walter Ornum. Booth and other chairmen are Mmes. Peter Welch, George Faust, Lee Weigert, Harold Gerou, Harold Ludwig, Victor Darnieder, Walter Wright, Donald Zahalka, Herbert Burgett, Robert Macke Jr., James Williamson, Frederick

Church Society Plans Breakfast

OSHKOSH — The director of the St. Norbert College Philosophy Department, Thomas W. Phelan, will speak at the St. Peter Catholic Church Holy Name Society breakfast after the 7:45 a.m. mass Sunday. His topic will be "I Have Chosen You."

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis M. McKeough, pastor of the church, is spiritual director of the organization. Officers are Cyril Belongie, president; Melville Thomas, vice president; Neil Murphy, secretary, and Robert Plier, treasurer.

Methodist Groups List Plans

OSHKOSH — A family potluck dinner, a Woman's Society dinner meeting and a hayride are the activities that members of the Algoma Boulevard Methodist Church will participate in this week.

Tonight, beginning at 5:30 p.m., a family potluck dinner will be held at the church. Members have been asked to bring their own table service and a dish for the buffet table. The film, "John Wesley," which deals with the early events of Wesley's life, will be shown at the dinner.

Miss Edna Hutchens, back in the United States on retirement furlough after a term as principal of a Methodist High School in Kanpur, India, will be the main speaker at the Woman's Society dinner meeting which begins at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. Miss Hutchens will speak on "Christian Recruitment." Junior and senior high school girls have been invited to attend this meeting.

The Wedding Band group will meet at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Charterhouse for a hayride. Reservations must be made with Mary Jane Burkhardt before Thursday.

A Program to Acquaint Lourdes High School students with the programs of Catholic colleges in five states was held Thursday evening. The annual College Night program for students and their parents began at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Above, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Fisher and their daughter

Schools to Mark Education Week

OSHKOSH — Read and Washington School Parent-Teacher Associations will be among many PTA groups who will sponsor special programs this week—American Education Week.

An Open House, with visits to classrooms and a social hour in the All-Purpose Room, will be held for parents Monday evening at Read school. Parents attending the Washington School PTA Tuesday evening meeting will hear a discussion of the "past, present and future of Washington School." Taking part will be Miss Eleanor Ryan, Washington PTA Historian, and Donald Herlache, Principal.

The second grade mothers will have charge of refreshments for the Read School Pen House. Refreshments chairman is Mrs. Elizabeth Shirtz. She will be assisted by Mmes. Eugene Ziemer, Charles Novotny, Robert Staerkel, Edward Eberhart, Clifford Meyers, Robert Stoll, Leroy Georgeson, Jack Gudden, Dale Schumacher, Kenneth Warren and Adrian Burton.

Parent Teacher conferences will also be held this week at Read School.

Use Clay Pots for Popular Poinsettia
Poinsettias, the most popular Christmas flowering plant, grow larger foliage and keep their lovely flowers longer in porous red clay pots. Recent tests prove that thin-walled easily over-watered synthetic pots, which cannot give poinsettias proper drainage, tend to inhibit both the size and the lasting qualities of this traditional holiday gift plant.

Clever Gift Idea

Clay pots filled with favorite floral fragrances of bath salts and colorfully wrapped make thoughtful Christmas presents for indoor gardeners.

Actress Gives 20th Century Club Program

OSHKOSH — Actress and model, Fern Fels, charmed members of the Twentieth Century Club Saturday in a "Return Engagement." The Chicago native presented two dramatic monologues, "Company for Dinner," and "How to Cook Without Realizing It." She appeared at a club meeting last January when she presented a monologue entitled "If Money Talks, How to Talk Back."

The actress has appeared in industrial shows and summer stock with such entertainment personalities as Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca, June Havoc and Edward Everett Horton. She has modeled for magazine and newspaper advertisements and has appeared on the television show "What's My Line?"

Mrs. Carl Schloesser, first vice president and program chairman for the year, presided over the third meeting of the season. President Mrs. Robert Y. Dove was out of the city.

The hostess committee for the program was headed by Mrs. James H. Mailahn. She was assisted by Miss Lucille Mancy and Mmes. B. A. Mosling Jr., William C. Niemuth, Everett Pyle, Gilbert Rhyner, John F. Schultz, E. J. F. Smith, H. J. Sullivan, W. K. Watts and H. J. Witasek.

Arrange Plants Tastefully

Many refreshing and colorful indoor displays can be created by combining well-mated flowering plants, that like the same soil and growing conditions, in a single large clay pot. One pair that grows nicely together includes the Sinningia, a large velvety gloxinia with purple, white and pink blossoms, and the Saintpaulia African violet.

Fun and Games were the order of the day at the YMCA Carnival Friday. Proceeds from the program are slated for the Ranji Aaron Memorial Project. Winnebago Hospital Sends Patients Home To Be Wage Earners

Pilot Program Shows Institution Purpose Is Other Than Custodial

OSHKOSH — Once thought of only as custodial institutions, county hospitals now are revising that concept and are returning patients to their communities as wage earners.

Winnebago County Hospital has undertaken such a pilot program and will mark its first anniversary within a few weeks.

Supt. William O. Vogel said two patients are nearing the end of their first year back in the community, earning wages rather than being supported by the county. Each had been in the hospital for several years.

Two others also had been returned to their community but are now back at the hospital.

"Had we been able to devote more time to their placement situation, we feel these two also would have been able to stay on in their community," Vogel explained. They had been back in the community for less than a year.

Conditional Release

The patients being returned to the community are given conditional releases. If the patient completes one year back in the community without being returned for further hospitalization, he is considered under state law as being legally competent. County and state jurisdiction then ends for that patient.

During the fiscal year up to June 30, nine patients were given conditional releases by the county hospital. A tenth patient was given a voluntary release.

It is the hope of Dr. R. H. Bitter, medical director at the county hospital, Dr. John Petersik, consulting psychiatrist, and Vogel that this program of conditional releases for patients can be done without adding new equipment or additional personnel while still increasing the number leaving the hospital.

Vogel cited a twofold benefit from this pilot program. First was the benefit to the patient who can return to his home rather than remain many years in custodial care. Second is that each time the hospital is able to release someone, the county is released from sustaining that person in the hospital at its weekly per capita cost which for the last fiscal year was $32.73.

Screening, Selecting

"We have begun a program of screening and selecting those patients who seem to be good candidates for release," the hospital superintendent pointed out. "They are evaluated by medical staff upon recommendation and suggestions made by hospital employees. We welcome the suggestions of the nurses, aides and other employees as to which patients are potential candidates for release."

The hospital's registered occupational therapist and those working with her attempt to screen the placement situation of the patient in the community, seeking work, room and board for the patients. They also follow up these patients and how they are going in the community.

"The big problem is making sure the patients can get through that first year, that they can make the adjustment back to a community from which they have been gone for several years," Vogel continued.

"To assure that this is done, we have the released patient returned to the hospital every two months for consultation and further evaluation with Dr. Bitter and Dr. Petersik.

Proper Medication

"Further, we are assuring ourselves that they are receiving proper medication during the initial one-year release period. If a patient is unable to purchase the necessary medication out of his own funds, we provide them with an amount for two months, replenishing it if needed on each return visit to the hospital.

"It is far cheaper to spend $1 a week on medication than the weekly per capita cost of hospitalization," Vogel stressed.

"We are pleased with the results of the program thus far and hope to expend it as the months go by. This has been done despite the inequities in the formula for reimbursement to county hospitals."

Bill 170-S is pending before the Legislature to revise the state aid program and to encourage county hospitals to develop active treatment services for the mentally ill.

Shaped Like Half An Orange is the new framework for the planetarium which will be part of the new Halsey Science Center at Oshkosh State College. Concrete arches for the planetarium dome were put into place last week. Parts of the Halsey Science Center now are in use and the entire building is to be ready by the opening of the second semester. Rev. Paul W. Lueders Is Dean Of Oshkosh Lutheran Clergy

Pastor Has Served Bethlehem Church for Span of 40 Years

BY ALLAN EKVAL

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — Members of Bethlehem Lutheran Church several weeks ago honored the church's pastor for 40 years.

The Rev. Paul W. Lueders, and his wife, The 40 years of continuous pastoral duties here makes him dean of the Lutheran ministers and possibly dean of all the Oshkosh clergymen.

Pastor Lueders' taking the Oshkosh pastorate on Oct. 14, 1923, was not his first introduction to Bethlehem Lutheran Church. He vicaried here during the 1913-1914 school year when he also taught in the church's school.

He is the second pastor to serve the church which was organized in 1901. The Rev. Ernest Schierf was installed as pastor Jan. 1, 1901, and served until the spring of 1923 when he became the Oshkosh postmaster.

Concordia Grad

Pastor Lueders came here that fall after serving pastorates in Missouri Synod churches at Froid, Mont., and Edgeley, N. D. A native of Reedsburg, Wis., he received his college education at Concordia College, Milwaukee, and his theological training at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis.

He and Mrs. Lueders were married in 1919 and have two children, John, Oshkosh, a sales engineer, and Ruth, who is the wife of Dr. Joseph Hind of the University of Wisconsin faculty. There are four grandchildren.

Rev. Paul W. Lueders

Bought Home

South Wisconsin District and Bethlehem Church has purchased a home at the corner of Elmwood Street and Algoma Boulevard adjacent to the Wisconsin State College - Oshkosh campus for use by college students who are members of Delta Mu Chapter of Gamma Delta, the college and university organization of the Lutheran Synodical Conference. The new associate pastor will reside in this house.

Bethlehem Lutheran Church has been located at the corner of W. New York Avenue and Ontario Street since the dedication of its first church building in December of 1901. This building was replaced by the present structure which was dedicated in February of 1957.

In Narthex

Carried over from the former church for use in the present edifice was the statue of Christ which had been on the large wooden altar of the old church and now has a commanding position in the narthex directly opposite the main entrance. The bell which sounds from atop the tower is to the side of the entrance and with parts of the pipe organ.

Those organ parts have been combined with parts of the pipe organ from the former Oshkosh Theater into the building of a new pipe organ. Pastor Lueders said the theater organ, which had been one of the best in the area, was acquired for $300 several years prior to the building of the new church as the result of a chance remark after a downtown combined Lenten service.

Some of the parts of that organ, percussion stops which would not be usable in a church, were sold to an Illinois skating rink owner for $250.

Tuesday will mark eight years since ground was broken for the new church building. Incorporated into the church structure is the former Fellowship Hall which was dedicated two weeks after the arrival of the Rev. M. Lueders as the new pastor. This building has been remodeled and the stone surfacing extended around part of it to continue the appearance of the new structure.

Winnebago Port Plans to be Aired

Consulting Firm Will Set Up Meeting With Aviation Group In Few Weeks, Official Says

OSHKOSH — Winnebago County Board of aviation committee members will learn within a few weeks what is suggested for members of the Milwaukee office of the consulting engineering firm, which has its headquarters at Kansas City and an office at New York City, with

A representative of the Howland, Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff firm of consulting engineering told the Post-Crescent that a meeting will be sought with the aviation committee within the next few weeks.

The engineering firm also has used what material compiled by Systems Analysis and Research Corp. on economic data that it could use to supplement its own research. The Systems Analysis and Research Corp. conducted an economic study for the county's presentation in the Civil Aeronautics Board's regional airport hearing.

Findings compiled by the consulting engineering firm have been viewed also by Col. Bennett Griffin, former director of the National Airport at Washington, who is aviation consultant for the engineering firm.

The basic services to be provided by the engineering firm are to analyze data pertaining to existing and future demands for air transport service in Winnebago County and the adjoining air service area and to analyze data pertaining to existing air transportation facilities in the county, such as runways, navigation aid and lighting, facilities for surface aircraft movement, terminal facilities, access and service roads, meteorological conditions, site development and possible expansion and evaluation in terms of FAA safety standards.

It also is to determine the facilities required to meet projected air transportation service requirements for Winnebago County, the cost of alternative facilities to meet future needs and the adequacy to meet regional air transport needs and to suggest a master plan for the airport.

Club meetings Monday night include Smile A While Club in Enterprise School, Wolf River Club in Wolf River School, Howlett Hustlers in Lakeside School, Local Lassies in Wesley Methodist Church here, Wee Three in Town of Algoma Hall and Beaver Valley in Clayton School.

Plain V-U 4-H Club will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Plain V-U School. Planned for Wednesday night are the Badgers 4-H Club in Leon Derber home south of here, Zion 3-C in Omro Junction School and Poygan Go-Getters in Enterprise School.

Guests will include Mrs. Rita Capper, Winnebago Parent Teachers Association president; Daniel Howman, Winchester Turn to Page 2, Col. 2

Winneconne Dedicates School Today

Band Concert to Starting at 2 p.m. Precede Program

WINNECONNE — A half hour concert by the Winneconne High School band under the direction of Clyde Cox at 1:30 p.m. today will precede the dedication program for the new addition to the Winneconne Community School District's Central School. The dedication will be at 2 p.m. today in the school gymnasium.

School Board President Joseph H. Anderson will introduce William Kahl, first assistant superintendent of the State Department of Public Instruction, who will give the dedicatory address.

Invocation will be by The Rev. Kenneth Craig of the Winneconne Baptist Church, and the benediction will be by the Rev. Robert Oram of the Winneconne Presbyterian Church.

Extends Welcome

Supt. Arthur H. Lehman will extend the welcome. Presentation of the building will be by Richard Thern of Thern Associates, Inc., Oshkosh architects. Acceptances will be by Anderson on behalf of the school board and administration, Principal V. J. Wadleigh for the high school faculty, Miss Edna Palecek, elementary supervisor, for the elementary teachers and student council president James Johnson for the student body.

Administering the business of the church congregation is a council of 40 members, half of whom are elected each year for two-year terms. Dr. Herbert Gaede has been the congregation president for this year up until late summer when he left the Oshkosh State College faculty to take a post in Nigeria, Africa, at a Missouri Synod teacher training school.

Succeeding to the post of president was Roland Schumacher, who was vice president. Other church officers are George Snell, recording secretary, Ira Koepke, financial secretary and James Megathlin, treasurer. Each council member is on a committee.

Oshkosh Couple Hangs Pictures At OSC Gallery

Checkis is the art instructor at Webster - Stanley Junior High School. His wife, Ruth, was the top award winner in the last Winnebago Land Art Fair.

Oshkosh Library Sets 2-Week Art Display

OSHKOSH — Original works of 18 area artists and reproductions of paintings by 21 well-known artists will go on display today for two weeks at the Oshkosh Public Library to launch the library's art loan-rental service.

A reception is planned for 2 to 5 p.m. today by the Friends of the Library organization which will operate the picture gallery Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Wednesday evenings starting Nov. 25.

Childe Hassam Lithos On Display at OSC

OSHKOSH — "Lithographs by Childe Hassam," an exhibition by one of America's foremost impressionist artists, will be displayed at the Reeve Memorial Union, Oshkosh State College, beginning at 8:30 a.m. Monday through Nov. 26. The exhibit contains 38 lithographs.

Oshkosh Solons To Review '64 Proposed Costs

Public Hearing Scheduled at New City Hall

OSHKOSH — Council members will meet at 7 p.m. Monday with city department heads to review the proposed 1964 budget prior to the public hearing scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday night. Both meetings will be in the council chambers at the new city hall.

The budget as now proposed calls for city expenditures of total $4,726,922 which is up $344,040 over the estimated expenditures for this year. These proposed expenditures already represent a decrease of $164,133 from the original department requests.

This part of the budget, according to City Manager Ray E. Harbaugh, represents a 6 per cent increase in operating expenditures. The debt service increase for sewer, water and city hall improvements show an increase of 15 per cent.

City Expenses

Proposed operating expenses for the city part of the budget indicates public safety taking 30.9 per cent of the proposed city budget costs; street maintenance, 16.9 per cent; garbage disposal, 5.9 per cent; recreation, 10.3 per cent; water supply, 15.6 per cent; administration, 7 per cent; cemetery operations, 1.6 per cent; welfare, 1.3 per cent; parking, 1.8 per cent; sewerage disposal, 3.2 per cent, and insurance, tax refunds, unemployment compensation, legislative trust funds and an emergency fund, 5.1 per cent.

Shared taxes and aids, such as the state income tax apportionment, utility tax, liquor tax and street aids, will provide about $1,606,000 or 33.3 per cent of the city aids, the portion of the city part of the budget to come from property tax levies is $799,201, or 19.1 per cent of the proposed budget revenues.

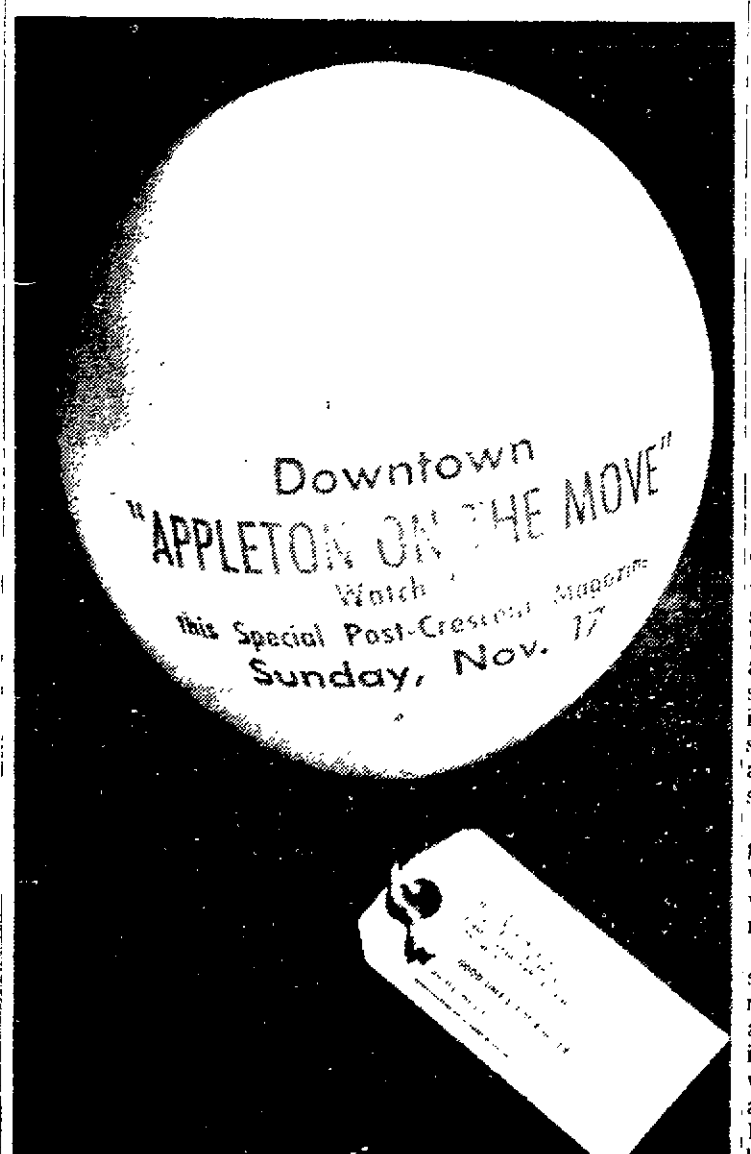

School Expenditures

Anticipated expenditures for the schools comes to $5,538,384, of which the city's share will be $3,491,573. The rural areas part of the Oshkosh School District will provide $712,954. Estimated revenues come to $1,329,857.

The estimated school costs for the rural areas are Town of Algoma, $200,232; Town of Black Wolf, $172,987; Town of Nekimi, $89,953; Town of Omro, $278; Town of Oshkosh, $213,778; Town of Utica, $27,148; and Town of Vinland, $8,578.

The city's share of state and county taxes has not been received and is listed in the proposed budget at the same figure for this last year, which was $656,534. Unofficial estimates place the city's share at close to or slightly more than $700,000.

Adoption of a final budget for 1964 is planned for the Nov. 20 meeting of the Oshkosh council.

The Post-Crescent will send 1,000 balloons of the "launching pad" this week, each balloon carrying the message of the dedication of the new parking ramp and the special Post-Crescent tabloid heralding the event to the "far reaches of the land." The exact message reads: "Downtown Appleton On The Move. Watch for this Special Post-Crescent Magazine, Sunday, Nov. 17."

Nearly half of the balloons, will carry a card attached which will notify the finder he is entitled to "two free hours" parking in downtown Appleton through the courtesy of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce and the Post-Crescent. All the finder needs do is present the card at one of the retail stores in downtown Appleton and he will be reimbursed for the cost of two hours parking time. This method is necessary as the law requires that money be placed in parking meters when the space is in use. The free parking offer is good from now until Christmas.

Children and parents will want to keep their eyes on the skies and to test the prevailing winds in their area in order to remain on the alert for the dedicatory — and pretty — balloons.

The Same Stonework Used on the exterior of Bethlehem Lutheran Church also serves for the front of the sacristy and the pulpit, shown at left. The church has seating capacity for about 500 in its nave plus the adjoining chapel which opens into the nave by a folding door. The marble altar at the sacristy is from Italy. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Dedicated in 1957 Was the New Bethlehem Lutheran Church building, above, which is the second building to serve the congregation, founded in 1901.

Ground for the new structure was broken Nov. 13, 1955, and the cornerstone laying service was held the following June. (Post-Crescent Photo)

New City Hall Opens Tuesday in Oshkosh

OSHKOSH—Oshkosh residents move was made starting Thursday when the rest of the department to see the fruits of the move from the old city hall and $700,000-plus remodeling job on annex started transferring of the old high school when the building is officially reopened Tuesday as the new city hall.

Many details remain to be completed and some equipment still may be packed in boxes, but all department heads expect while the police department has been working in its new quarters for a week, the big

10 Oshkosh Churches to Sponsor Choir

Wartburg College
A Cappella Concert
At Peace Lutheran

OSHKOSH — Ten Oshkosh Lutheran churches, cooperating in the sponsorship of the Wartburg College A Cappella Choir at Peace Lutheran Church at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The sponsoring churches are Bethlehem Lutheran, First English Lutheran, Our Savior Lutheran, Peace Lutheran, Redeemer Lutheran, St. Andrew Lutheran, St. John Lutheran, Trinity Lutheran and Zion Lutheran Church.

Purpose for the concert is to raise funds for the new home for the aged being planned by these cooperating churches. Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

26th Annual Tour
The Wartburg College A Cappella Choir began its 26th annual concert tour last week and is presenting 18 concerts in 17 days in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Canada. The 50-voice group is made up of students from 10 states. In its previous 25 annual tours, the choir has sung over 500 concerts in 26 states from coast to coast. In 1959 it appeared in Denmark, England, Holland, Germany and Belgium. A similar tour is planned for the summer of 1965 with several additional countries being included on the tour.

Choir Founder
Director of the choir is Dr. Edwin Liemohn, head of Wartburg College's music department and founder of the choir in 1937. He has published 20 compositions, most notable of which is his arrangement of "A Mighty Fortress" which the choir will sing.

Dr. Liemohn also has published two books dealing with musical history. "The Chorale through 400 Years" and "The Singing Church." He is working on a third book about the role of color and organ in Protestant worship. Much of the research for this book was gathered on his trip to Europe in 1961. The 1965 trip to Europe is the result of that 1961 trip of Dr. Liemohn.

Dr. Liemohn received his bachelor of arts degree from Concordia College at Moorhead, Minn., and his bachelor of music in theory and composition from Chicago Musical College. He was awarded his master of arts in music in 1937 from the Eastman School of Music and in 1960 he received an honorary doctorate from Capital University at Columbus, Ohio. He completed work on his doctorate in sacred music in 1955 at Union Theological Seminary at New York City.

Ripon EUB Church Bids for Fall '64 Youth Conference

OSHKOSH—Emmanuel Evangelical United Brethren Church of Ripon submitted the only invitation to be host next fall to the 10th annual state youth conference of Wisconsin Evangelical United Brethren Church which concluded a three-day meeting at the First EUB Church here Saturday noon.

Decision as to the awarding of the 1964 convention will be made later.

Kenneth Knoespele Jr. of Wauwatosa was reelection president; Barry Babbitt of Chippewa Falls was chosen vice president; Marsha Barney of Viola was named secretary and the Rev. Anthony Farina of Germantown continues as treasurer.

About 380 delegates from 100 Wisconsin churches attended the convention with 520 attending the banquet Friday night which featured several of the lead singers from the "Music Man" production by the Oshkosh High School a cappella choir.

Writers' Group to Form
OSHKOSH — Organization meeting of a creative writers group will be held at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in room 206 of the Merrill School.

First Floor Offices
City hall visitors will find, in addition to the police department, the finance department and city clerk's office on the first floor. The city manager's office is at the main entrance of the building facing Church Street.

The welfare department, health department and various health department inspectors are on the second floor, in addition to some police department facilities.

The third floor is devoted to the public works department, city attorney's office and building, plumbing and electrical inspectors' offices.

Council chambers, youth council, employee lounge and storage space are on the fourth floor.

Reception Set For OSC Dean

Dr. S. E. Gunderson
To Speak at Union
Lounge Gathering

OSHKOSH — A reception and two lectures for the public are on the schedule of Oshkosh State College activities this week.

Dr. Sherman E. Gunderson, recently named dean of the new School of Arts and Science of the college, will be feted at a reception at 4:30 p.m. Monday at the Reeve Union Lounge.

Both Dr. Gunderson and Pres. Roger E. Guiles will speak at this reception which is sponsored by Alethean Sorority and Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity.

The Union's "Professor Speaks" program at 7 p.m. Thursday will feature Dr. Jacob Shapiro of the college biology department. "Another Interpretation of What Happened on Mount Sinai."

Colloquium Series
Third in the series of colloquiums will be also at 7 p.m. Thursday and will feature Dr. Charles M. Solley, psychology professor at Wayne State University in Michigan and a former research project director at the Menninger Foundation. He will speak at the Halsey Science Center on the subject "A Perceptual Theory of Reading."

Among meetings scheduled at the college during the week is the social studies curriculum committee of the Wisconsin State Department of Public Instruction which will assemble from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Reeve Union to plan social studies curriculum for grades kindergarten through 12. Emlyn Jones of the University of Wisconsin is chairman of this committee.

Calumet Park Youth Camp Survey Set

4-H Tells Board
Study Will be Done
At No Cost to County

CHILTON — Calumet County Park will be surveyed soon as a possible setting for a youth camp.

A representative of Rowland Associates, Wisconsin Rapids, designers and planners of the Chicago White Sox boys camp at Brothertown, will meet with the local youth group leaders at the park Tuesday for a preliminary study.

Plans to investigate the possibility of developing a youth camp at the park were unveiled for the Calumet County Board's annual session. Earl Lintner, president of the county 4-H leadership council, successfully petitioned the board for permission to carry out the survey.

No Cost
At the time, Lintner told the board the survey would be completed at no cost to the county. Many of the light fixtures, for instance, came from the First National Bank of Neenah while some of the plumbing fixtures originally were in Theda Clark Memorial Hospital.

Designers' Decision
When asked about the extent of facilities desired for the proposed camp, Lintner said this would be left entirely up to the designers.

Money earned by the 4-H Pikeramas will pay for the survey. If any building is undertaken, the county would be the likely source of funds, Lintner said.

He felt if a camp were built it would receive continuous use during the summer camping season and he theorized that there would also be some winter camping.

Charles Nikolai, county 4-H club agent, will accompany the Rowland engineers to the park in youth group leadership as sign legal surrender papers. Animals will be available for adoption for a fee. Strays must

Animal Shelter Dedication Today

Open House Program Planned
At Building South of Neenah

NEENAH — Public open house will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. today at the $16,000 new animal shelter of the Animal Welfare League, Inc., located on County Trunk G just west of Highway 41.

Even though the official opening is being held today, the shelter has some residents. Five dogs and one kitten have been housed there the last week.

The shelter includes 15 pens with outside fenced runs, pens for kittens and other small animals, an examining room, storage area, washup area, utility room, an isolation area for sick animals, and an office-reception room.

Most of the furniture, sinks and other equipment either was donated or purchased used. Many of the light fixtures, for instance, came from the First National Bank of Neenah while some of the plumbing fixtures originally were in Theda Clark Memorial Hospital.

Observe Milwaukee
Several officials of the Wisconsin Humane Society in Milwaukee are expected to attend the open house today. The Animal Welfare League plans to pattern its operation after the Milwaukee operation and has received offers of assistance from that group. Mrs. William Gilbert, shelter chairman, plans to spend some time in Milwaukee observing the shelter operation there.

Animal Welfare League, Inc., is incorporated as a non-profit organization in Winnebago County. Application has been made to affiliate with the American Humane Association.

Dale Schindler has been named caretaker of the shelter to care for the animals, keep the pens and building clean and bell, president of the Neenah-Menasha Taxpayers Association. The shelter phone number is 2-9544. The shelter will be open from 4 to 6 p.m. daily.

Menasha Contract
The league has a contract with the city of Menasha to house stray dogs picked up by the Menasha police department. In-

Among the items Campbell is expected to discuss are proposed sign legal surrender papers. Animals will be available for adoption for a fee. Strays must

Schools Help Educate Youth To Assume Role As Free Men

Vice President, Lawrence College.

Before one can examine the values by which free men should live in order to realize and preserve their freedom, it is necessary to understand the meaning of the term itself. The fact that freedom has had so many meanings for people in different times and places leads to the suggestion that our concern here be focused upon freedom as it might apply to our time in this country.

In its most obvious sense, freedom implies the right and the possibility of an individual to exercise a reasonable and responsible choice in determining his actions. This principle underlies our political institutions and our moral code, it is the source of individual initiative in industry, trade, scientific research and the creative arts. In short, it is basic to our way of life.

Of equal importance, however, if we hope to enjoy true freedom is the need to liberate intellectual and emotional resources from the inner and very personal slavery which frequently prevents us from thinking and acting as free men. Man's inescapable struggle to overcome ignorance, fear and prejudice engages him throughout his entire life, but its persistent nature cannot deter him from undertaking the task if he desires to be a free man.

Irresponsible Liberty
The mere absence of external and inner bondage, however, still does not guarantee freedom in the larger sense. There are those who have thought it did only to discover that misdirected or irresponsible liberty inevitably leads but to tyranny and slavery.

Martin Buber, the contemporary Jewish philosopher-prophet, puts it this way: "It means that a quite personal responsibility takes the place of one shared with many generations. Life lived in freedom is personal responsibility or it is a pathetic farce." True freedom from his viewpoint is almost man's "destiny," one carries that like a cross, not like a cockade. "It is not so much 'freedom from' as 'freedom to' which we should seek.

If we can accept Buber's description of freedom, it seems to follow that the values which men must cherish if they and their children are to possess and preserve their freedom depend upon three central principles, the recognition and the preservation of the dignity and the worth of an individual, the assurance to each person of a fair opportunity to develop his potential abilities, of a social climate favorable to the growth and the expression of human idealism in which freedom can flourish.

Self-Restraint Needed
A man who bears himself with dignity and a true sense of his own value must of necessity exercise a considerable measure of self-restraint. In the case of a state or a nation, such discipline is achieved through legal restrictions upon the behavior of individuals or groups who tend to deny their personal responsibilities by engaging in actions inimical to the welfare of other men.

Granted, the line that must limit one's actions is not easily defined, but it is generally recognized by those who try to understand the true meaning of freedom, for in a responsible democracy such as ours no one segment of society can long withhold basic liberties from a minority without being called to account. Thus, if an individual's rights as a free man are placed in jeopardy, he may seek redress through the democratic processes which our form of government provides.

But citizens of a democracy cannot limit their concern to curbing extreme positions taken by some persons which hinder the personal development of others. They must also proceed in a positive manner to provide equal opportunities for all men to achieve their legitimate aims.

Essential Elements
The right of all to vote and the privilege of full protection under the law, education and specialized training for each according to his talents, a chance for persons to move about at will and mingle with others socially, a fair opportunity for

Netherlands Quartet Is 'Stunning'

BY DON VORPAHL
High expectations of a Lawrence Chamber Series audience—a full-house—were confirmed when the Netherlands String Quartet gave a stunning display of Chamber music art.

The 250 listeners heard, and saw, why the four Dutch string players earned the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge medal as "finest string quartet in Europe" in 1962. They were a hard-working, efficient, and compelling quartet. They played a not-too-enticing program in exciting fashion. And they were true to the somewhat erudite dogmas of their art without being the least bit stodgy.

Members of the Quartet are Nap De Klijn and Jaap Schroeder, violins; Paul Godwin, viola; and Carl Boomkamp, cello. All are established soloists, and three of them hold professorships at Dutch music academies.

Distinct Traits
Though they play in remarkable ensemble, each showed distinctive traits which gave the quartet some of the best across-the-footlights appeal seen here in some time.

De Klijn spawned numerous chills on numerous spines with the extremely gracious lyric style of his first violin parts.

Schroeder's playing has great care and refinement; his instrument caught the ear with its unusually generous tone.

Godwin's viola is an instrument of haunting warmth, befitting the serious, expressive attitude he takes in performing. For him, incidentally, this was a somewhat discouraging night with first a broken string and then an uncooperative replacement which refused to comply with the disciplines of fine tuning.

Quick, Skilled
Boomkamp is an outstanding ensemble cellist, whiplash quick and skillful, yet marvelously dignified.

The Mozart "Quartet in B Flat major, K. 458," alias "The Hunt," came off with verve, especially a delicate "Menuetto" and fiery "Allegro assai."

A few anxious moments developed as the Quartet launched into Kees van Baaren's "String Quartet No. 2, 'Sovraposizioni I,'" dated 1962. Van Baaren is Conservatory Director in The Hague, and a leader among Europe's "new music" elite.

Following came another contemporary work, the "Quartet, Op. 49" of Dmitri Shostakovich. The 1938 piece was given great intensity of sound and some lovely lyrical lines.

The program's second half was devoted to the Beethoven "Quartet in F major, Op. 59, No. 1," a wide-ranging work of great symmetry and almost symphonic proportions. It was here the strength of the Netherlands Quartet's ensemble sensitivity found its pinnacle, and here the audience found a common-ground of appeal. Certain technical failings in the performance were overlooked in view of a moving, penetrating corporate skill this quartet shares.

Educate Youth

The schools, in cooperation with the home and the church, have an important part to play in giving significance and lasting life to these values. Those who are responsible for educating our youth to assume their role as free men—teachers, parents, elected officials, indeed, all of us—cannot rely on half-way measures and improvisations to discharge this commitment.

Responsible freedom is far too precious a legacy to be transmitted by chance as a hopeful by-product of the acquisition of knowledge in selected areas of study or even as a logical outcome of formal instruction in ethics and religion. It must be experienced daily by students in a realistic setting, exhibited in the lives of those who have accepted the responsibility of parenthood and of teaching, and should receive full encouragement from the entire community. This is a large order, but a mandate that cannot be ignored.

First Evangelical United Brethren church of Oshkosh was host from Thursday through Saturday for the ninth annual youth conference of Wisconsin EUB Churches. Among those taking part were, left to right, The Rev. Homer Retzlaff, pastor of the host church, Kenneth Knoespel, Jr., Wauwatosa, reelected state president, the Rev. Anthony Farina, Germantown, state treasurer, and the Rev. Hilbert Lohr, Wauzeka, state adviser. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Fond du Lac Asks Funds for Airport Work

Commission Balks
On Request for Wider Runways

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Has the time come for a broadening of the runway width standards on general service airports in Wisconsin?

The State Department of Aeronautics has ordered a study following an argument on the application of Fond du Lac County for state and federal aids to finance the widening of its airport runways from the standard of 75 feet for facilities without scheduled air-line service. The county proposed a widening to 100 feet.

Several members of the commission objected that such a grant of funds would generate similar demands upon the limited aid budget from scores of other communities, while others insisted that the trend toward larger and faster private airplanes makes a higher standard of runway construction necessary everywhere.

The Fond du Lac spokesman said that banked snow in the winter along relatively narrow runways constitutes a traffic hazard. Some pilots are avoiding the airport to land at Oshkosh and other locations, they said.

Minimum Width

The minimum width of runways for airports which served scheduled aircraft is 100 feet and the recommended width is greater than that and up to 150 feet, officials explained.

F. E. Wolf of the state agency staff had recommended approval of the Fond du Lac application on the basis of the industrial complex represented by the Fond du Lac community and the traffic count at the airport.

Norman Herro of North Central Airlines protested that the justification by traffic count was "meager" and said that the Fond du Lac grant would become the occasion for applications from many other communities for runway construction assistance.

The commission approved a grant of funds for the provision of a new taxiway at the Fond du Lac field.

WVCC Statistics Show Lourdes Finished Second in Loop Defense

BY TIGER BROOKS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Final Fox Valley Catholic Conference statistics tell some interesting tales as far as Oshkosh Lourdes and Green Bay Pre-montre are concerned. The Knights, of course, had the last laugh when they dumped Coach Ted Fritsch's Cadets, 6-0, in the final game of the season. Both teams finished in a tie for third place in the loop with 4-2-1 marks.

Lourdes grabbed the conference crown in — yards penalized. Coach Larry Van Alstine's "aggressive" crew was hit with 335 yards in penalties. Not to be outdone, Pre-montre ended up only one yard behind, with 335 yards marked off via the penalty route. Ironically, both teams were penalized 30 yards in their match against each other.

Conference champ Xavier had to take a backseat to both Pre-montre and Lourdes when it came to defense. The Knights finished second in the loop, defensively, allowing opponents a total of only 836 yards — 243 passing and 593 on the ground. They stole nine enemy passes, second only to St. Mary's Menasha.

Lourdes bobbled the ball the least number of times (6) but lost the pigskin on five of those miscues. Lourdes took a one-point edge in scoring over the Cadets, 92 to 91.

Other Knight totals showed 50 first downs, 860 yards rushing, 155 yards passing, 21 passes completed for a .313 average, and a 27.5 punting average.

Lourdes junior fullback Tim Spatt was the second-highest scorer in the conference with 36 points. Bob (Rocky) Bleier of Xavier outdistanced everybody, though, with 114 points. Chuck Grable of Lourdes was sixth with 19 markers.

The Bears broke their second-place tie with the Steelers in the YMCA Junior Hi Bowling League action of Nov. 2. Standings through four weeks showed the Vikings still on top with 8-1, the Bears in second (5-4), the Steelers third (4-5) and the Packers in last place (1-8).

Bob Schaffer of the Bears still holds the top mark for high series, high single game and best average. The high single game for the Boys on Nov. 2 was rolled by Dennis Smith of leading Vikings — a 133. Dennis also tallied the best series that afternoon, rolling a 391. Stephanie Clark of the Bears hit a 113 single game and a 302 series for high honors in the girls' department.

In the early fifties one of the big, bad Chicago Bears who delighted in devouring Green Bay Packers quarterbacks was a guy

Only 3 Lettermen Return From 1962-3 Squad

OSHKOSH — Inexperience in all weight classes will be the biggest problem facing Ed Brown, starting his first year as Oshkosh State College wrestling coach.

Only three lettermen are back from last year's first wrestling team at the college, but some additional help may be expected the second semester from transfer students and the return to eligibility of several promising prospects.

Returning lettermen are Phil Goeters, Manitowish, and Jim Krueger, Marion, both of whom are wrestling at 137 pounds, and Marty Marasch, New London, at 157 pounds. Another letterman, Joe Semrad, who lost only one match last year and won the conference title in his weight division, will be lost this semester because of ineligibility.

The Titan team will be young. All are freshmen and sophomores except for Tom Jones, a junior from Berlin, and John Martinson, a senior from Appleton. Both are 137 pounds.

Some of the other top candidates are Charles Ewald, Berlin, and Dan Einum, Menominee, 123 pounds, Gerald Johnson, Berlin, and Larry Peotter, Omro, 130 pounds; Mike Drozd, Port Washington, 137 pounds;

Omro's 5' Eyes Improvement This Season

5 Lettermen Are Back; Height Problem Looms

OMRO — Omro High School basketball fans should have a little more to cheer about this year than last season, but the Foxes will still have to fight to make a first division berth in the tough Little Nine Conference.

Five of seven lettermen are returning from a team that posted an overall mark of 3-15 last year and a conference record of 3-10. "We are going to be hurting for height," Coach Mike Hartoonian said. Tallest man on the team is sophomore Mike Engstrom, at 6-1. He will operate either at center or at one of the forward posts.

Returning monogram winners include Dick Snyder, a 5-11 junior forward who won all-conference honors last year as a sophomore. Joining him are Paul Miller, a senior guard who was selected as the team's most valuable player last season; Bob Meronk and Terry Sharkey, also senior guards, and John Dailey, a senior forward.

Two other top candidates are juniors Larry Edminster, a guard, and Tom Friedauer, a 5-11 forward.

"These should give us a strong nucleus," Hartoonian said. He added that the sophomores and juniors have been looking fairly good in practice and he expected this year's squad again to be a "young" team.

Thirty-five candidates are practicing, including freshmen. Twelve players are working out on the varsity.

Ripon College '5' Looms Powerful

Four Regulars Return From Midwest Conference Champs

RIPON — Midwest conference decides to sacrifice speed for size. Other top prospects include Bennett, who saw action last year; sophomores Gary Long and Doug Bradley, and senior Chuck Wiesner of Oshkosh.

"We are getting a slow start this year," Wiesner noted, because of the number of players on the football team. "But with the number of veterans we have it should not take too long to get ready."

The Redmen rolled to a 14-4 Midwest Conference record and 15-6 overall. One of their non-conference losses was at the hands of Oshkosh State College, 68-59. Ripon opens its season Nov. 30 against OSC at Ripon.

The schedule:

The biggest battle appears to be for the remaining guard spot vacated by graduated Frank Smoll. Leading candidates include Ankerson's brother, Doug, a sophomore; Tom Fisher, a 6-2 junior, and Dick Bennett, another junior. Fisher lettered as a sophomore and "could be the sleeper on the team," Wiesner said. "He could develop into a great player," he added. Wiesner termed Doug Ankerson "a real hustler."

Safers Injury

Another top candidate who could play either in the backcourt or the front line is 6-3 sophomore Paul Noel. Noel broke his hand playing football and that may slow him down at the start of the season.

The fifth man in the lineup will probably depend upon the situation. Wiesner indicated Noel could get the starting nod if he

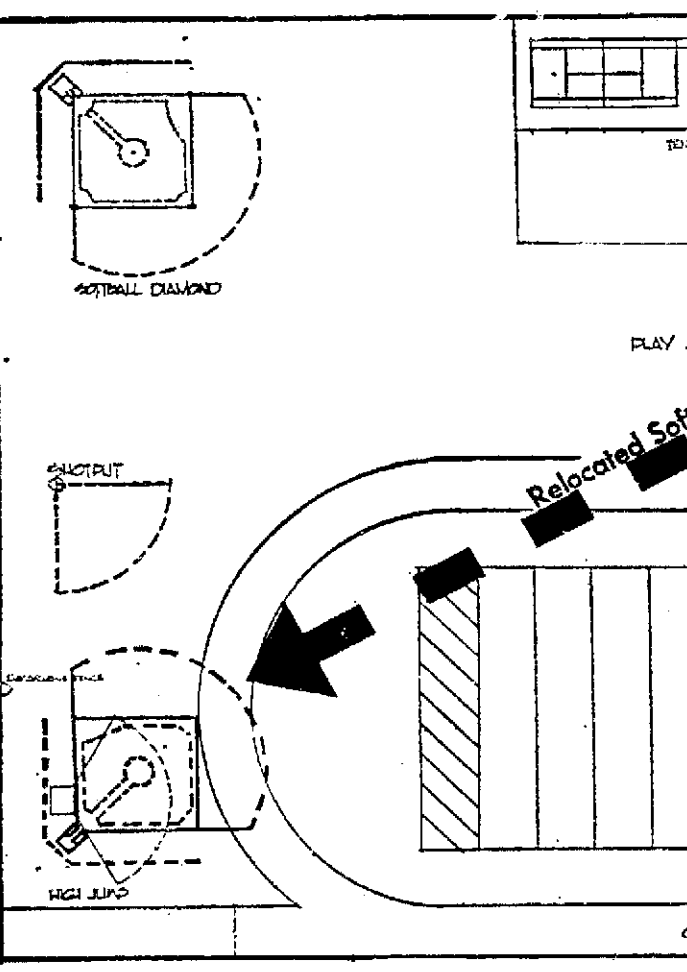

Wiesner MVP On Winneconne Football Team

WINNECONNE — Ken Wiesner, senior halfback, has been named most valuable player of the 1963 Winneconne High School football team by his teammates.

Wiesner, also a regular on the basketball squad, led the team in rushing and scoring.

Wiesner scored 85 points on 14 touchdowns and one extra point. He rushed for 621 yards on 80 carries for a 7.8-yard per carry average. He also completed two of six pass attempts — both for touchdowns.

Jerry Cottrell, also a senior, was named honorary captain for the 1963 season.

Front-Liners Main Winneconne Need

WINNECONNE — Replacem-ents for his graduated front-line are the primary concern for basketball Coach Bob Morgan whose Winneconne Wolves opened practice last week. And, it appears much of the load will fall on underclassmen.

Seven lettermen are back but five of them are guards and only two were regulars. Replacements must be found for center Nick Erdman who led the team in scoring and rebounding, and forwards Jack Jensen and Pete Theis, the Nos. 2 and 3 rebounders.

Back is guard Ken Wiesner, playmaker and floorleader on the team and the No. 2 scorer last year with 229 points. Four other lettermen are available for guard duty. They are Le Roy Gilson, Jim Johnson, Jerry Cottrell and Dave Bautinger. Cottrell led the quartet in scoring last year with 45 points.

Heilsberg, Jo Garbe Share Oshkosh Honors

OSHKOSH — "Hub" Heilsberg and Jo Garbe took top individual game honors with Don Wolk bowling in the T & O Lutheran League.

Mrs. Garbe, bowling in the Recreation Lanes Tuesday Classic loop, had a 206 to go with her 578 count. Top individual score among the women was rolled by Elaine Parsons, a 232 in the T & O Pin Pushers loop.

Runners-up among the men was the Rev. Thomas Keller who posted a 667 count on the strength of a 244 top game in the Knights of Columbus League.

Other top individual game scores were turned in by Otto Fuchs, 258; Wayne Reese, 256; Arnie Heilsberg, 255; Red Smith, 255, and George Binner, 250.

Mary Bingen rolled a 574 set in the St. Mary Commercial League for runner-up honors among the women. Cel Penzenstadler had a 563 and Marion Driessen a 541.

Club Oasis provided the heavy team pin fall with a 1,045 game in the T & O Classic. Park Avenue Bar continues to hold a 1-point lead over Electronic Industries. Ike's Texaco is third, four points back.

Deer Lodge rolled a 1,001 game in the Outboarders circuit and leads the pack by one game over Empire Bar and Le Roy's.

Volleyball Loop To be Organized

KAUKAUNA — Men interested in a recreation department-sponsored volleyball league are to report to the old gymnasium at Kaukauna High School at 7 p.m. Thursday, according to James Gertz, recreation director.

The formation of a men's league will hinge on attendance at next week's meeting. The league will be open to persons 16 years and older although high school students trying out for the competitive team should not participate as they might be declared ineligible for the high school squad.

Players are to wear tennis shoes.

Fox Cities' Monuments Provide Year-Round Salute to Veterans

BY JAY JOSLYN
Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

At 11 a.m. tomorrow there will be a minute of silence punctuated by rounds of shot from firing squads as the Fox Cities and the nation observe the 45th anniversary of the armistice that halted World War I.

Since there have been two major conflagrations in which soldiers of the United States and the world have been involved in the interim, the name given to Nov. 11 has been changed from Armistice Day to the all-encompassing Veterans Day.

With the magic 11 a.m. 11th day of the 11th month included in the ceremonies, it is quite appropriate that the observance of the moment of this nation's international maturity should serve to commemorate the travail through which it traveled to that maturity and the struggles it sustain since.

This commemoration of the nation's warrior history is an everyday thing in the Fox Cities. Through the entire area warriors of all of the nation's battles are memorialized in statuary and markers.

The wide sweep of these memorials is not the result of any excited pursuit of history. From the Revolution to the Korean "police action," residents of the Fox Cities have been actual participants.

It is doubtful that the Fox Cities' Revolutionary War veteran ever saw the Fox Cities. He was Henrik Appaumut, an Oneida Indian who served Gen. George Washington as a scout.

Participation in the Revolutionary War was made a subject of "local option" among the Iroquois nations. Some tribes chose to remain neutral. Some chose to ally themselves to the British. Only the Onondagas chose to assist their American brothers in their struggle for freedom.

In the 1830s when these same American brothers sold the Oneidas on the idea of leaving their beautiful and fertile New York homeland to take up residence in the less than equivalent lands of northeastern Wisconsin, the Oneidas took up their belongings and came west carrying with them the remains of their honored dead, including the heroic Appaumut.

He is buried just west of Kaukauna and is remembered by his people and the descendants of his American brothers with two markers, one of which—a star—is reproduced here and on the VIEW cover.

Kaukauna also is the site of an impressive statue memorializing the veterans of the Civil War and, in a way, linking the Fox Cities with the War of 1812.

The statue pictured here and on the cover, was presented by Dr. O. G. Lord to the Paul H. Beaulieu Post 247. It stands in the square just north of Kaukauna's main business district.

The statue is an appropriate memorial to the solitary soldiers who "gave the full measure of devotion" so that this "nation of the people, for the people and by the people shall not perish from the earth."

The connection with the War of 1812 is a bit different. The Beaulieu name is an ancient one in the Fox Cities. The first Beaulieu built the first grist mill in Kaukauna.

This Beaulieu was a veteran of the War of 1812, but he fought by the side of his red brothers as an ally of the British.

The most impressive memorial statuary in this field rises in Soldiers' Square in Appleton. It memorializes the Civil War with a dramatic grouping.

It is "dedicated to the memory of those who fought on land and sea to preserve under one flag the heritage of freedom bequeathed by our forefathers to

Uniforms for 'Revolutionary Brigade' Are

Mrs. Fonstad Makes Garb for Eastern Black Powder Clubs

BY GERALD C. STOWE

Mastermaster, Brigade of American Revolution

For the past two years Mrs. Gilbert Fonstad, 211 W. Hancock St., New London, has been living in the past, fashioning uniforms for re-activated Revolutionary War units.

Her project began in 1962, when several black powder shooting clubs in the New York and New Jersey areas banded together to form the Brigade of the American Revolution. Their purpose was to bring together those interested in the American Revolutionary War.

Under the direction of the writer, Gerald C. Stowe, Mrs. Fonstad's brother and curator of the United States Military Academy Museum at West Point, patterns were made up and research work carried on. Finally, Stowe was able to send the patterns, plus early types of linen and cloth, to his sister, who made up the uniforms.

Mrs. Fonstad used her husband, who is now retired from the Hamilton Canning Co., New London, as a model. She not only fitted the first uniforms—riflemen's jackets with fringe and typical Revolutionary War trousers, called overalls—to her husband, but put him to work making the long fringe of the jackets.

Fit Perfectly

At last the first uniforms were ready for shipment to New York. Her brother reported that they fit perfectly, and a rush of orders for further uniforms arrived in the Fonstads' mail box.

With a view toward keeping alive the story of our ancestors, who sacrificed so much for American freedom, three groups of dedicated men, all historians and collectors of early weapons and equipment, simultaneously started Revolutionary War units, taking the names from those units which served their areas.

In April, 1962, members of the reactivated Lamb's Artillery Regiment and Bergen County Militia met at the town hall of Cornwall at the invitation of the 3rd New York Regiment nicknamed the "Cornwall Continentals."

The 13 men present from the reactivated units voted for a Continental Congress, to be held at the New Windsor Cantonment in the "Officer's Hut," the only remaining relic left standing from the large winter encampment of the Revolutionary War.

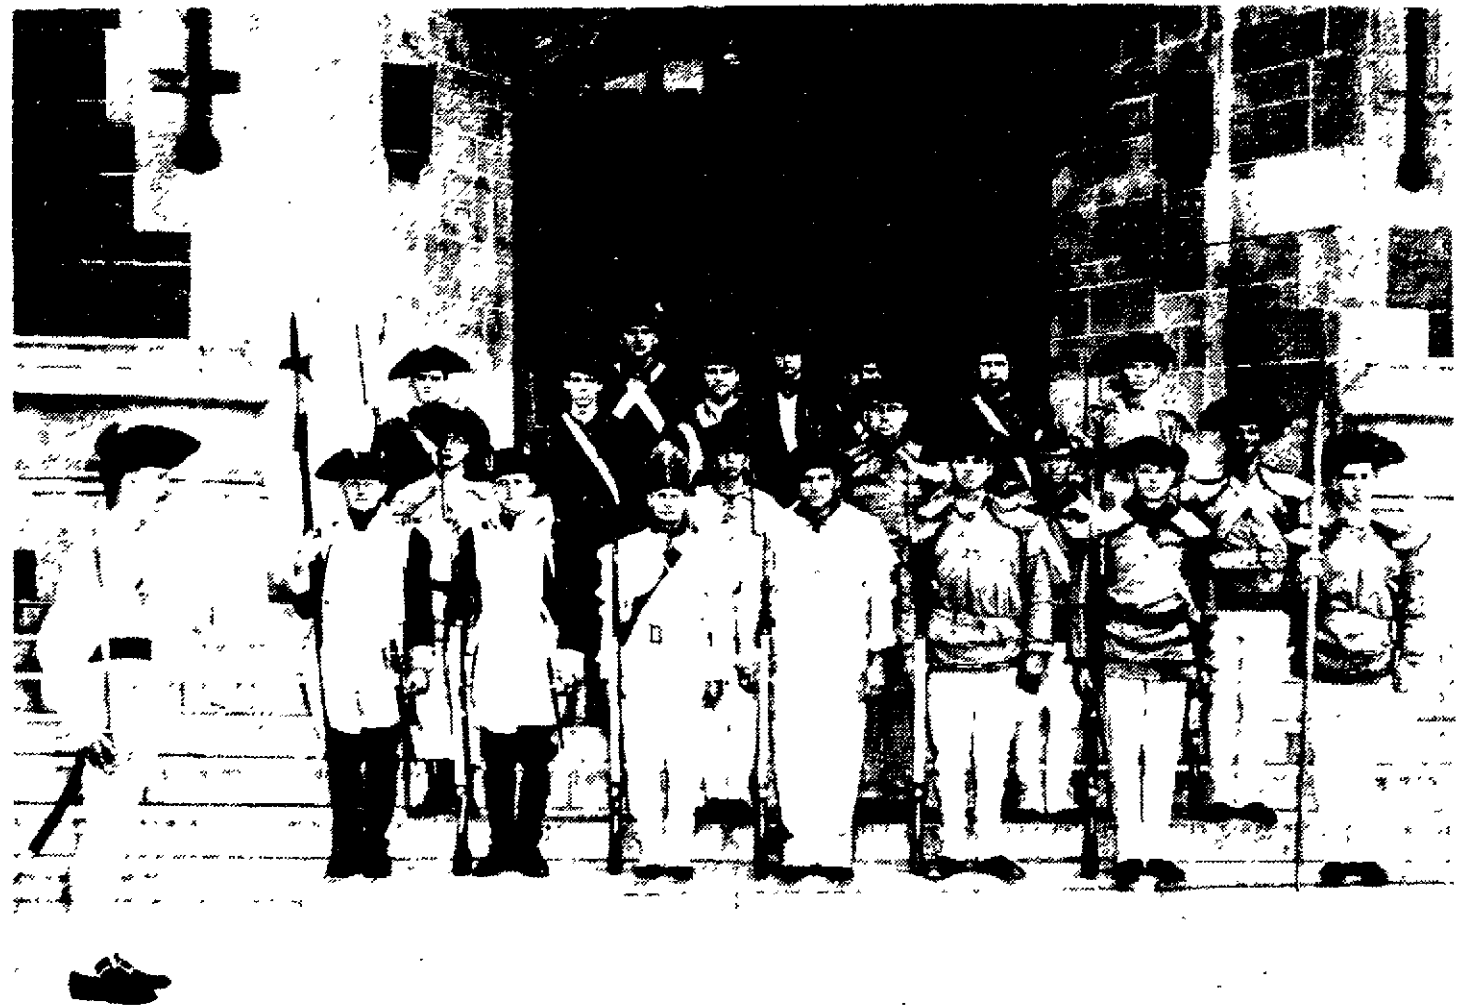

Permanent Camps

During the eight winters of the war, the Continental Army, under Washington, constructed large and relatively permanent camps at only three places: Morristown, Valley Forge and New Windsor. There they erected substantial log dwellings, store houses and shops.

At the close of the war in 1783, more than 700 such buildings at the New Windsor Cantonment were sold at auction for $1 each. One was purchased and moved several miles away, to be attached to a house as a summer kitchen. In 1932, the anniversary date of Washington's birthday, this hut was moved back to its original location, where it became a symbol to members of the National Temple Hill Association, which planned to make a national shrine of this last camp-site of the Revolutionary army.

It was here that Washington put down a revolt of his officers, refused to become King, and gave out the first Medal of Merit, now called the Purple Heart.

Meeting on this hallowed ground in the midst of historic Newburgh Bay-Hudson Highlands, the virtual center of the war for eight years, were men wearing authentic uniforms made by Mrs. Fonstad. After stacking their flintlock muskets in the "Officer's Hut,"

Members of the Brigade of the American Revolution visited the U. S. Military Academy at West Point July 13 to present the Revolutionary War segment of the show, "Sound and Light," which dramatizes the story of West Point from 1778 to the present. The group is shown just before offering a display of musketry for the entire Corps of Cadets. (U. S. Army Photo)

they voted by candlelight to call their own organization "The Brigade of the American Revolution."

The soldiers adopted by-laws as well as a constitution, and elected national officers with an aim in mind of perpetuating the story of the Revolutionary War and keeping alive the heroic deeds of the soldiers under General Washington.

Since this first Congress, the Brigade of the American Revolution has grown to nine units, five of which are completely in uniform and armed with firelocks—flintlock muskets—plus several small cannon, mortars and all other accouterments carried by the soldiers who served under General Washington almost 200 years ago. Much of the equipment, including some of the rifles plus cartridge boxes, slings, buckles, shoes, canteens and other items has been made by the men themselves. The uniforms had been mostly made by Mrs. Fonstad.

National Headquarters for the Brigade will be at the New Windsor Cantonment in the newly constructed "Public Building" called the Temple. The was the largest building at this cantonment during the Revolutionary War and measured 30 by 110 feet in size. It was used as a meeting house as well as for church services and also as a commissary.

General Washington established the "Badge of Merit" while his troops were stationed at New Windsor. This medal now called the Purple Heart is the most famous medal in the American Army today. At the anniversary of Washington's birthday in 1932, it was recreated under President Hoover.

The reconstructed "Temple" will house a small museum. Here will be found the very first Badge of Merit (Purple Heart) which was given by Washington to Sgt. Elijah Churchill in May of 1783 for extraordinary bravery in several engagements.

Priceless Memento

This priceless memento was presented to the National Temple Hill Association by Mr. Christian A. Zabriskie of New York and is now in display at Washington's Headquarters in Newburgh pending the time that a fireproof case can be constructed for its display at Temple Hill. There are only two known original Purple Hearts in existence today, the second one is in a bank vault in Boston and not on display.

From the very beginning, units of the Brigade of the American Revolution has been busy. In August of 1962 members had the first Revolutionary type shooting match at Temple Hill, and for two days the countryside resounded to the volleys and scattered fire from flintlock smoothbore muskets. In October, 1962, the men participated in the re-enacted battle of White Plains, N. Y., on the very battlefield where stalwart Americans held the British armies and their hired mercenaries at bay for two days. This re-enacted battle with the men dressed in full uniform proved to be the most spectacular event in New York state for that year. Crowds estimated at 10,000 watched Continental Soldiers trade volley with volley, cannon fire against cannon fire against the uniformed British soldiers.

During the winter of 1962-63 the men spent a great deal of time in constructing new equipment, including two more cannon and four mortars. Mrs. Fonstad's uniforms kept coming to the units and by the summer of 1963 the men were able to supply the sounds of battle for station KYW of Cleveland, Ohio, for a series of shows on the Revolutionary War.

On the 22nd and 23rd of June, 1963, a second Brigade shooting match was held at Temple Hill. Dressed in their authentic uniforms, the members of the Brigade put on a two-day show for the Boy Scouts of Orange County as well as for interested spectators. The muskets, pistols and cannon are fired in the same manner that they were 200 years ago. Modern safety improvements have been added—flash hiders to prevent scorching the man firing next to you and the use of aluminum foil to wrap black powder in to prevent accidental discharge of this dangerous explosive.

On the 4th of July of this year, members of the Brigade assisted the Cornwall 4th of July program at Cornwall by entering two floats in their parade and later putting on a dramatic recreation of the brilliant American victory of the battle of Stony Point to an audience estimated at well over 12,500 people.

On July 11 and 13, members of the Brigade were guests of the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy and participated in a colorful exhibition of artillery unit in action as well as an infantry unit firing volleys of musket fire before the entire Corps of Cadets. This show called "Sound and Light", tells the story of West Point from its early beginning as a Military Post in 1778 to the present date, and in doing so tells the tradition and heritage that has been handed down by succeeding generations of West Pointers.

Greater things are in store for the Brigade of the American Revolution in 1964, the most outstanding of which is their participation at Valley Forge before an estimated 60,000 Boy Scouts from all over the world. At this jamboree, the members of the Brigade will march, live in reconstructed log huts, will be eating and cooking over open fires, marching and drilling as men did during that time of history—giving parades before the thousands and thousands of Boy Scouts, casting lead bullets, repairing equipment and carrying on the normal camp duties such as the soldiers did in 1777 and 1778.

Mustermaster Gerald C. Stowe, is already working on this huge project and plans to have well over 1,000 Continental Soldiers recruited and uniformed by 1964. So it seems that Mrs. Fonstad will be a very busy woman indeed, uniforming present day soldier-historians for a role they will play at Valley Forge, the place where Baron von Steuben drilled our men until they became a confident aggressive army and finally won freedom in 1783.

The spirit of Revolutionary times comes alive again as members of the Brigade of the American Revolution gather in front of the only building that remains of the large Revolutionary encampment at New Windsor, N. Y. More than 700 such buildings at the New Windsor Cantonment were sold at auction for $1 each at the close of the war in 1783. (G. C. Stowe Photo)

WHO CONTRIBUTES MORE TO AN OFFICE?
A PRETTY RECEPTIONIST ☐
A GOOD TYPIST ☐

Must we choose? Would you agree that both may have much to contribute? However, if you insist on a definite answer, we take the typist, because a good worker is a proven asset. A pretty receptionist may or may not be pleasant to have around. If she's vain and quarrelsome, even her beauty won't compensate for her limitations.

CAN POVERTY MAKE A MARRIAGE HAPPIER?
YES ☐ NO ☐

No. Married couples at the lower ends of the economic ladder have a constant struggle to make ends meet. They suffer more physical and mental illness. They have more quarrels and recover from their crises less well than more privileged pairs. Marriages in the poor sections more often break up in divorce, separation and desertion.

THE ONLY IMPORTANT THING IS TO KNOW YOUR JOB!
TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

False. You must also know how to get along with those with whom you work. If you're a newcomer, there may be some "trade secrets" that they won't let you know until you've been accepted. Furthermore, if they want to, they can "gang up" on you and break you. The ability to win acceptance and get along well with others may be the most important thing.

Burnett Dons Buckskins as 'Calamity Jane'

'Calamity Jane,' a 90-minute musical comedy special starring Carol Burnett in the title role, and Art Lund as Wild Bill Hickok, will be broadcast at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on the CBS Television Network.

In the show, which pre-empts 'The Jack Benny Program' and 'The Garry Moore Show,' Miss Burnett portrays a hoydenish young woman of the Old West with a penchant for buckskins and tall tales.

Based on the original Warner Bros. motion picture, the production encompasses the film score by composer Sammy Fain and lyricist Paul Francis Webster, including the Academy Award-winning ballad "Secret Love," plus additional new songs.

Featured in the cast are Bernie West as Henry Miller, Bevil Trowin as Katie Brown and Don Chastain as Lieut. Danny Gilmartin.

The show is a Bob Banner Associates Production, with Bob Banner as executive producer, Joe Hamilton as producer, and Ernest Flatt and Dick Altman as musical staggers.

Comedy star Carol Burnett plays a hoydenish young woman of the Old West in the 90-minute musical special "Calamity Jane," to be broadcast at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on the CBS Television Network. The score includes the award-winning ballad, "Secret Love."

Art Lund as Wild Bill Hickok and Carol Burnett as Calamity Jane head the cast of CBS-TV's 90-minute musical special, to be seen at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. The show is a Bob Banner production.

Carol Burnett's probably going to be spending Tuesday evening the same way millions of her fans are—seated in front of a television set, watching "Calamity Jane."

For this 90-minute special, produced by her husband, Joe Hamilton, was taped months ago, before Carol went into temporary retirement to await the birth of their baby.

Born April 26, 1934, in San Antonio, Texas, this increasingly popular comedienne has had her share of difficulties in life, as in her career. But always she's come out smiling—at least in public.

Carol was brought up largely by a grandmother, and because her parents separated frequently, she took over the care of a younger sister, Christine.

Supporting the younger girl wasn't easy, Carol worked as a hat-check girl and, according to an interview with "TV Top Stars," often ate spaghetti because it was cheap.

Married to actor Don Saroyan in December, 1955, she had separated from him before she won her first great television popularity on "The Garry Moore Show." It was while working on this show that she met Hamilton, the producer.

On May 4, 1968, the two of them flew to Juarez and obtained divorces. Minutes later, they were married and set off for a Hawaiian honeymoon.

Since that time Carol has finished her first movie, "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed?", at Paramount, and scheduled a Broadway appearance in the play, "A Girl to Remember." The play, however, must await the birth of her child.

Carol recently signed an exclusive contract with the CBS Television Network, so she's certain to be back—in person—as soon as her maternal duties permit.

Their posterity, and was "presented to George D. Eggleston Post No. 138, G.A.R. by Albert W. Priest in remembrance of his brother James E. Priest, 7th Wis. Vol. Inf., who died in camp Dec. 28, 1861."

The fourth statue pictured on these pages and on the cover memorializes the doughboy of World War I. Like the Civil War statue in Kaukauna, the Memorial Drive remembrance is a solitary warrior dressed in battlefield gear—an interesting contrast.

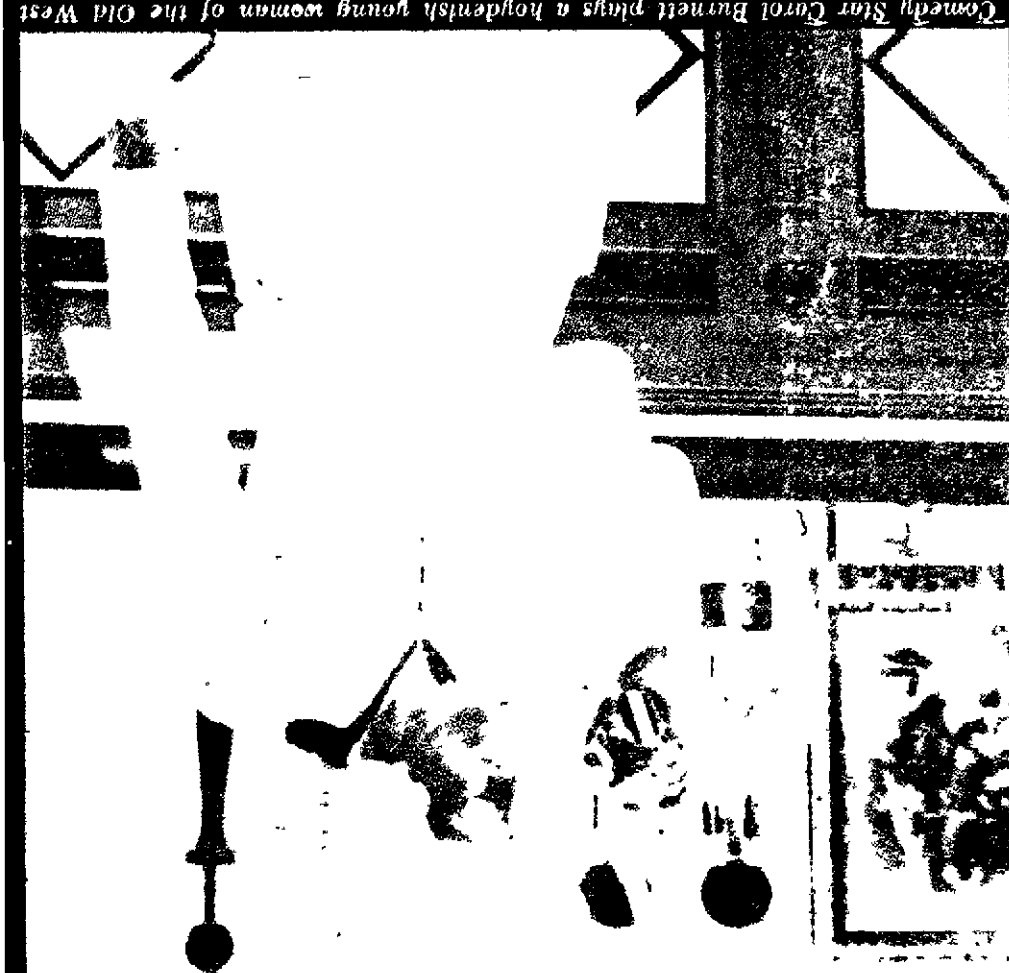

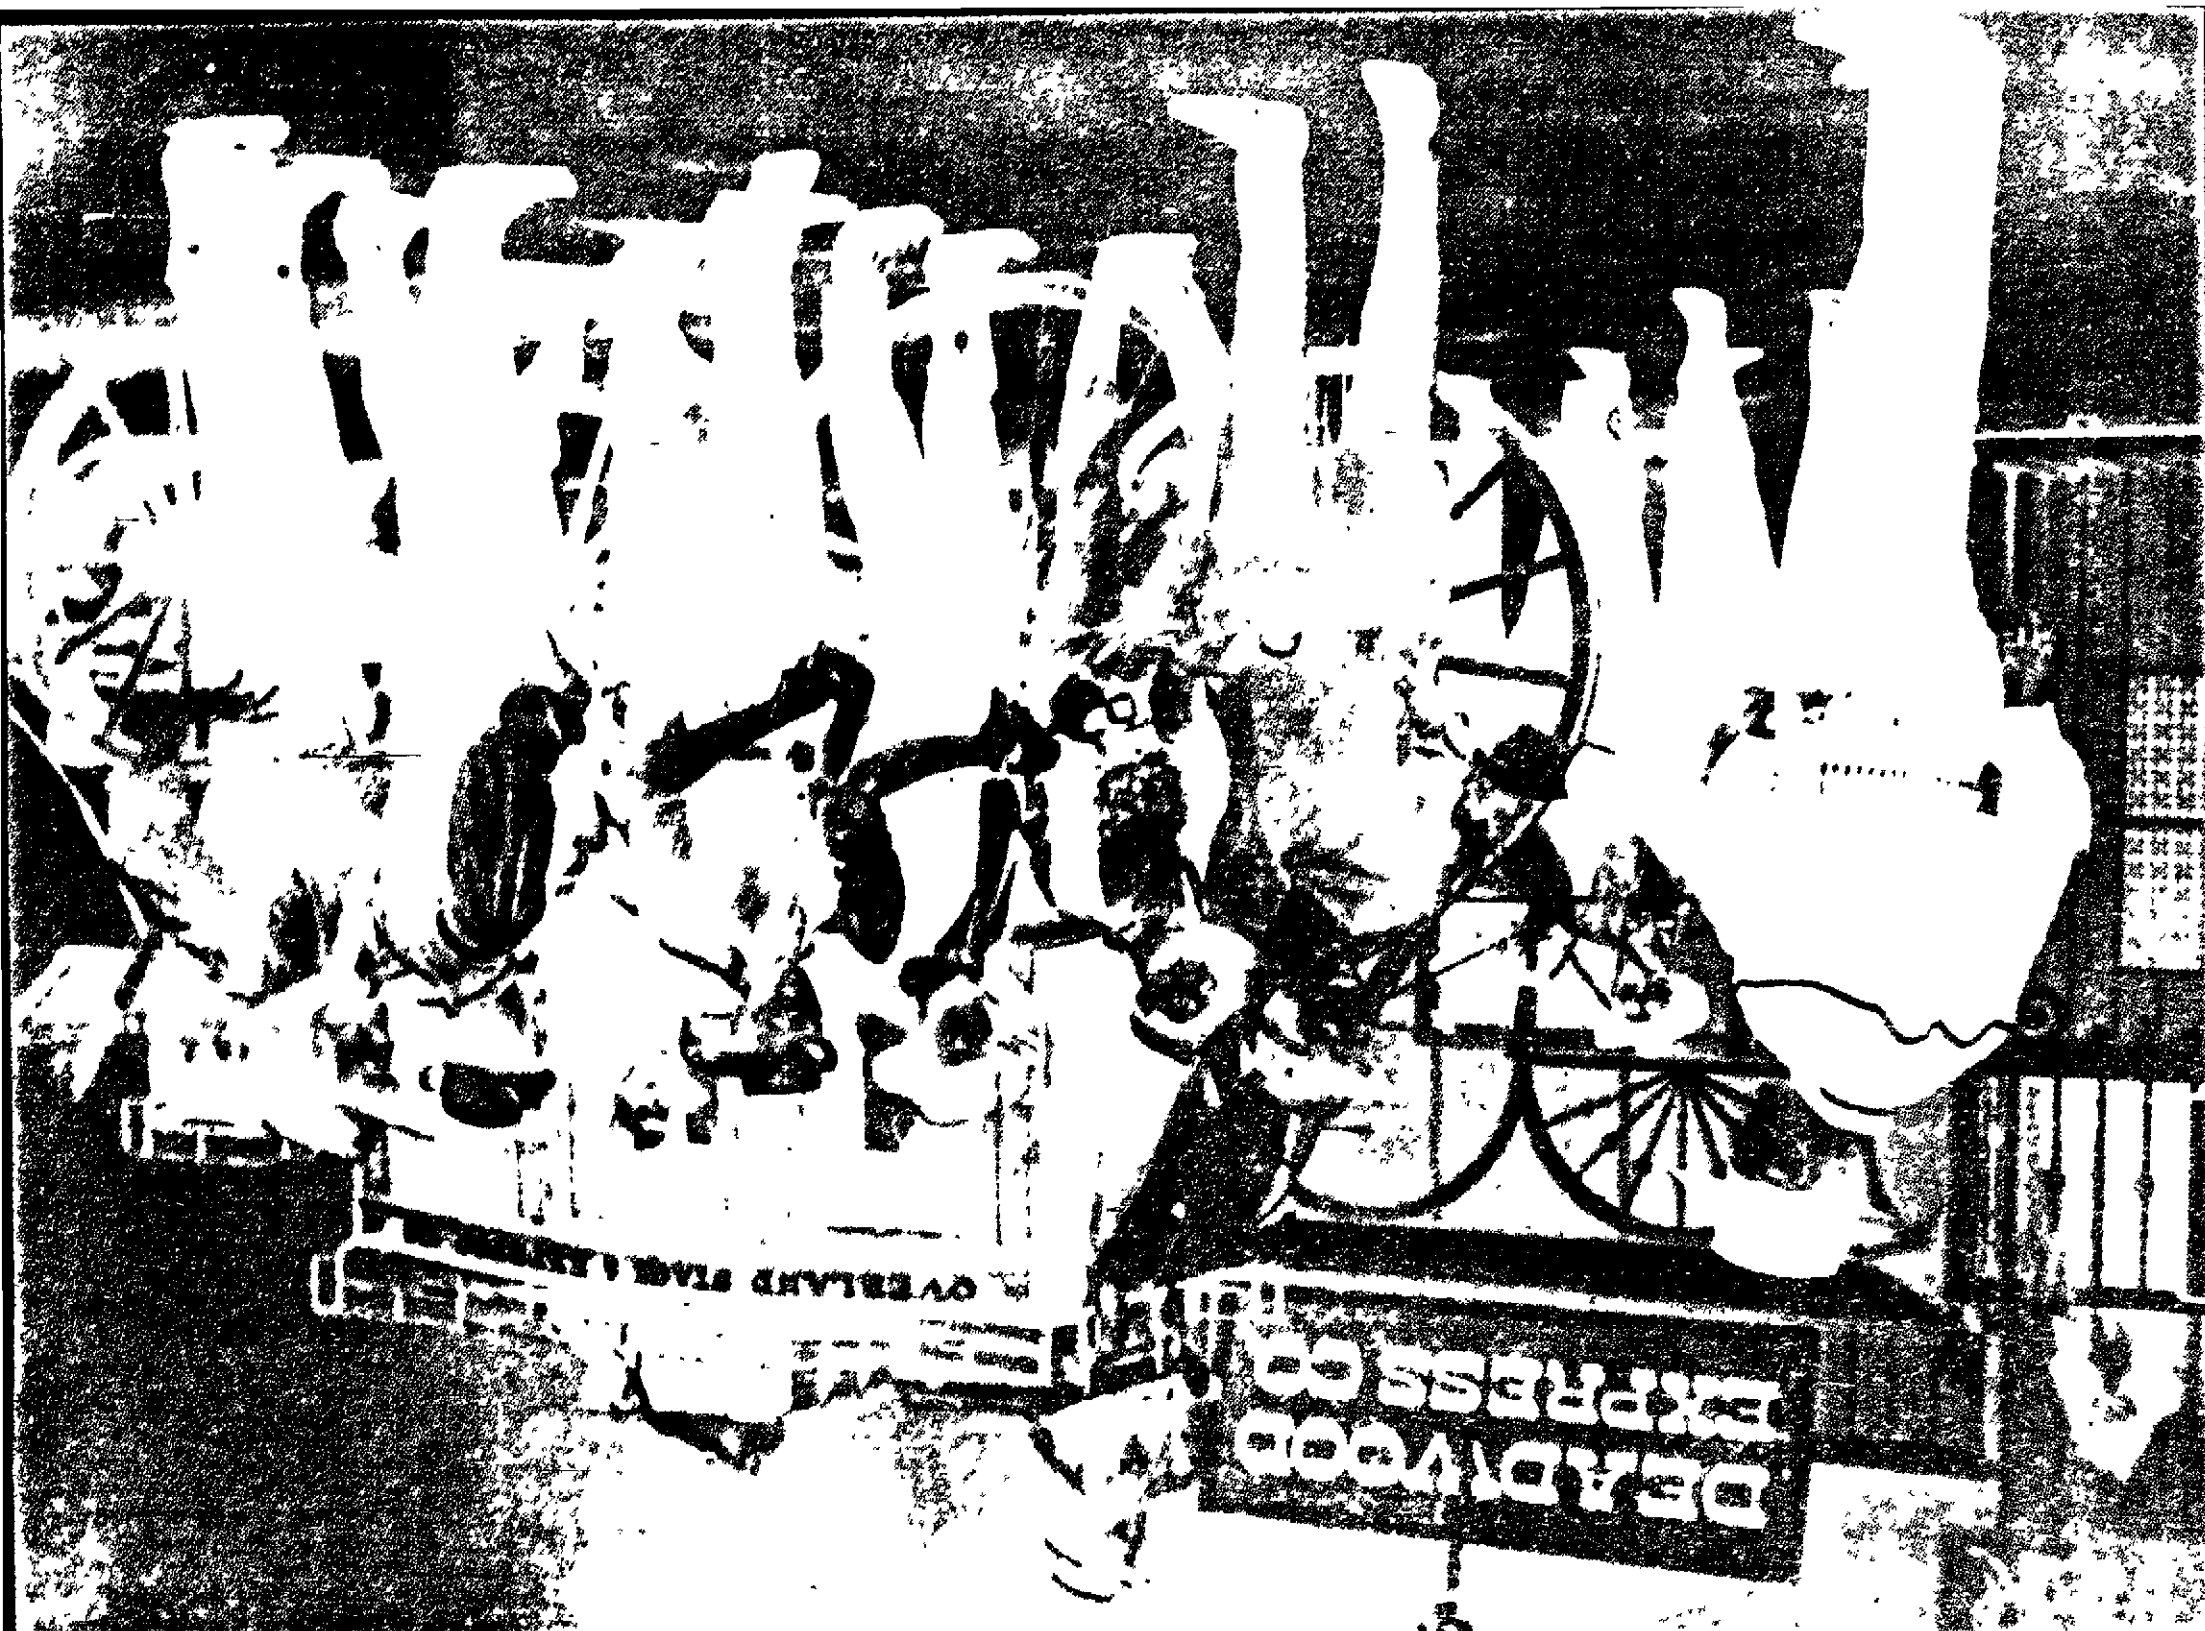

The monument was presented to the city by Olney Johnston Post No. 38, American Legion. It is dedicated "to the memory of our comrades who entered the service of their country from Outagamie county

These are but four of the continuing, tangible remembrances of the history Fox Cities residents have lived through. There are many more.

The State Historical Society has asked its local societies to help it discover all of the markers and monuments in the state. This article marks the beginning of the Post-Crescent's assistance in this search. On ensuing Sundays other monuments discovered in the Fox Cities area will be pictured with something of their history.

Your help will be appreciated in the search.

An elaborate musical production based on the Warner Bros. film of a few years back, "Calamity Jane," Carol Burnett will portray the title role, created in the film by Doris Day. Producer of the show is Flatt. Carol Burnett's husband, Score is by Joe Hamilton, Sammy Fain and Paul Francis Webster.

started in show business, it seemed as though the Rosses were the only ones who believed I could," Patty recalls.
 Then it happened—the summons for her first acting job. Patty was to be an extra in a crowd scene being filmed. Shortly afterward she got her first speaking part. She was chosen for a television role in which she had to speak Italian.
 A while later, she was cast as an English child in the television version of "The Prince and the Pauper" and although she was seen on the screen for only two minutes, Patty was singled out by the critics for her performance.
 When David Susskind produced "Wuthering Heights" for television, Patty was chosen to play the part of Cathy—a challenge she readily accepted. She was the only American in an all-British cast headed by Richard Burton.
 These performances established Patty in television and led to important roles with Helen Hayes, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Sir Lawrence Olivier and others for a total of more than 50 television appearances.
 The climax of her show business career to date, came of course, with her chance at enacting the role of the deaf, mute and blind Helen Keller.
 Her amazing performance won her the distinction of being the youngest actress ever to be starred on Broadway and made the 16-year-old girl the winner of the first Academy Award (Oscar even given to a juvenile in the "best supporting actress" category).
 But her success as Helen Keller was not just a star-spangled stroke of thespian genius. It was the end result of long, hard work in preparation for the part, when getting it was only a hope.
 Months before she auditioned for the role, she and her mentor Ross, worked on the characterization. And by the time Ross thought she was ready, Patty had learned the straight, unwavering stare of the blind, how to grope her way unseeing, around a room and to emit the guttural sounds made by the mute.
 She and Ross got ready for "The Patty Duke Show" in exactly the same way. In this series, Patty projects another side of her many faceted talent when she is seen in the dual role of look-alike cousins, with a happy knack of creating chaos in a community.

BY DON ROYAL
 NEW YORK—As some wise man once remarked, "Life follows Art."
 This aphorism is well illustrated in the remarkable show business success of young Patty Duke, first as the young Helen Keller in the movie "The Miracle Worker" and now in a dual role in her own television series, ABC-TV's "The Patty Duke Show."
 In Patty's case, her actual professional life followed art in form of the fictional pattern of "My Fair Lady"—all except in the romantic denouement, of course.
 It all really started with Anna Marie Patty Duke's first eight years in the lower East Side of New York a few blocks from Bellevue Hospital, where she was born.
 In neighborhoods such as that, kids naturally grow up acquiring the lingual peculiarities recognized by the rest of the country as "New Yorkese."
 "I was the original 'dese, dem and dose' kid," says Patty, "when Mr. Ross went to work on my speech and Mrs. Ross went to work on my hair."
 It was a real-life Professor Higgins—Liza Doolittle situation.
 The Mr. Ross she refers to is John Ross, a Boy's Club children's drama coach and manager, who was working with Patty's elder brother Ray. Ray had short-lived acting ambitions and is now in the Army. Mrs. Ross is a former ballet dancer.

 The Rosses saw something special in the skinny, under-sized little girl with the scraggly reddish-blond hair chopped up by a do-it-yourself haircut.
 They noted the expressive face and eyes that change from gray to green to blue.
 What the Rosses also saw, unknown to Patty, was a very little girl with a very big desire and an eagerness to learn all she could about acting.
 So Ross immediately began teaching her the basic principles in addition to taking her diction and speech in hand.
 Meanwhile, Mrs. Ross applied herself to Patty's hair, letting it grow long enough to put up in attractive braids.
 The going, however, was rough. Patty was turned down time and again for even the smallest parts, mostly because of her diction. Undaunted, the Rosses and Patty kept trying.
 Patty worked arduous hours with Ross to shed her "New Yorkese" accent. If the process, he taught her Irish, Italian, Southern, Spanish, German and British dialects to broaden the potential scope of her roles.
 Ross also was discovering that by having Patty concentrate on a British accent, the process of correcting her diction problem was speeded up.
 "Toward the end of my first year of trying to get

America and the World Community

You might say Albert Einstein started it—this feeling that the world is getting to the point where it may be able to get along without the human race. It's a mighty disconcerting feeling.

It could have started many years ago with as small a thing as a bit of refracted light. The light came from a star many light years out in space. The light, captured by a telescope, passed through a prism and was broken into a spectrum. In a measured period of time, the light from the star slipped along its original spectrum.

Einstein saw the significance of this "red shift." It meant, he concluded, the universe—one of the stable, known factors of science up to that time—actually was expanding at a precise, computable rate.

The consequences are a bit remote but, nonetheless, they are disconcerting. Some time in the future the central star of our solar system, our corner of the universe, will begin swallowing its satellite planets. It may be a thousand generations from now, but the world's inhabitants will still be members of the human race and carrying, at least, a semblance of our blood in their veins.

More recently, Einstein set up a more immediate apparition. In his pure research he sought the moment and particulars of matter changing into energy. Through his mathematical computations and research he came to a simple formula stating that energy equals mass moving at the square of the speed of light. With that chink in the door, other scientists pried open the power of the very sun and atomic and hydrogen bombs were created.

If there is any consolation in it, the sun swallowing the earth or the bomb going off, at least, wouldn't leave much of the planet for human habitation. However, these developments created out of the necessity of their magnitude, machines and concepts that threaten us humans while there still is an earth to inhabit.

When man proposes to shoot a ball into the heavens with instructions to beam its sensitive, mechanical eye on a star with an accuracy equivalent of dropping a basketball on a desk from a height of 500 miles, he can't figure out the mathematics on a pad of paper. He needs a machine with a memory of a generation of mathematicians.

A slave machine to do a mathematician's work for him isn't too bad—we could live with that. But the possibilities of these machines were too great a temptation!

The scientist's slave started to work for industry, business and just for kicks. Skilled crafts fell before the "thinking" machine. Battalions of clerks and bookkeepers bowed before devices. Even poetry and drama of a sort—became products of the ogres with their blinking lights and tremendous transistorized memories on whirling wheels of sensitized tape.

With the fate of our descendants spelled out for us—to the minute, if you like—and the immediate future hanging on the ability of sending mass spinning at the square of the speed of light, the present has become haunted by the efficiency of mechanical brains.

Recently a Mauldin cartoon was printed in these columns that gave point to this present apparition. The scene was the door of a huge factory through which was flying the chief executive being given the bum's rush. The caption, spoken by the rejected boss, was "It's happened! The machines have learned how to reproduce themselves." No need of humans there any more.

However, through the ages comes the voice of the Psalmist singing the song of faith, "What is man, that Thou art mindful of him?"

For those who share the Psalmist's faith it is apparent that there is a human pattern and purpose in this frightening maze of gears and wheels and blinking lights.

On Nov. 20 and 21, as a part of the Lawrence College-Post-Crescent "America and the World Community" series, three eminent thinkers will appear in Appleton in an attempt to make this human pattern and purpose a bit clearer.

They are Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College observatory, Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, an educator and author from Chicago University, and Howard Nemerov, poetry consultant, Library of Congress.

Their insight could clear a path in that maze of gears and lights.

Hunting Abuses

There have been an increasing number of protests this fall about abuses of hunting privileges. In letters to the editor and complaints to various government officials, farm and home owners in hunting areas and on the fringes of such areas have cited violations. Pets and livestock have been slaughtered by the trigger happy, fences have been cut, posted signs have been ignored, dogs and hunters have done extensive property damage. In part the organized posting of much of Calumet County during the deer season stems from fear of widespread violations.

Clearly the violators are ruining the sport. Their casual disregard for property rights—and even of human life since some shoot at anything that moves—is bound to bring tighter restrictions, more stringent enforcement and tougher penalties. Farmers who have welcomed hunters will put up more signs. Landowners may incorporate to make restrictions more binding. And the careful law-abiding hunters as well as the violators will find fewer areas open to them.

More careful instruction of young hunters may help the situation since many of the violators appear to be teenagers. But they have learned the disregard for the rights of others from their elders. Hunters themselves must make greater efforts to keep things within the law or unfortunately it will be done for them.

Lakeshore Regional Planning

The city of Sheboygan has proposed creation of a regional planning commission composed of seven counties: Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Kewaunee, Door, Brown, Calumet and Fond du Lac.

The Post-Crescent has long been an advocate of regional planning in Wisconsin, and we congratulate the Sheboygan officials for their leadership in this move. In this era of rapid communications and transportation, resulting in an increasing interdependence among local government units, planning and action on a regional basis is an ever-increasing need.

But we admit to being puzzled over the grouping proposed here. Certainly the lakeshore counties — Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Kewaunee and Door — have many problems in common and constitute a natural unit. In fact if a planning effort is to be organized on the basis of lakeshore interests the addition of Ozaukee County perhaps should be considered, despite the increasing tendency to think of Ozaukee as part of the Milwaukee metropolitan complex.

Brown County might be included on the theory that Green Bay is a lake port and thus would have problems in common with the ports of Sturgeon Bay, Kewaunee, Manitowoc and Sheboygan. But Brown is principally an industrial county dominated by the Green Bay metropolitan area, and as such has more natural ties with its southern neighbors in the Fox Valley.

Why Fond du Lac County? Other than the fact that it shares a common border with Sheboygan County, we cannot see any logical connection here. Fond du Lac is tied in with the Fox-Winnebago waterways system, and its rail and highway connections also are principally with Oshkosh, the Fox Cities and Green Bay. It would make just as much sense to say that Oshkosh should create a joint planning commission with Stevens Point.

Calumet County always has been a sort of "no man's land" with respect to regional arrangements. Its eastern third has had historical ties with Manitowoc and Sheboygan; its southwestern quarter has a natural orientation toward Fond du Lac, and its northwestern section is closely tied to the economy of Appleton and Neenah-Menasha. In fact a part of the city of Appleton is actually in Calumet County, and the Town of Harrison already is a member of the Fox Valley Regional Planning Commission.

It is important that as more regional planning efforts develop, the groupings be natural ones, else conflict will develop which could hinder really good planning. We strongly urge that Sheboygan's suggestion be amended to make it a truly lakeshore group; these counties have a natural common interest, while attempts to extend the effort inland causes conflict with other, and even more natural, groupings.

Students at High School Agree With Oliva Review

Editor, Post-Crescent:

"Several Appleton Residents" have raised an objection to the critical review of the Brothers Four concert written by Mark Oliva. In the opinion of "several high school students" Mr. Oliva's article was logically sound and, incidentally, a very good piece of writing.

The fact that the audience "indicated complete satisfaction" is not a reflection on the quality of the performance; rather, an indication of the level of culture and intelligence of the people themselves. If we, as a community, are willing to accept second-rate entertainment which is ethnically dishonest and an insult to our sense of humor, then we shall never be offered anything more than second-rate. Far from discouraging good talent, our criticism will challenge it and will bring the best to us.

Mr. Oliva substantiated his article with a great deal of evidence which certainly was not derived from a casual acquaintance with music and humor. Many local people truly interested in folk music had to agree with his very valid commentary. We feel our paper is fortunate to have a man so well versed in this field on its staff.

It is a shame that people are not willing to learn from an authoritative criticism. Instead of taking offense at something with which we do not agree why can't we ask to see something better as proof. With a better background in all the arts our city can grow culturally as well as materially. But, perhaps, we're too narrow-minded to try . . . are we?

'Why Do They Always Doubt My Sincerity?'

Sevareid Says

Italy Frenziedly on Move, but Doesn't Know Where It Is Going

BY ERIC SEVAREID

less dolce, Italy seems to be going in circles.

The universal symbol of material bliss, the automobile, has ruined the serenity of the Eternal City, making it again as noisy as it was in the chariot-and-cobblestone days of the Caesars, when Cicero and his noble friends complained that they couldn't get a decent sleep in the city. By the end of 1964, 100,000 more cars will have been added to this congestion and what's to be done, nobody has the faintest idea. New York's dashing traffic commissioner, Mr. Barnes, looked at the problem and gave up.

Prostitutes line the streets, giving pain to the old time Socialists who had firmly believed the Marxist line that vice was the product of poverty. It is the product of human nature in the presence of money; but Freud, alas for the ideologues, came along after Marx.

As this is written, Italian troop formations gather on the outskirts of Rome for the Armistice Day parade. If war came they presume they would march — though even that is uncertain—but in what direction and exactly why, they have no idea. They can't be expected to know that they are in the grand alliance, at American insistence, for political reasons, or that for geographical reasons their country would be a military liability in war, which is why the British didn't want them in.

BOOM ON IN NORTH

The great industrial boom in the north is in its fourth year, but somehow the general prosperity doesn't seep down to the farms and villages in the south, and tens of thousands of southerners drift into Milan every year, adding to the congestion, the relief problem and the prospects for Communist agitators—precisely the story all over Africa and Latin America.

The late Pope John spoke accommodatingly of the Communist states in his famous encyclical; thousands of Italian men immediately told their devout wives that they could now vote Communist and remain faithful to the Church; and the Communist vote increased, thoroughly confusing everyone and scaring more than a few.

Traditions are crashing, right and left. Under the great dome of St. Peter's, the rank and file—if that's the expression—in the Ecumenical Council have the bit in their teeth, and the bureaucracy of the Curia really is fighting a losing battle against the renovation of the oldest continuing human institution on earth.

And Italian politics are being renovated, at this moment. Old Pietro Nenni, who couldn't say yes and couldn't say no to Togliatti's Communists all these post-war years, has now decided to say yes to the bourgeoisie. He wants to take his sulking Socialist party into a coalition government with the Christian Democrats. At the risk of a party split he may be able to do it, and this just may end up in the isolation of the Communists, when their hopes and strength were rising. To this reporter, who first went to see Nenni after the Germans surrendered Rome when he huddled in an overcoat in an unheated room on the Via Sistina, the current Nenni seems unrecognizable in his new role. But history has distorted his theories of those days. Italy has grown generally prosperous by a different method than his, and, after all, a politician in his twilight years would like a taste of office and power.

Pork Quality Standard Confusing to Farmers

Editor, Post-Crescent:

In the October 8th issue of your paper you had an article entitled, "U. W. Researchers Develop Pork Quality Standards." It's my thought that it was the most confusing article that we have had a chance to read in some time, in that your readers, most particularly farmers, are very apt to confuse hog type and pork standards and by so doing get off the rocker.

It is generally known that there is a wide variation in the quality of pork produced in the state. What all this variation is due to seems to be little understood and little is done about it.

We learn that the Canadians, English, Danes and Hollanders, in order to produce a high quality or more desirable carcass, generally feed a large percentage of barley in their ration and practice restricted feeding. Most of our hogs here are full fed about 90 per cent corn and 10 per cent concentrate.

We understand that lately there has been a number of feeding trials carried on at the Wisconsin and Illinois stations that have proven that hogs fed on limited rations consisting of more small grains and less corn develop a much more desirable carcass, at a lower cost than those fed on the old standard of 90 per cent corn and 10 per cent concentrate.

At present we have the U. S. extension and Dept. of Market workers going all out to induce the farmers to produce a longer, leaner type of porker and they are doing a good job as far as they have gone, but at the same time the feeder pig buyers are encouraging the farmer to produce a shorter, thicker pig. Now to cap the climax the U. W. came out in the press with an article, telling the people that the number 3 pork is most desirable and the number 1 and 2 grades are too watery and off color. So it has been for fifty years all a grand, merry-go-round.

As a result the swine industry of the state is losing not less than twenty million dollars a year and Wisconsin is losing the opportunity of becoming the top quality pork producing state in the union. It seems time the voters of the state would be thinking of selecting leaders that would pay more attention to economy and employment than political power.

U. S. Should Extend Its Aid To New Regime in Viet Nam

Editor, Post-Crescent:

The inevitable has taken place. The despotic government of President Diem has been overthrown, and the long-persecuted Buddhists have taken over. Most Americans rejoice at this news, and rightly so, for the persecution of the Vietnamese rekindles the Spirit of '76 in the hearts of the patriotic, reminding us that our forefathers also refused to put up with tyranny.

At the same time, this incident should remind us of another much closer to our shores, which took place on New Year's Eve of 1958, when a little-known guerrilla and his band of followers swept down from the hills of Cuba to topple the Batista regime. Americans rejoiced with their neighbors over the victory, and many sent congratulations to the rough-and-tumble leader, Fidel Castro. Yet when the young government asked us for aid, we treated it like a stray dog,

New Bank Buildings in Area Testify to New Approach to Banking

Ever hear of a "Little Shaver Saver Raiser"?

I hadn't either until I attended a press preview of the new Appleton State Bank building this week. Installed in front of one of the teller's windows is a round platform equipped with hand rail which raises and lowers like an elevator. Youngsters doing business at the bank who aren't tall enough to reach up to the window stand on the platform, which recesses level with the floor, the teller pushes a button, and they are raised to window height. It's even equipped with its own carpeting matching that of the bank's lobby.

It's an eye-catching illustration of the changes which have come over the banking business in recent years.

Illustrative of the same point, of course, are the many new bank buildings built or being built in this area. Their architectural style, their decor, their mood and atmosphere all tell the same story: banks today are aggressively out after your and my business.

I graphically remember the first time I went to a bank to seek a loan. It wasn't too long after I was married—a period in one's life when one first seems to experience the financial problem businessmen refer to as "temporary cash shortage."

I had maintained a checking account of sorts with the bank for some time and the president was a boyhood friend. But the idea of going into the bank to borrow money contained no connotation of friendliness. The traditional caricature of the banker scowling behind his desk and shouting "No" had been firmly planted in my mind.

I walked around that block for half an hour before I got up the courage to enter. And I was absolutely amazed when the bank president said "How much do you want?" and wrote out a note. He acted like he did it every day—which of course he did.

Bankers have made real efforts and real progress in recent years to alter their image. And the huge building program of recent years to replace the cold imposing structures of the 1920's with the modern warm and inviting type of bank building is part and parcel of this effort and this progress.

Every bank in Appleton is either in new quarters now or will be soon and one new one has been added, Appleton State, Outagamie County and First National and the new Northern State. The Farmers and Merchants Bank at Kaukauna moved into a new building several years ago and the Bank of Kaukauna and the Bank of Kimberly underwent extensive remodeling. The Bank of Little Chute has a new building, and in the Twin Cities the National Manufacturers Bank built a new addition and the First National in Neenah is now a-building, while the Bank of Menasha also added on considerably and remodelled and the First National of Menasha is now taking bids on a completely new building.

The Appleton State and First National construction jobs here are particularly interesting from the standpoint that new buildings were erected next door while business as usual went on in the old quarters, then the old buildings are torn down and a new second half built. In the State's case this resulted in tripling the space available.

Particularly noticeable in the new bank buildings is the use of large areas of glass, inviting the public to look and walk in. Drive-in facilities of course are now standard equipment, and large parking facilities. Small loan departments are generally so located that they can remain open during normal shopping hours.

The Appleton State for example has two walk-up windows located in the lobby to accommodate customers before and after regular hours, and there is a separate entrance off the lobby to the small loan department. These facilities can remain open after the rest of the building is closed.

Desks of bank officers are generally located in wide open areas adjacent to the lobby instead of being tucked back in closed offices as they were years ago. The whole atmosphere is one of "Come on in and see us."

Set-back from the street and landscaping of intervening areas is also part of the new trend. In the case of the Appleton State there is a most unusual treatment. The set-back is 42 feet, and two large open wells flanking the main entrance provide visibility to the drive-in auto bank and parking area on the lower or Superior Street level. Birch and flowering crab trees have been planted in giant pots and shrubbery has been added to coordinate with Appleton's Project 70 program aimed at beautifying as well as modernizing the city's business district.

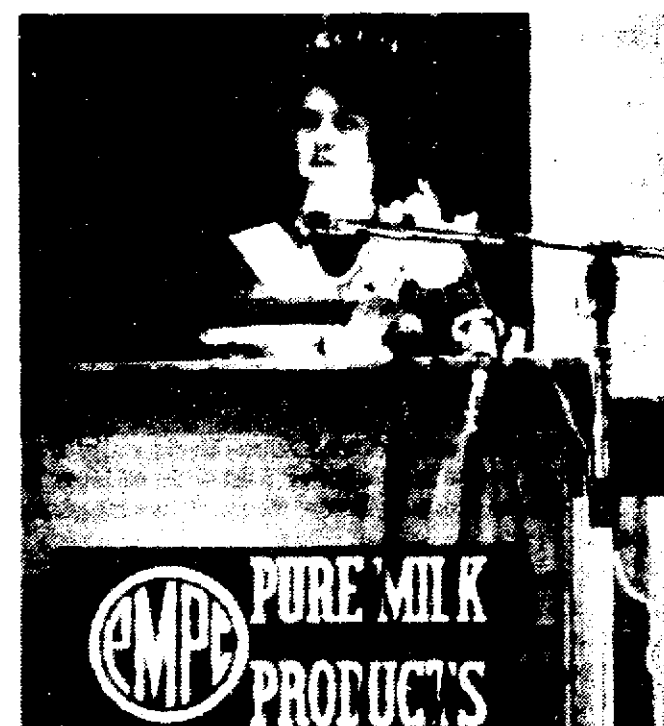

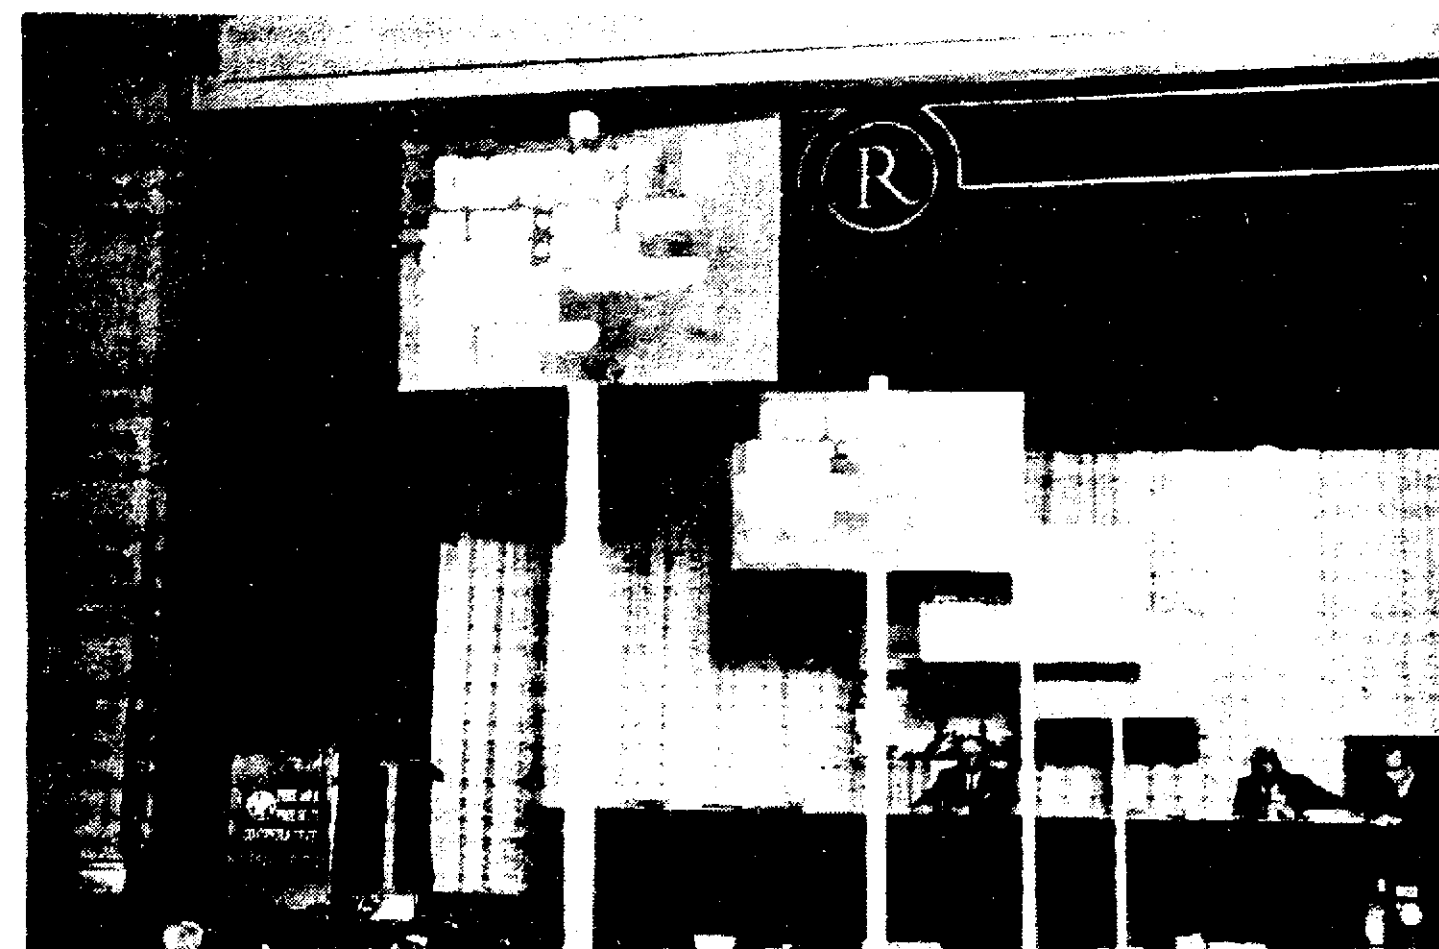

The visitor to Appleton today gets an immediate impression of a city whose downtown area is on the move. The rebuilding of all of the city's bank buildings is a major factor in this progress. Gus Zuehlke and his father, Art, have every reason to be proud of their contribution.

throwing it only meager crumbs. No wonder the Cuban government was won over by the Communist hand which was held open to it. Today Cuba is the one stronghold of Communism in the western hemisphere because the Americans preferred too practice charity only at home.

Now we have another chance. From here on, it is up to us. Communist China will strengthen its push to topple Viet Nam, and the political turmoil there only makes the task easier. The Vietnamese definitely do not want a Red Chinese takeover. Even the most backward villagers have seen the bloodshed caused by them. But we can be certain that the Soviet Union will be in there pitching with their "peaceful" methods of winning the small country for Marxism, if nothing more than to prove to the Chinese that their mode of conquest is better. Naturally the Vietnamese will be looking Delegations were seated together in Roosevelt auditorium, Fond du Lac, as they heard Manager William C. Eckles report that the year's sales for Pure Milk Products Co-operative exceeded the previous year by 2 per cent. The co-operative is the largest organization representing dairy farmers in the state of Wisconsin.

Ninety-one year old John Kuntz, of West Bend, has attended 14 conventions of Pure Milk Products Co-operative, and hopes to attend many more. Kuntz gave up his farm in 1950, at the age of 78.

More than 900 delegates from 11 districts gathered in Fond du Lac Oct. 29 for the 34th annual meeting of Pure Milk Products Co-operative. There, they convened in Roosevelt auditorium (above) to hear William C. Eckles, manager of the co-operative, report that the organization had completed one of its most successful years. The People Sing

Human Anguish Felt in Negro Prison Songs

BY MARSHALL GRANROS

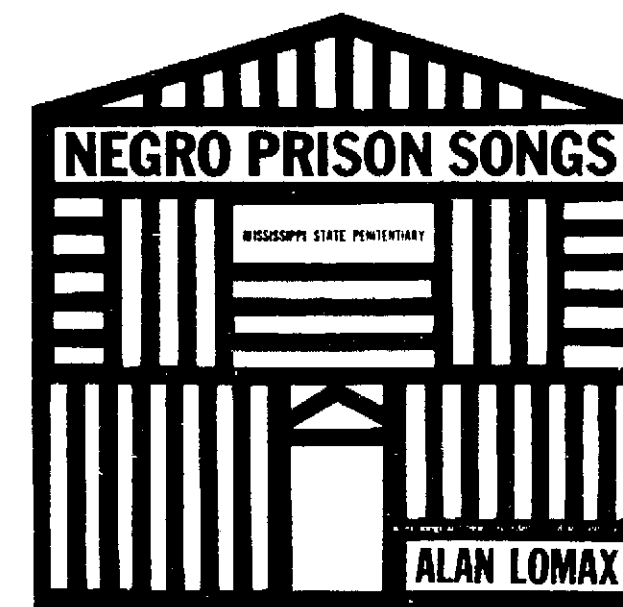

The songs have an almost overwhelming cutting power. Like the axes the prisoners use on the work gangs, the powerful music and the bitterness of the words slice through the thin veneer of polite society as we know it. They lay to rest, forever, the Southern White Segregationists' argument that "The Nigras like and want to keep things the way they are".

The depth of feeling indicated here, as words and melody fuse into pure emotion, is more than music. It is a shout of anger. A cry of pain. A whimper of bewilderment. A moan of frustration and hopelessness.

The shadow of the Southern penal system is deep and it reaches into the lives of all Negroes. It is probably the strongest influence of all to keep the Black Man "in his place". He learns early in life that he must resign himself to the system and follow the rules laid down by the white man. To deviate is to become a marked man at the mercy of the "laws". Rebellion, in the form of an act of violence or a theft, in being "impudent or sassy", in refusing to knuckle under to the rules of Jim Crow, meant the chain gang or the "pen".

Conditions Improved

By 1947, when Alan Lomax recorded this album, conditions in Southern prisons had improved markedly over those that existed in the early 1930's. But the Mississippi State Penitentiary at Parchman, Miss., was still more of a cotton plantation using prison labor than a modern penal institution trying to reclaim human lives. It was operated at a profit.

Revived Spirits

The object was to get the most out of the land. A man had to be tough to survive. Day in and day out, they rose before dawn and ran all the way to the fields, while the guards rode behind on horseback. All day long they worked under the burning rays of "Old Hannah". Many died at work in the fields, while clearing the woods, while working on the road gangs. Sunstroke, disease, accidents and self-mutilation left many others only part human. Music was their common strength in the fight to survive.

As Lomax notes: "In the pen itself, we saw that the songs, quite literally, kept the man alive and normal. As the gangs 'rolled under the hot broilin' sun', the roaring choruses of the songs revived flagging spirits, restored energy to failing bodies, brought laughter to silent misery".

It is all here, on this recording. It is sadness and despair, loneliness and fear, strength and courage. It is beautiful music in its simplest and most important form. It is a social document, a tribute to the indomitable spirit of humanity. Echoes of Africa and slavery are here, but so too are the roots of the Blues and Jazz. Its power to move and affect you cannot be diminished, no matter how often the Kingston Trio's and Limeliters' borrow from it and attempt to prettify it. It is what Folk Music is really all about. Harvest-Time Go-Togethers, Hard Combinations to Beat

BY LILLIAN MACKESY
Post-Crescent Food Editor

Certain foods make as cozy a combination as a pair of Bobbsey twins . . . a man and his dog . . . ham and eggs . . . or a brace of turtle doves. They are called go-togethers. Candied and dried fruits are just such flavorful go-togethers with baked ham . . . so are the popular cold weather meat pies with biscuits. Here are two outstanding recipes that fit this go-together pattern . . . Candied Orange Cups 'n' Dried Fruits with baked ham and Checkerboard Lamb Pie.

A half-ham, either butt or shank portion, is just about the right size for family dining and the rule is to bake it slowly. Remember, too, that these days the homemaker has the choice of fully cooked ham that's all ready for slicing and eating or those hams that need cooking before eating. The precooked ham may be heated according to directions on the wrapper. But the cook-before-eating type means just what its name implies . . . it needs additional cooking and should reach 160 degrees internal temperature on a meat thermometer before it's ready for the table. Any ham not marked "fully cooked" should be classified as a cook-before-eating type.

Candied Orange Cups And Dried Fruits

- 4 small oranges
Cold water
1-1/2 cups sugar
2/3 cup water
1/4 cup cut-up dried peaches or apples
1/4 cup golden seedless raisins
1/4 cup currants
1 tablespoon chopped preserved ginger

Cut oranges in halves crosswise. Remove orange section and set aside. Scrape out excess white membrane. Cover cups with cold water, bring to a boil and cook about 10 minutes. Drain and repeat, simmering until tender. Drain.

Combine sugar and two-thirds cup water in two-quart saucepan. Cook until syrup reaches 230 degrees on candy thermometer, threading stage. Add orange cups and cook slowly until they are transparent. Spoon some of the syrup into orange cups during cooking. Remove from syrup and drain. Save the syrup for later use.

Rinse and drain dried fruits. Add with reserved orange sections and chopped ginger to syrup; cook slowly for 30 minutes or until fruit is tender. Spoon mixture into candied orange cups. Serve around ham.

Checkerboard Lamb Pie

- 1-1/2 pounds ground lamb
2 beef bouillon cubes
2 cups hot water
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped pecans
1 cup currants or raisins
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon dried mint leaves, crushed
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cups self-rising flour
1/4 cup water
1 medium tomato, peeled and chopped

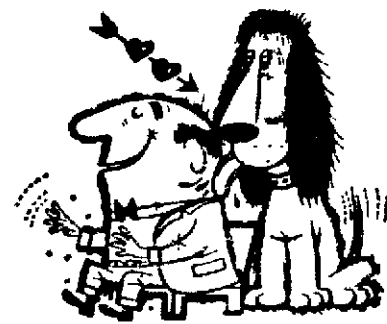

Brown lamb in skillet; drain off excess fat. Dissolve bouillon cubes in hot water. Stir beef bouillon, onion, green pepper, pecans, currants or raisins, garlic, mint leaves and salt into skillet with lamb in it. Simmer lamb mixture while preparing biscuits. Then blend flour with one-fourth cup water; stir with chopped tomato into lamb mixture. Cook until thickened.

Turn mixture into eight-inch square pan. Top with Biscuit Squares, alternating rows of four biscuits with rows of three biscuits so that edges almost touch, thus forming checkerboard design. Bake in preheated, 450-degree oven 18 to 22 minutes or until biscuits are slightly browned.

Biscuit Squares

- 1-1/2 cups sifted self-rising flour
1/4 cup shortening
Milk (1/2 to 2/3 cup)

Sift flour into bowl. Cut or rub in shortening until mixture is crumbly. Blend in enough milk to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board or pastry cloth; knead gently about 30 seconds. Roll out to rectangle about 3 1/2 by 7 1/2 inches. Cut dough into 21 one-inch squares. Arrange on top of hot lamb mixture. Recipe makes four to six servings.

Faulkner Recalls 'My Brother Bill'

My Brother Bill By John Faulkner Tradeat $4.95.
The personality of William Faulkner is the subject of this book, written as an "affectionate reminiscence" by his brother John, four years his junior.

But there is almost as much material about the Faulkner family's environment — Oxford, Miss., in the early years of this century — as there is about the Nobel Prize winner.

The brother assumes the reader is familiar with the contents of William's books, and with the salient facts of his biography. He has attempted no literary analyses.

John makes a leisurely climb through the family tree, examines in minute detail the school patterns, childhood games, pranks and social customs of their small town life, and recalls innumerable small anecdotes.

Negro Servants

He tells you about the family's Negro servants; he recalls how the father kept changing businesses; he gives details about such events as William's broken nose (as a high school quarterback he tackled a stupid fellow player who was running the wrong way with an intercepted pass).

As for William's adult life, the brother cites specific instances of the stubborn insistence on privacy; recalls William's early interest in airplanes and his late interest in riding horses, his toying with farming; mentions his early conviction that shocking stories would sell, and his later, purely monetary, interest in Hollywood; and catalogs many a mild idiosyncrasy.

John wrote short stories and novels, too, but never became a full-time author. He has left a highly personal account of his brother's life. Faulkner fans may find no great disclosures here, but there is a great deal of close observation.

Selected American Volumes Are Sent to 100 Heads of State

BY MILES A. SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — There is an intriguing aspect of a new project of the American Booksellers Association which is sending a selected package of 105 recent American books to the heads of state in 100 countries.

Presumably these donated shipments of 10,500 volumes will give the executives a full image of America.

But as the intriguing side effect, American readers should be interested in what is going abroad. As a parlor game, see how many of these titles have been included in your reading.

Since 1930 the ABA has been making quadrennial donations to American Presidents for their personal use. This is entirely separate from the recent move to donate to the White House's permanent collection 1,780 titles selected by a group of scholars.

In the ABA's convention last year, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy suggested that American publishers step up the distribution of books abroad, and the present project is part of the response.

105 Volumes

These 105 American books, nearly all published in the last three years, were selected by a committee of booksellers, the men closest to American book-buying.

Under the heading of "The American Scene" they have chosen 24 titles. They range from John Steinbeck's "Travels With Charley" to such exuberant geographical descriptions as Peter Farb's "Face of North America" to Justice William O. Douglas' "My Wilderness." The controversial subject of integration is represented by Ralph McGill's "The South and the Southerner" and a symposium edited by Hoke Norris, titled "We Dissent."

In the category of "Arts and Letters" there are the latest published works of Frost, Sandburg, E. B. White and James Thumber—all meritorious word-pictures—and James T. Flexner's work on American art, "That Wilder Image."

There are 23 biographical items, involving such figures as Longfellow, John Adams, Eleanor Roosevelt and Sinclair Lewis. In history, the 17-volume range is from the Mayflower to two of Bruce Catton's books on the Civil War and Theodore White's "The Making of the President, 1960."

The fiction category, running to 27 titles, really is the most interesting of all. It includes many prize-winners and best sellers and our overseas friends will find a great variety here.

The late William Faulkner's last novel, "The Reivers," is a light-hearted return to another era in the South. There are more recent visits to regional America—Davis Grubb's gripping Ohio Valley story in "The Voices of Glory," Jetta Carleton's mid-continent chronicle of simple people in "The Moonflower Vine" and Earl Hamner's novel "Spencer's Mountain," about decent hill folk. Of course Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mockingbird" could not be left out.

American Integrity

Steinbeck's "The Winter of Our Discontent" carries a message of stubborn early American integrity set on Long Island. J. F. Powers' "Morte D'Urban" occurs in the upper Midwest and Edwin O'Connor's "The Edge of Sadness" delineates an immigrant scene in Boston. Hal Borland's "When the Legends Die" is a story from the Indian country and Louis Auchincloss writes about yesterday's self-sufficient Manhattanites in "Portrait in Brownstone."

But of course the matter of geography is incidental. There is a tremendous range in the gallery of American portraits in these novels. The significant fact is that most of these fictional characters are self-giving, honest, striving Americans. Conversely, it is a noteworthy point that Hollywood's exhibitionists and freaks have been omitted.

The compilers of this list have assumed that there is a steady flow of scientific, political and educational works from this country to all the world. So they have concentrated on the theme of America's way of life.

Novel Abounds in Human Compassion

The Medici Fountain By Joseph Kessel. Translated from the French by Helma Bruffault. St. Martin's Press. $5.95.

Written in the tradition of the great French novels, "The Medici Fountain" abounds in characters and incidents, in humanity and human compassion. A tremendous look which challenges the reader's imagination, its title is derived from the popular fountain in the Luxembourg Gardens of Paris.

The time is 1914 and World War I. This is the story of the Dallean family — of Richard, the romantic student, of his younger brother, Daniel, of his unsuccessful father, Dr. Dallean, and of his unsophisticated mother, Sophie. Many characters enrich or threaten their lives: Etienne, a radical, Genevieve, his sister, Adrienne, his mother and several girls.

Using the technique of a screen writer, Mr. Kessel builds situation upon situation and one character leads to another. Richard and Etienne go off to war, but the book does not deal with actual battles. The scene leaves Paris, goes to the front, then to Nice, as the young men get a furlough.

Joseph Kessel has had a varied and adventurous life. He served in World War I as an aviator, worked for the Resistance in World War II. He is a novelist, journalist and screen writer. Presently he lives in France. In America the best known of his writings is "The Lion," which was recently made into a motion picture.

Fredricksburg Dog Mart Day Is Target for Pig Fair to Aim At

BY BUD LARIMER

Here might be a real target for Appleton's Pig Fair to aim at. How many readers are familiar with the famous Fredricksburg, Va., Dog Mart Day? An annual event, it is a colorful medley of dogs of infinite variety, hunting horn contests, shooting contests, sports events, bands, parades, adjacent national shrines—something for the enjoyment of everyone.

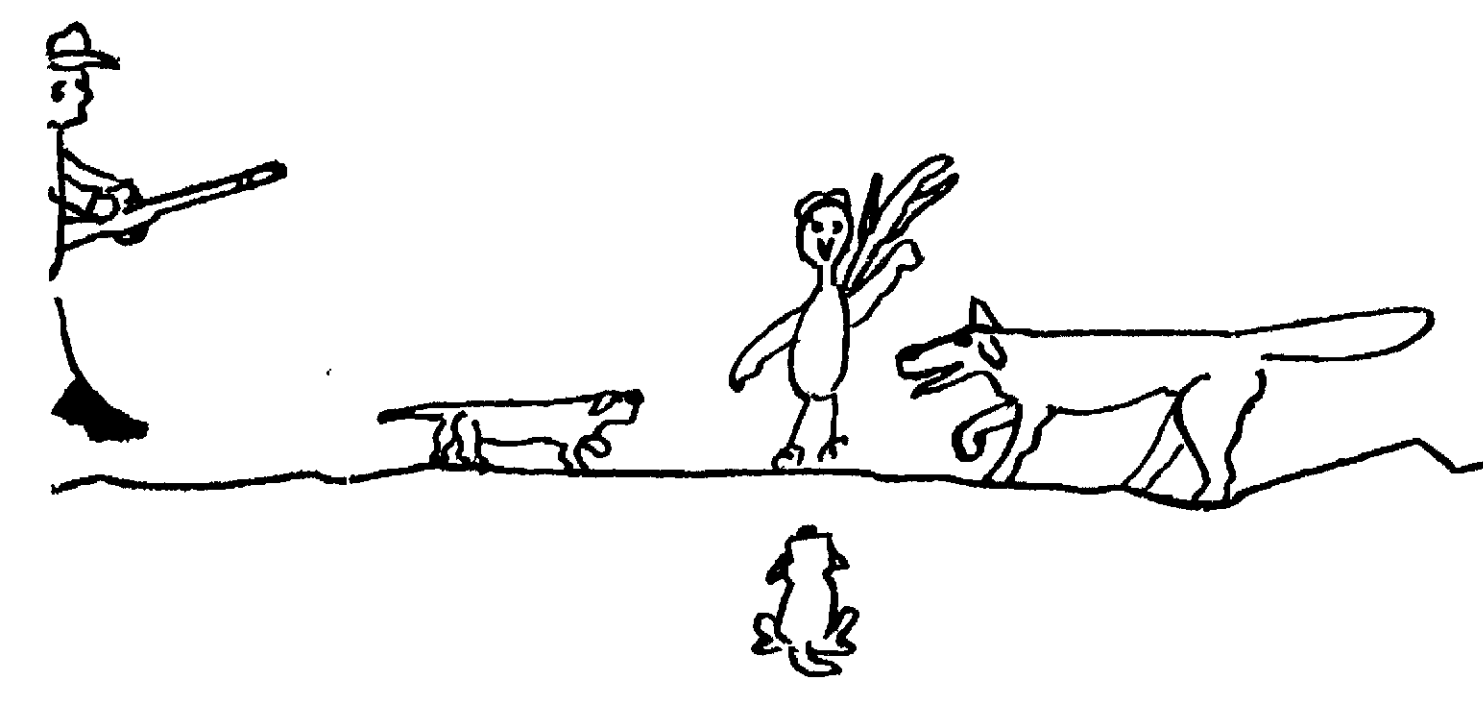

It is said that the beginning of these colorful pageant ante-dates the city's name by 29 years. Washington's first home, Ferry Farm, was just across its Rappahannock River. His early school years are said to have been in Fredricksburg. Even after the family's move to Mount Vernon, he is reputed to have made frequent visits to his early surroundings.

In 1698 a truce was established between Eastern

Virginia's settlers and their Indian neighbors. One of the results of this truce was a brisk trade between them. The Indians coveted the white-man's hunting dogs, and the white-man lusted for his Red brother's furs, gold and handicraft articles. All this began in the then Leaseland Settlement, soon to become Fredricksburg. So born, 260 years ago, it has gradually grown and expanded into the variegated day of joyous participation of all Fredricksburg and many visitors, who make the trip each year.

Hunting Country

Still an enthusiastic hunting country, hounds and pointing breeds predominate. There are trailing and "belling" contests, hunting horn contests, hog calling, a conformation dog show, obedience trials, a parade, pretty girl majorettes, a children's pet show, a colorful dog auction—you name it, they've got it.

Along the side-lines one may enjoy endless hunting and tog tales, right along with numberless dog tails.

How about it, Appleton, let's get out of the Lutheran Aid parking lot and compete with Fredericksburg.

By the time the foregoing has been read, the Oshkosh Kennel Club's Conformation and Obedience Classes will be in full swing on the floor of the V.F.W. Hall in Oshkosh. Visitors are welcome, and if your visits inspire you to seek a membership in the club, that will be very welcome too.

Winnegamie Dog Club will also have been holding their classes in both fields at their location in Black Creek. Also part of history's annals is their Dog Cavalcade, held Sept. 25-26, during National Dog Week, at Appleton's Valley Fair. Quite an array of Wonder how the various hunting combinations have been faring in their pursuits of the wily field fowls. Anyone have anything spectacular to report?

Sheinwold on Bridge

World's Toughest Game Is Scheduled

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In a few days the toughest bridge game in the country will be held in Miami Beach. Sixteen pairs of men and eight pairs of women will start, a five-day round-robin contest to determine which players will represent the United States in the world championship next May in New York.

This is the third year that the American Contract Bridge League has used the round-robin method of picking its team. The method of scoring is so complicated that the best scorekeepers of the League average several mistakes per session instead of their normal one mistake per year.

What it boils down to is this: The three pairs of men who finish at the top of the ranking will constitute the U. S. team in the open bracket of the world championship. And the three top pairs of women will constitute the women's team.

If you think that sounds simple, don't relax. The 16 pair of men include one woman—Mrs. Dorothy Hayden, of Hastings-on-Hudson, New York, a demure, feminine blonde who won the National Open Pair Championship last December with B. Jay Becker.

The men's bracket would have included another woman, Mrs. Edith Kemp, except that Mrs. Kemp qualified for the women's round-robin as well as for the men's. She preferred to play in the women's event, in which her partner is her sister, Mrs. Anne Burnstein.

Robert Jordan and Arthur Robinson will be playing in the round-robin for the third straight year. They won a berth on the team last time, but narrowly missed the first time.

Edwin Kantar and Marshall Miles, California stars, will likewise be playing as partners for the third time. They missed the team the first two times.

It will be the third time, also, for Alvin Roth and Tobias Stone. They played together and missed the first time, with different partners and missed again the second time; and this time they have still different partners.

The League makes much of partnership and insists that players who qualify for the round-robin by winning national championships must stick together as partners. But then the League appoints a team captain who may break up partnerships in the middle of a world championship. (This happened a few months ago, and may have cost us the title!)

Anyway, it will be a very tough contest, and you can read about it in your newspaper. It's about time we picked a winning combination.

Win the Race

In many notrump contracts there is a race between declarer and the defenders. Which side will get its tricks first? Your line of play may depend on whether you can bring the tricks in quickly.

South had a problem because he chose the wrong rebid. He should have bid two clubs instead of one notrump. This would have indicated a good club suit and would not have promised strength in the unbid suits (where South had nary a stopper).

If South had bid two clubs at his second turn, North would have jumped to three notrump. There would have been no embarrassing opening lead, and North would have romped home with his contract.

Takes Finesse

Since South played the hand, West opened the ten of hearts. South had to try the finesse losing to the king. Back came the jack of hearts to dummy's ace.

Now South was in danger. If he lost a trick in the course of developing his nine tricks, the opponents would run the rest of the hearts to defeat the contract. South had to make nine tricks on the dead run.

The only hope lay in the clubs. Declarer led a club from dummy and finessed with the queen.

Much to South's relief, West played a low club. The club finesse was working, and the only problem was to repeat it often enough to bring in the entire suit.

South had to lead the queen of spades to dummy's king, thus landing in dummy for a second club finesse. He could then lead the jack of spades to dummy's ace, to try a third finesse. This enabled him to take five club tricks, two spades, one heart, and one diamond.

If South tried to take three spade tricks, he would get to dummy only once in spades. He would be able to take only two finesses through the king of clubs instead of the three finesses needed to bring the suit in.

It's a rare soul who can resist the temptation to see if a "Wet Paint" sign really means what it says. And rarer still for anyone to pass by one of the new electronic home organs without poking at a key. You should see them smile when the music comes out.

No question about it, just looking at an organ in a store or a friend's home makes your fingers itch to try it. You play a note, then a one-finger tune and the first thing you know you're mentally moving the furniture in your living room to make room for a Conn organ.

But did you know that you can now play for real... the way professional musicians do... in just a matter of minutes?

With Conn's "Instant Music" method you play on both keyboards, with exciting effects and with foot pedals too! None of this pushbutton business

...no dreary scales or exercises... just sit yourself down and play organ music that sounds like organ music. It's worth the trip to your Conn showroom just to see for yourself. A free demonstration awaits you here.

Conn Organs are made by C. G. Conn, Ltd., world's largest manufacturer of hand instruments. There are seven beautifully-crafted models starting at $995. And with our easy payment plan it takes very little "scratch" to take care of that wonderful itch to make music on the Conn Organ.

30th Year

East-West Discord Remains Same As on Day of Recognition

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States recognized the Communist government of Russia 30 years ago this month. In the deal it got a deceptive set of paper promises which the Russians junked almost before the ink was dry.

The deal put the Kremlin and White House "on speaking terms," as Franklin D. Roosevelt once said, for the first time. But it did a lot more than that.

It helped to set the stage for a coalition of the anti-Nazi powers in World War II. It clearly defined for the first time the two faces of United States policy toward Russia. It spotlighted many of the issues that still trouble U. S.-Soviet relations to this day — trade, for example.

Misunderstanding

And it did all these things at a maximum cost of public misunderstanding.

One of the great lessons of the affair, in the opinion of professional diplomats, is that Roosevelt did the right thing in the wrong way.

The right thing, as the experts saw it at the time, was to establish diplomatic relations with Moscow. But the wrong thing was to try to exact a price which the experts knew the Russians would never pay.

Officials of the Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations have all made the same basic decision in turn. This is that agreements based on trust are no good with the Soviet Union. The agreements must be the late Secretary of State John Foster

Dulles used to say, self-enforcing.

After last fall's Cuban crisis, President Kennedy and Secretary of State Dean Rusk renewed their resolve that promises to pay had little place in U. S.-Soviet relations of the future.

Basic Mistake

Roosevelt's basic mistake was to act as if he expected the Stalinist administration in Russia to (1) settle up the old czarist debts to the United States, (2) put an end to Communist agitation in this country for the overthrow of the U. S. government and (3) to see that Americans working in the Soviet Union were protected against unreasonable spy charges and allowed to practice religious freedom.

It seems a debatable question whether Roosevelt actually thought that the Soviet government would fulfill the deal, which he made with foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov on Nov. 16, 1933, the day of recognition.

Experts with first-hand knowledge suggest that Roosevelt was essentially cynical in his attitude toward the promises he extracted.

Ambassador George F. Kennan in his 1960 book, "Russia and the West Under Lenin and Stalin," asserts that Roosevelt "was interested only in their momentary psychological effect on the American public, not in their effectiveness in practice."

False Basis

Former Ambassador Loy W. Henderson, now a professor of international relations at American University, was

My dear Mr. President:

I am very happy to inform you that the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is glad to establish normal diplomatic relations with the Government of the United States and to exchange ambassadors.

I, too, share the hope that the relations now established between our peoples may forever remain normal and friendly, and that our nations henceforth may cooperate for their mutual benefit and for the preservation of the peace of the world.

I am, my dear Mr. President, working in the eastern European office of the State Department in 1933. He had a hand in drafting some of the basic documents of the recognition deal and he, like Kennan, recalls the impression at the time that their main purpose was in domestic politics. But Henderson also recalls that Roosevelt thought the Russians might live up to the commitments.

"I think it's terribly important," Henderson said a few days ago, "not to act on a false basis in international affairs. If we establish relations with another country on a false basis it's going to cause trouble and more trouble in our relationship with that country."

William C. Bullitt was the first U. S. ambassador to the Soviet Union following recognition. He had been an assistant to Secretary of State Cordell Hull in that first New Deal year and a close adviser of Roosevelt's on Russian policy.

Bullitt recalled years later that Roosevelt knew the Soviets might very well break all their promises. However, he said the President also thought that if they did so the United States would have the option of breaking off relations — a step that actually was never seriously considered.

Cooperation

The recognition theory at the time outwardly displayed a hope for increasing cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

This same hope underlay Roosevelt's grand design for postwar planning in the early 1940s.

It fed his enthusiasm for the United Nations. It was the failure of this persistent dream of U. S.-Soviet cooperation which split the U. N. and led into the cold war.

Such developments could hardly have been foreseen in 1933. The beginnings of World War II were then half a decade away and the realignments of the postwar world in the emergence of the two great super-powers, the United States and Russia, were totally obscured in the darkness of a distant and stormy future.

What was apparent in 1933 was the record of the Soviets to date. But it was a record about which there was controversy in U. S. domestic policies.

It took American leaders years to figure out that the central, hard-core issue with which they had to deal was Russia's aggressiveness as a power. In 1933 the distinction was still unclear between power and politics. There was also a strong moral condemnation of the Soviet government, which had fostered the U. S. policy of non-recognition in the 1920s.

Yankee shrewdness also came into the definition of relations. One official of the times recalled recently that President Hoover laid down the doctrine that politics should not interfere with business. Thus there was trade between Russia and the United States for many years before there was recognition.

When Roosevelt came into office the country was preoccupied with the awful burdens of fears of the Depression, so that the problem of whether to recognize Russia was overshadowed by bread and butter issues.

However the Russian issue had been debated in the election campaign and Roosevelt, with strong liberal and left wing support, had promised to work for opening of diplomatic relations.

Trade Need

Secretary Hull records in his "Memoirs" published in 1948 that "Letters began gathering from my first day in office, requesting us to — or not to — recognize Soviet Russia."

The major pressures, however, came from the Soviet government itself. Soviet Dictator Josef Stalin was convinced that Japan was planning an attack on Russia's far eastern provinces. He believed that U. S. recognition would sharply discourage the ambitions of the war lords of Tokyo. A second consideration was the need for trade, which the

THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington,

My dear Mr. Litvinov:

I am very happy to inform you that as a result of our conversations the Government of the United States has decided to establish normal diplomatic relations with the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and to exchange ambassadors.

I trust that the relations now established between our peoples may forever remain normal and friendly, and that our nations henceforth may cooperate for their mutual benefit and for the preservation of the peace of the world.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

Mr. Maxim M. Litvinov,

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Litvinov, which the Soviet government had refused to pay.

Settle Debt

The U. S. was willing to settle the czarist debts for about 25 cents on the dollar, perhaps less. Litvinov was willing to work out some kind of a formula provided that the United States would first grant extensive credit — in other words, finance the Russian payment of the debt.

Litvinov and Stalin were also worried about the fact that if they paid the United States they would get bills from many other nations with claims dating from before the 1917 revolution.

To this day Russia and the United States have never succeeded in resolving the debt problem.

On other issues involved in the negotiations on recognition the ultimate solution was in most cases simply to drop the matter or protest from time to time without any hope of remedy.

Internal Affairs

For example Russia had pledged in one of the Roosevelt-Litvinov documents not to interfere in United States internal affairs by plotting and working for the overthrow of the American government from inside this country. Two years later, in 1935, Moscow played host to the All-World Congress of the Communist International. This was attended by American Communist party leaders who participated in discussion of plans for Communist activities in this country.

Hull protested that the activity in Moscow was a flagrant violation of the noninterference pledge. The Soviet government replied that it should have been obvious to everyone that the Soviet government could not be responsible for the activities of political parties.

Thus the United States came up against the duality of Soviet practice — the government disavowing itself from any diplomatic responsibility for one of the most powerful arms of its own foreign policy. The western nations have never yet developed so effective or so elusive an instrument for serving their own purposes.

United States motives in opening diplomatic relations with Russia apparently began with Roosevelt's feeling, expressed to Hull, that "two great nations like America and Russia should be on speaking terms."

There were at least two immediate and practical considerations. One was Roosevelt's discernment, at least in dim outline, of a combination of aggressive powers which would challenge the status quo in a few years and probably wreck the peace of the world.

Dangerous Period

Hull quoted himself as telling Roosevelt at that time: "The world is moving into a dangerous period both in Europe and in Asia. Russia could be a great help in stabilizing the situation as time goes on and peace becomes more and more threatened."

But if the United States was going to get help from Russia in promoting a coalition of the status quo powers — centered around Britain and France — it would be essential to have relations with the Soviet Union.

The other major motivation was a quest for trade and the increase in jobs that would go with it.

One diplomat with a first hand knowledge of events of those times said that AMTORG, the Russian trading organization with headquarters in New York had spread word of a prospective $100 million worth of orders in the machine tool industry alone. This business never developed because the formula for settling the old czarist debts and financing Russian purchases in the United States could never be solved.

Central Question

Beyond these two down-to-earth pressures for establishment of full friendly relations stood the central question of what Russia's purposes in the world were and what she was after, as seen from Washington.

Hull put one face on U. S. foreign policy in this respect because he took the line that it only the men in the Kremlin could be reassured the Soviets would come out of their walled fortresses, their dark forests and their vast steppes to join advanced and enlightened nations in building a new world civilization.

Hull's fundamental belief about Russia seemed to be wrapped up in this sentence from his Memoirs: "Long isolated in her northern snows, she did not have the knack of

Young Russians Want Western Way of Life

BY ANTHONY WHITE

MOSCOW (AP)—The blonde in the beehive hairdo and the yellow dress wiggled across Gorki Street, almost stopping traffic. She looked like a million rubles.

In the restaurant of the Moskva Hotel a dance band pumped out a cool western style tune and couples shuffled around cheek-to-cheek.

Down the street in the big display windows of the GUM department store a dummy model with silver hair, the sultry look and arched back of a Dior mannequin sported a new line in teen-age girls' frolics.

It could have been Paris, London or New York. But it wasn't. It was Moscow.

For Moscow is going west. And it is the young people—the girls in beehives and short skirts, young men in pop singer hairstyles and tight blue jeans—who are taking it there.

Soviet leaders, apparently sensing a growing hunger among the young for new and better things, are taking the hint—giving them more of the things they want.

Every day, about their own streets, Muscovites can plainly see themselves that their country lags behind the west in consumer goods. They see it in the things western visitors have—their clothes are better, have more style, more variety, more color. Westerners have more of the world's things that make life richer and easier.

But the Russians are confident that some day, maybe soon, they will have all of this in plenty.

one should wait four years for a new refrigerator."

Then she brightened, and added:

"There was a time when you couldn't buy a refrigerator."

It's the same with autos. Russian cars look mostly alike and cost plenty—two or three times the price of an equivalent model in the west. And you may have to wait five years or more before delivery.

Westerners in Moscow are fond of saying:

"The American or European car is one of the finest pieces of western advertising you could want."

Admiring Looks

Any foreign auto gets admiring looks from Russians, especially the young, because it is different and stylish, and looks better than the local product. Park your car in any street and within minutes a small crowd of admiring Russians gather around, wanting to look in the trunk, at the engine, or even to try the seats.

The Russians want such things. They want cars and refrigerators and washing machines and nice clothes—like any other people want them.

"It will be a good thing when they do get them," one Moscow-seasoned west European diplomat said. "It'll be a safer world when Russians can get a new car every two or three years, buy a refrigerator when they want one and don't have to queue for a pair of nylons."

It is the young people, teenagers and young married, who are going to call the tune in the future, he said.

Brighter Streets

New neon signs brighten the once dark streets. They may be mostly political slogans, but still they manage to give a touch of Times Square or Piccadilly Circus. Cautiously, new cocktail bars appear in once somber hotels, now gay with colored lights and streamers. Teen-agers crowd into them.

Clothes-conscious young Russians stop and stare in admiration at an American or English girl—at her fashionable shoes, her tweed skirt or gay blouse or sloppy sweater.

Russians believe Khrushchev when he says that eventually the Soviet Union will overtake the west.

But they still ask questions.

Why the Wait?

A young woman said: "My mother wants a new refrigerator. But she has been told she must wait four years for it. I do not understand why

BY LARRY C. OSIUS

WASHINGTON (AP)—About a year from now a small army of political analysts will unflinchingly set about explaining how and why the 1964 elections were won and lost.

And a great deal of it undoubtedly will concern how well John M. Bailey and William E. Miller are doing their jobs today. Bailey, 58, is chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Miller, 49, is chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Both believe party organization is the key to victory. Here is the way they put it: Bailey—"Policy and issues are raised in the White House. Our job is organization—making sure that everyone is eligible to vote."

Miller—"We are not a policy making committee; fundamentally are a service organization. We have to build up a grass roots precinct organization so that the nomination is worth something to whoever gets it."

Bailey believes Democrats have to work extra hard because, he said, many prospective voters are in harder-to-reach low income, ethnic and racial groups.

"Also," he said, "many of our voters are in a fluid situation, moving from state to state. In California we have to register 400,000 to 500,000 every two years just to stay even."

Non-Voters

Republican Miller says: "In 1960 we lost by 100,000 votes. There were 36 million people who didn't register and vote, and we feel that a majority of them were Republicans."

Miller has another reason for preaching organization. "We made an in-depth study of the 1960 election and found that Nixon carried more districts and more counties than Kennedy," he said. "He lost the election in places like Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit and Boston."

"From Maryland to Maine there were some 50,000 precincts. We found that about 5,000 of them—all in the big cities—were not manned by a single Republican official."

"We found that we didn't get clobbered because of Republican ideology. . . . It was more a lack of muscle. We are working now to see that every precinct is manned by a Republican leader, that in every ward there's a Republican committeeman."

Bailey, quite aware of Republican efforts to beef up their big city organizations, said it won't do the GOP much good.

"The Republicans can't expect to do any better in urban areas as long as Republican congressmen are here in Washington voting against the things that urban areas want, such as housing, manpower retraining and mass transit bills," he said.

Different Technique

The chairman's techniques are somewhat different.

Miller, who also represents a western New York district in Congress, must spend more time in Washington. He leaves much of the work of strengthening party organization to committee staff members. And as both Congressman and chairman of the party out of power he speaks out more frequently on what he believes will be the issues in 1964.

Bailey on the other hand is on the road frequently, but seldom makes major speeches. He doesn't limit himself to the state or regional Democratic conclaves.

"I make it my business to go off the beaten track," said Bailey, who still doubles as Connecticut state Democratic chairman. "For one thing you get far better press coverage in the local area. For another, it lets the local party workers know you think enough of them to go down and see them. It also lets them know you're looking over their shoulders."

Bailey and Miller see pretty much the same outline of 1964 election strategy but from naturally different viewpoints.

Bailey: "Our tactics, as opposed to our position in 1960, are that we have a completely affirmative record. They (the GOP) will do all the sniping, which is the part of the party out of power."

Miller: "It's the responsibility of the minority party to go on the attack, to point out the failures and deficiencies of this administration. If we don't do this, we don't deserve to win."

Party Assets

Asked about Republican assets going into the campaign, Miller quickly roiled off half a dozen among them.

"Our structural strength is better, we don't have as many unmanned precincts."

"There are Republican governors in key states, such as Pennsylvania and Michigan, that we didn't have in 1960."

"We have made a tremendous start on a two-party system in the South. We won't have to wake up on election day as we did in the past, conceding seven or eight states."

"We can be on the attack this time."

"There is more fight, more interest in the Republican party this year. There was little real enthusiasm in 1960 when we had our candidate from the start."

Miller expanded on the last reason, saying "Republicans suffer from under-projection."

That, he said, is why he favors primary election campaigns between Republican presidential hopefuls—"the more the merrier. They can be destructive, but I'm presuming the aspirants will conduct themselves as Republicans."

Just JFK

Bailey referred to no list of assets. He simply said:

"The strongest thing we have going for us is John F. Kennedy and the record he has made in office. The issue in 1964 will be his conduct in office."

He added: "Granted, we weren't able to do everything (in Kennedy's first term), but the problem is that 80 to 90 per cent of the Republicans voted against it. We at least have a program. All they can do is chant no, no, no."

Miller sees it differently. "If this Democratic party is a national party, it can pass anything it wants. . . . We just are not going to let them blame us for any non-performance. The fact is that they are not a national party."

Bailey and Miller do agree on one other item. Asked how much money they think the 1964 presidential election campaign will cost, each said a minimum of $10 million—and probably more.

Californians Plan Moscow Revolution

BY REINHOLD ENSZ

MOSCOW (AP)—Two men from California are hoping to create a revolution in Moscow, a dry-cleaning revolution.

They are even delving into such controversial details as buttons. Should buttons be cut off before clothing is cleaned? The Russians doggedly insisted that this should be done, but the Americans have convinced them to give nonremoval a trial.

The button issue was one of many which the Californians—C. D. Baxtresser of Santa Ana and Fred Huber of La Crescenta—have been struggling with since they began installing a self-service dry-cleaning unit. It is the first such unit in the Soviet Union and it has 12 machines of U. S. manufacture, modified to accept Soviet coins.

On Display

The grand opening is scheduled for next Friday. But since coin-operated dry-cleaning machines are a novelty here, the whole thing is an official exhibition for two weeks before going into actual service. During the exhibition period, technicians from all over the Soviet Union are being brought to Moscow to inspect the made-in-America wonders.

Since World War II, Russians have become more conscious of the need for dry-cleaning, and they are expanding the facilities. Service is slow and the quality of the work is often poor. Because of this, American embassy personnel send their clothes to Helsinki, Finland, for cleaning. Baxtresser's shop will include a conventional dry-cleaning plant besides the self-service machines. He suggested that the girls behind the counter use only one receipt for each bundle of dry-cleaning, rather than making out a large and separate receipt for every item.

Pay in Advance

"They resisted," he reports, "but I finally won. They will make out only one slip per customer. I did lose the argument about money. I told them that in America we collect money only after the garment has been properly dry-cleaned. They refused to listen to this. They insist that the money be paid in advance."

In regular Soviet dry-cleaning shops, the charge for a suit is generally around two rubles. The average Soviet monthly wage for an industrial worker is about 80-90 rubles a month. The ruble is officially worth $111.

The charge at Baxtresser's self-service unit will be two rubles for a three kilogram load (6.6 pounds). That means two or maybe three suits.

Baxtresser and Huber are erecting the plant for a Los Angeles company called Romaine Fielding and Associates. Last year, Fielding sold the Russians 28 self-service laundry machines, now a satisfactory success.

Other Services

He expects the same thing to happen to the dry-cleaning unit, which incidentally, will also include 24 self-service laundry machines, plus dryers. There will even be two electric hair dryers, plus a sink for anybody who wants to do a bit of hair washing while waiting for the family laundry and dry cleaning.

The problem of waiting customers also brought on an argument. Soviet authorities wanted to install hard wooden benches. The Americans insisted on comfortable chairs. And chairs it will be.

The place will even be adorned by a big neon sign—80 feet by 4 feet—which proclaims "Self Service Laundry" and "Self Service Dry Cleaning"—in Russian, of course.

The sign was made in Los Angeles.

Test Ban Doesn't Lessen Science's Fallout Probe

Atmosphere Still Filled With Radioactive Debris From Earlier Explosions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deceivable, release of radioactive debris still filling the atmosphere, the treaty barring all but materials might occur from underground nuclear weapons derground weapons tests still alerts. American government scientists still see a need for keeping tabs on radioactive fallout. For one thing, they want to be alert in the event of a break in the treaty.

Neither do they foresee any letdown in the intensive research aimed at getting a better understanding of fallout and nuclear power plants, and in the its possible — though still unproven — effects on the health of people now living or generations yet unborn.

Of primary interest is the fallout debris still lurking in the stratosphere, or long since fallen to earth, from past tests dating back nearly 20 years. The fallout still aloft will continue to come down for about another decade, although the peak is believed to have passed just recently.

More Vigilance

Vigilance is to be maintained for various reasons, including the possibilities that: —Signers of the U.S.-British-Soviet test-ban treaty might break it. —France, a non-signer, might conduct enough tests to add significant quantities of fallout to the debris still aloft from past tests of all nations. —Other nations, notably Red China, might develop nuclear weapons and start testing them. —Unforeseen, but still conceivable, how much fallout will get into the food chain and how much is far—at least in so far as degree getting in, or will get in, the of hazard is concerned — Dr. Paul Tompkins, executive director of the FRC, put it this way in testifying at the recent fall-out hearings of the joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

There is a need to develop practical and economic countermeasures for fallout — preferably short of actual condemnation of food contaminated with it — in case authorities ever should deem it necessary to order such countermeasures.

There is a need to develop radiation protection guides specifically for fallout, as distinguished from guides available now only for workers in the atomic energy industry. The Federal Radiation Council at the urging of Congress, has promised such fallout guides by June 1964.

Not Magic

But the council scientists stress that even when such guides are at hand, they will not constitute a magic line between radiation that is safe and radiation that is dangerous — any more than do the guides that are now available for industry. Rather, they would be designed as guidelines of exposure below which any risk to health might be deemed acceptable—and above which it would be deemed necessary to institute countermeasures even though those countermeasures might be very costly financially and possibly even pose health risks greater than those theoretically posed by fallout. That's why a lot of work is going on to develop safe and practical countermeasures.

As to the uncertainties about fallout? To date, there has been no proof of any mistap from fallout to anyone in the whole world, with the exception of about 230 natives of Rongelap Island in the Pacific who suffered bodily burns from large quantities of fallout accidentally swept over their island from a nuclear test explosion at Bikini.

Continued Efforts

While the world breathes easier under the prospect that at least American, Soviet and British nuclear test blasts no longer will inject radioactive poisons into the winds of the world, such activities as these are going on —

Public Health Service scientists, in cooperation with the AEC, will study children in Utah to see if there's any undue evidence of thyroid cancer which might be linked with unusually high concentrations of radioactive iodine which temporarily fell on parts of Utah during nuclear tests in Nevada more than a decade ago.

Scientists from the Food and Drug Administration go to supermarkets regularly to purchase on-the-shelf canned goods and other items. Back in their laboratories they test them for their content of radioactivity from the skies.

Radioactivity sleuths of the Public Health Service regularly analyze sample daily diets from the 20 boarding schools and orphanages throughout the country—even including the soft drinks.

In the tundra country of Alaska, other scientists measure the radioactive strontium and cesium in caribou and reindeer and in the Eskimos whose diet consists almost exclusively of the meat of these animals.

The Federal Radiation Council has concluded that the presupposed and anticipated levels of fallout from all past tests through 1962 do not constitute a disease, defect, or impairment that we can recognize, and can directly link to any undue health risk to people now living—or to future generations.

Priests Restricted Cathedral in Prague Unused For 14 Years

BY HANS BENEDICT

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP)—Under the pulpit in Prague's St. Vitus Cathedral, a lonely woman kneels in silent prayer.

A tourist guide, his voice echoing through the near empty nave, points out the 600-year-old Gothic splendor to a group of visiting Russians. One lights a cigarette in studied boredom.

An old priest shuffles about in the shadows.

The pulpit is closed by an iron grill with a rusty lock. It has been empty nearly 14 years. The last to preach from it was the Most Rev. Josef Beran, archbishop of Prague and Roman Catholic primate of Czechoslovakia.

Archbishop Arrested

Communists took over Czechoslovakia in 1948. On a Sunday in June 1949, Archbishop Beran preached from his pulpit that "there is but one ruler above us—God." He was arrested on the spot.

The regime released the 75-year-old archbishop last month. Officially a free man, he is still barred from resuming office. Defiant and in indomitable spirits, Archbishop Beran now awaits the outcome of negotiations between the regime and the Vatican. He lives in a Catholic old-age home in the nearby village of Mukarov. On Sundays he celebrates Mass on a tiny altar flanked by wooden statues of Holy Mary and St. Joseph and covered with coarse linen.

His way from the gilded magnificence of St. Vitus, through of 1,000 feet into the air in mod-police interrogation and solitary el payload rockets built by the confinement to the little house class.

in Mukarov symbolizes the course of Czechoslovakia's Catholic Church.

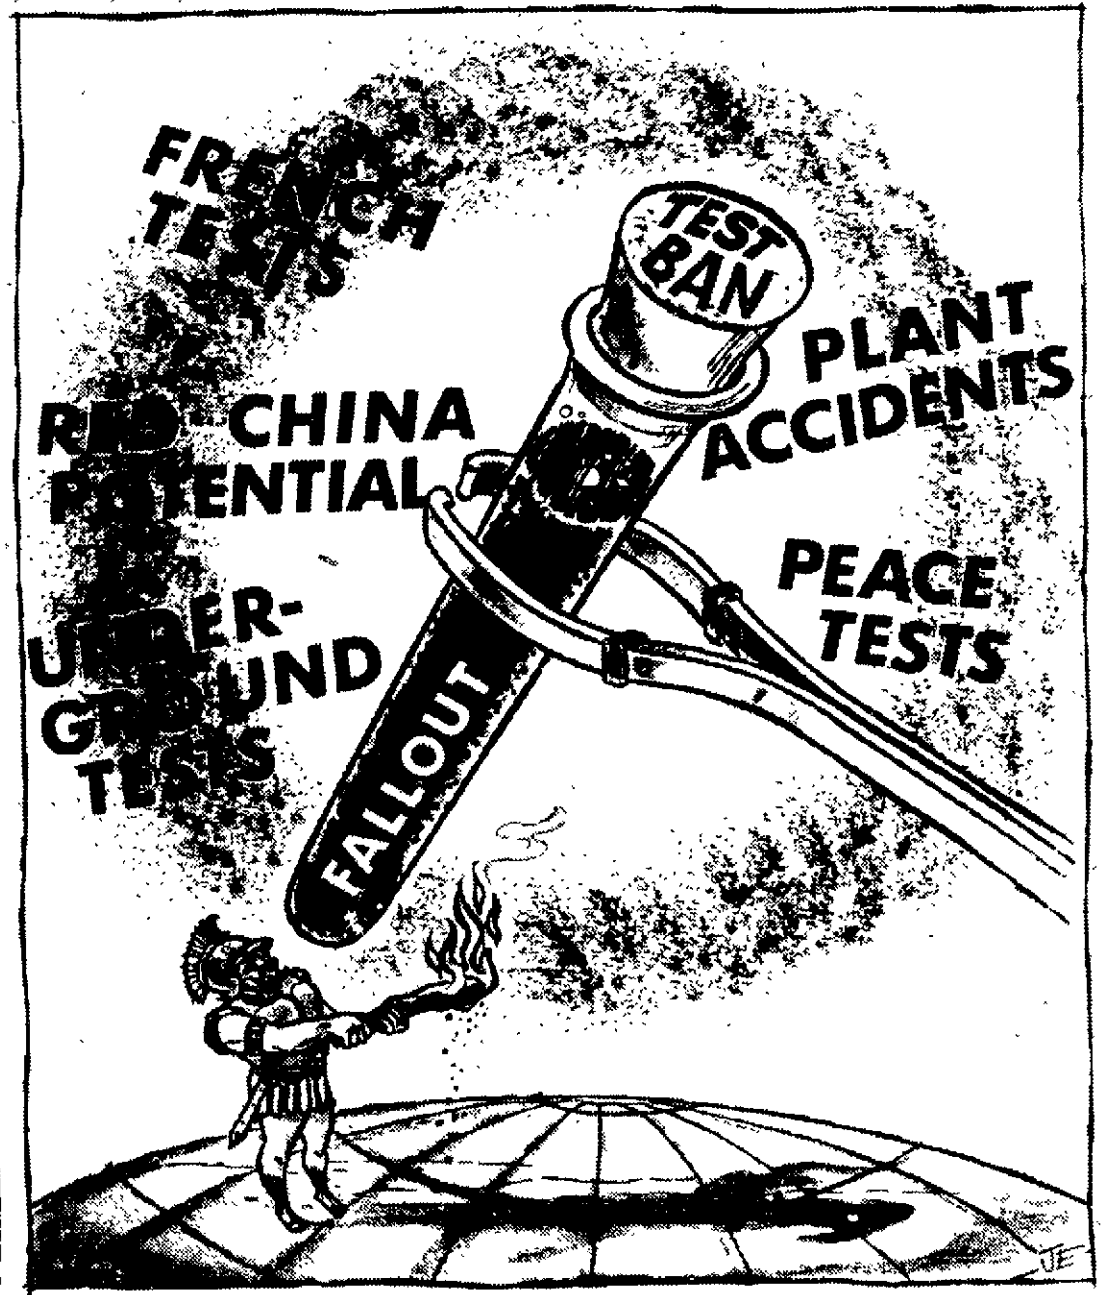

Places of worship throughout the country, save a few serving as cultural showpieces, are dilapidated. Many have been closed. The clergy, robbed of revenues since all church property was socialized, lacks funds for repairs. Parochial schools were shut down long ago.

Officially, parents are free to send their children to religious lessons but few do. "I would lose my job if I let my boy go to the priest," a Prague factory worker said.

Priests Restricted

Of the country's 7,000 Catholic priests before the Communist takeover, less than half are allowed to practice their vocation. The others are believed to be in jail or to have taken jobs in factories or collective farms.

The Protestants, concentrated mainly in Moravia and the western part of Czechoslovakia, are relatively better off than the Catholics. With the help of Protestant officials holding influential positions in the economy, they managed to work out a kind of truce with the regime on a live-and-let-live basis.

Secret Partisan Caucuses Change Face of Public Legislation Work

Private Convenience of Parties Cuts Into Open Door Lawmaking

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — The proud old man stared at the Wisconsin assembly during a visit to its chamber this week, and then commented musingly:

"They don't read their bills any more."

He pointed to the neatly bound bill files on the desk of each member and noted that they seemed to show little wear.

"The caucus has replaced individual reading of bills," he said with a snort of disapproval.

The retired politician who had served many years in the law-making branch of the state government in an earlier era had accurately singled out one of the most important of the changes in legislative operations during the last two decades, although it has come about so gradually that only a handful of the members of the present legislature probably are aware that their operations are basically different from those of most of their predecessors.

The party caucus, in both parties, has an importance in the day to day process of making the laws of Wisconsin it never had before. Not only has it reduced the tedium of his job for the ordinary member, who is no longer required to read measures and their amendments before he is called upon to vote on them, but it has changed the face of the legislature that is presented to the public as it is represented in the galleries, and in the press.

Locked Privacy

The daily calendar caucus has been securely grafted into the operating procedures, without the benefit of formal rules. Democrats and Republicans nearly every day will quit their public chambers, and adjourn to caucus rooms, securely locked against non-legislators, and thresh out the details and the merits of bills and resolutions in comfortable privacy. Virtually every bill of any consequence is thus reviewed off the floor, so that the individual member who does not have a taste for private reflection and reading is no longer compelled to spend any of his time upon such work.

The procedure suits the convenience of both parties, and so there has been comparatively little public discussion of the adaptation of the system, and no public controversy about it. Under a gentleman's agreement, in fact, when the Democratic minority wants to hold a caucus in mid-session on any day, the Republican floorleader who controls a majority of the votes automatically grants the courtesy.

Similarly, the Democratic minorities, however combative they may be on other occasions, grant the Republicans the right to quit in the middle of a calendar on nearly every day of the session without a word of objection.

Few Visitors

The caucus rule of consideration of bills has changed the public appearance of the legislature considerably. It may account, at least in part, for the fact that the galleries in both houses today rarely show more than a handful of public visitors and that the occasional groups of students and others remain only briefly.

The caucus review of most issues has cut down debate on the floor, or transformed it into a patently unreal and routine thing. The state senator or assemblyman, except on rare occasions such as a minor local bill concerning himself alone, knows that debate will be largely useless. He knows that the caucuses have already made their decisions, and that there is very little that any speech from him can do to change them.

The speech on the floor, accordingly, has become for the most part a publicity weapon for the partisans on one side of the political aisle or the other, or a personal publicity tool for individual law-makers who may want to attract favorable attention of their homefolks or of some important and electorally influential pressure group.

Not a Word

In the state senate this week members voted on half a dozen votes submitted by Gov. Reynolds, with not a word spoken in explanation or defense of their positions.

It would have been impossible for any visitor, or any person listening in the galleries who had a personal interest in the bills thus enacted or rejected, to know why the vote line-up came as it did. There was not a hint of explanation from any one of the 33 members.

The complete reliance upon caucus deliberation is a vast change from earlier times. A quarter of a century ago the party caucus was an infrequent thing. Normally it was a conference of the lawmakers of the majority party with the governor representing that party, as during the regime of former Gov. Philip LaFollette, leader of the ruling Progressive party in the 1930s.

Party Leader

When the Republicans unhorsed the Progressives late in that decade, there were joint caucuses of the Republicans, as the majority party, at weekly intervals which also were attended by such men as Thomas E. Coleman, the chairman of the Republican state committee, and the governor and other leaders of the executive branch of the Republican state administration.

Gradually the caucus as a deliberative and planning device grew in popularity. Soon the minority parties were

Partisan Views

It occurred to the party chiefs that it was possible to apply disciplinary pressure upon party members in the privacy of a caucus, when it would have been more difficult or inadvisable in a public proceeding with the public and the press in attendance. It struck them that it was more feasible to speak of the partisan interests and advantages involved in some of the major legislation, behind locked doors than on the closely watched public floors of the chambers.

Sometimes the party caucuses are opened to outsiders, but on a highly selective basis. During the tax compromise negotiations earlier this year, lobbyists for various interests as well as state officials and outside experts were invited to discuss details and merits of various tax measures, which were not given public hearings so that the people—the taxpayers — directly involved could listen and observe. Thus to a degree the caucus upon occasion has been transformed into a substitute, by the tacit consent of the parties, for the public hearings which are ostensibly required under the rules in the Wisconsin legislature. Thus also is public information probably less extensive and less reliable than it might be, and it used to be Press representatives have no way to as certain the proceedings in the privacy of the caucuses, except by "leaking" at the time by Eileen Marquardt, Rosa will of the participants. And in Ann Ruh, Debbie Cornelius, such "leaks" the reporter on the Maribeth Cornelius, Anna Marie scene has no ready means of Kriesel, Debbie Hoffman, Kathy Taufferer and David Taufferer.

Veterans Day Program Planned in Tigerton

TIGERTON — A Veterans Day program is scheduled at the Tigerton High School gymnasium from 10 to 11 a. m. Monday.

The program will include patriotic selections by the band and chorus, an explanation of Veterans Day by Thomas Paterson, a play by Charles Harvey and Burton privacy of the caucuses, except Anderson, and a twirling exhibit as they may be "leaked" at the time by Eileen Marquardt, Rosa will of the participants.
